Islanders to play in Brooklyn

BY DAN MACLEOD

The Islanders are coming to Brooklyn!

Well, for one game, anyway.

Shortly after BrooklynDaily.com reported that Borough President Markowitz wants to put the Barclays Center on ice — and claimed that hockey will indeed be coming to the soon-to-be-opened $1 billion arena — the arena's management announced that

MEET THE 'Q CRIER'

'Coffee the Train Man' makes sure commuters catch the subway

BY ELI ROSENBERG

The MTA is spending hundreds of millions installing countdown clocks at subway stations, but one Ditmas Park entrepreneur provides the same service for just a cup of coffee, a half-smoked cigarette, a few bucks, or nothing at all.

Coffee the Train Man, as he is known around the Cortelyou Road Q train station, makes his living as the human version of Penn Station's big board, notifying hustling commuters of when the next train is departing.

"Let's go down there, let's go!" Coffee yells from the sidewalk above the outdoor station, letting straphangers know when he sees the light of an approaching train on the tracks below. "Manhattan Q train coming!"

Commuters pick up their pace — many break into a full sprint — when they hear Coffee hollering.

Unless, of course, he's letting them know they still have a couple of minutes to relax — maybe enough time to get him a cup of coffee.

Many subway riders stop to greet Coffee before they enter the station, where he holds court every day from 4:30 am to 8:30 am.

"It's very nice and helpful — especially for my mother," said Isabelle Lafosse on her way to work. "He lets you know how much time you have — in case you have anything you need to do before going into the station."

Coffee says the free cigarettes and the 14 cups of coffee he drinks on the job are its main perks.

There's also the salary. "People give the tips — I never ask," said Coffee, who lives at the Park Slope YMCA. "I really hope everybody makes the train."

The tips, which can add up to more than $100 over a 10-and-a-half hour day, including jaunts at two Manhattan subway stations, are his main source of income.

Coffee became the train man after struggling with drug addiction four years ago.

That's when some women in the neighborhood offered him $200 if he promised to get his act together. He says he used the money to outfit himself with some warm gear and heavy boots and set about learning the train schedules.

Since then, Coffee has won fans at the Cortelyou Road station — which does not have an official MTA countdown clock — by doing his job as well, or better, than any electronic sign could.

Every morning, he goes to the Coney Island Q stop to check the schedules and adjust appropriately for any service delays.

"I'm the first one to know of any changes," he claimed, noting that he calls the MTA whenever anything is amiss to find out what's going on. "They know me by now. They say, 'Who is it,' and I say, 'It's Coffee!'"

Coffee certainly provides a service to straphangers, but it's unclear if he is in the good graces of the MTA.

An agency spokeswoman said the MTA prohibits panhandling inside stations and on trains — but Coffee swears he never begs and mainly stays on the sidewalk.

One thing is for sure: he enjoys his role in the hallowed Brooklyn ritual that is the daily commute.

"I like this job," said Coffee. "When the B was running local — it was really moving! It was beautiful."

Movin' out!

BY AARON SHORT

State Sen. Eric Adams might be forced to pack up his apartment and move thanks to new district lines drawn up by his political rivals in Albany.

Senate Republicans proposed new maps for legislative districts on Thursday afternoon that would cut the Prospect Heights Democrat out of his district and put his apartment inside territory controlled by Velmanette Montgomery (D-Fort Greene).

Senate Republicans proposed new maps for legislative districts that would cut Eric Adams out of his Prospect Heights district.

Adams has already vowed not to challenge Montgomery for the seat, claiming instead he will move a few blocks south into a new ostrich-shaped district that includes Crown Heights, Prospect Heights, Fourth and Fifth avenues, and Sunset Park.

"It's clear that there was an intention to disrupt the process for running for office," said Adams. "I'm not going to participate in this confusion. I'm sure people who move into my old apartment will enjoy their new senator."

The suggested alterations would send state Sen. Kevin Parker (D-Flatbush) into Greenwood Heights, Prospect Park and Park Slope, while Montgomery's district, which includes Red Hook, Carroll Gardens, Boerum Hill, Fort Greene, and Bedford Stuyvesant, would become more compact due to new population data.

"Some of this stuff is just like, huh?" said Montgomery spokesman Jim Vogel. "It's like the Marx brothers did redistricting and settled a few scores."

When the maps are made official, legislators who have been drawn out of their districts can choose to move to a new district by January 2013 or face off against whoever gained their territory.

Adams says he will find a new home if the redistricting becomes the law of the land — but he might send Republicans a bill for the moving costs.

"That would be a good thought," he said.

Adams isn't the only Brooklyn lawmaker whose district might change significantly.

State senators Marty Golden (R-Bay Ridge) and John Sampson (D-Canarsie) gobbled up the remnants of disgraced former State Sen. Carl Kruger's Marine Park base, in the proposed maps.

WIPED AWAY!

Senate republicans yank Kruger's district off the map

BY DANIEL BUSH

Senate Republicans eager to expand into southern Brooklyn want to make some drastic changes to the borough's district lines — and wipe disgraced state Sen. Carl Kruger's district off the map entirely.

State GOP leaders unveiled their proposal to redraw the borough's nine state senate districts on Thursday, but their new map doesn't include Kruger's old stomping grounds — a swath of real estate between Brighton Beach and Mill Basin.

The GOP wants to divvy up those neighborhoods between state Sen. Marty Golden (R-Bay Ridge) and state Sen. John Sampson (D-Canarsie), a move Councilman Lew Fidler (D-Marine Park) — who is vying to be Kruger's replacement — sees as nothing more than a self-serving power grab by senate Republican leaders.

"[The proposed lines] are disgustingly partisan in nature," Fidler said. "This is politics at its very worst."

The senate GOP's proposal allows Golden to scoop up thousands of additional voters in Manhattan Beach, Coney Island and Plumb Beach. It also creates a new "Jewish district" that will encompass Borough Park, Midwood and Homecrest — Orthodox neighborhoods that tend to vote Republican.

Kruger's 27th District, at least in name only, will be relocated to Lower Manhattan, according to the new senate map.

If the Governor approves the changes, the new lines would take effect in 2013.

Fidler and Brighton Beach attorney David Storobin, his Republican opponent, both vowed to continue campaigning, even though the district they're fighting over might disappear.

"The maps for the March 20th special election stand as is," said Fidler. "Whatever ultimately happens with the lines, I will be running for re-election to the state senate this November from a district that includes neighborhoods that currently dominate [Kruger's] District."

Yet Fidler would not comment on what his bold promise may lead to — a showdown

The city's current New York State Senate district map — which is hard to figure out since the powers that be didn't draw it on an actual map of New York City (some districts include waterways) — shows that Kruger's district (the 27th) spans from Brighton Beach to Mill Basin.

Source: New York State Senate

The state senate's new district lines were revealed on Thursday and state Sen. Carl Kruger's district has been moved — to Manhattan! Source latfor.com with either Golden, who got 65 percent of the vote against his 2010 democratic opponent, Mike DiSanto, or Sampson, a fellow Democrat.

Storobin spokesman David Simpson wouldn't comment on the GOP's apparent plan to pull the district out from under the vice chairman of the Kings County Republican County Committee — upending earlier claims that it expected to spend upwards of $500,000 on Storobin's campaign.

"The last thing David cares about is what's going on in Albany," Simpson said.

Fidler and Storobin wouldn't be the only ones affected by the GOP's borough-wide makeover. Senate Republicans also want to:

- Move Sampson's district, which encompasses East New York and Canarsie, further west into Bergen Beach and Mill Basin.
- Force state Sen. Kevin

Parker (D-Flatbush) into Greenwood Heights and Park Slope while removing the Borough Park and Midwood portions of his district.

Kruger (D-Brighton Beach) resigned last month after tearfully pleading guilty to accepting nearly $1 million in bribes.

Redistricting: What does it mean?

The topic of redistricting was all the rage this week as pundits, politicians and voters tried to make sense of the state's controversial new legislative maps. But how does the system work, and what's at stake? We break it down for you:

THE BREAKDOWN

• The U.S. Constitution requires New York State to redraw its congressional and state legislative districts every ten years to reflect population shifts outlined in the census. A task force made up of Republican and Democratic legislators draw up the new maps in a process — known as redistricting — that's supposed to provide communities with fair and equal representation.

• Critics argue that politicians use redistricting to protect incumbents by gerrymandering local districts in their favor, thus ensuring that the political parties in power in Albany hold onto their majorities in the state legislature for the next decade.

• In Brooklyn, the state senate's current proposal would change district lines from Park Slope to Canarsie, forcing residents to vote for different elected officials than the ones they've supported for years — and create an entirely new senate district stretching from Borough Park to Midwood that was designed to cater to the area's growing Orthodox Jewish community.

• Gov. Cuomo must approve the new lines before they're set in stone in time for the 2012 elections, but it doesn't look like he's going to. Cuomo has vowed to veto the plan for being too partisan — setting up a drawn-out battle for political control that will likely be settled in the courts.

Pint-sized entrepreneurs open biz

Business program hones elementary school children's enterprising skills and savvy

BY SHAVANA ABRUZZO

Savvy PS 329 students concluded their Empowering Young Entrepreneurs Program by holding a grand opening sale on Jan. 25 to showcase their new business skills, hawking decorated supplies, revamped bric-a-brac, and healthy munchies to raise a cool $1,200 for the Coney Island school — and impress Mom and Dad with their commercial wits.

“Bling” was the buzz word at the eye-popping stall run by second graders Jonathan Asante, David Mozeb, Alycia Byrd Richardson, Anaya Chandler and Lisa Lodge, where customers snapped up pencils decorated with glitter and sparkles. Nearby, 10-year-olds Kiajah Wiggins and Justin Richardson sported “I am a young entrepreneur” T-shirts and hustled healthy salads to teachers. And 7-year-old Diana Duchimaza was so inspired by a pretty bookmark she bought that she opened up a book right on the spot.

But the goods were far from just random objects.

“Students searched for a need within the school and created a business around that,” said Principal Sa-lema Marbury. “There was a lot of research and mathematics involved.”

Marbury formed the program three months ago to teach youngsters the ABCs of business, such as devising a business plan, creating a product, and then marketing and selling it, with democratically elected student chief executive officers leading the charge.

“It’s really important for children to have options when they grow up,” the principal added. “The American Dream is what our country is based on.”

Marbury picked her husband’s business brains for the project — he owns a barbershop in Coney Island and has worked with professional sports apparel lines — although she wants to recruit members of the local business community to assist and fund the program, moving forward.

The money from the sale will help to buy air conditioners for the school, but there’s no price to be placed on the thrill her students are getting out of starting their homespun ventures, the principal bragged.

“They are having the time of their lives!”

Lou speaks out: Bring casinos to Coney Island

Now, more than ever before, the seed of 27-7, 365-day-a-year Coney Island is again being planted in the area's fertile grounds, as talk is again sprouting up around bringing Casino hotel to the People's Playground.

Such a plan will bring long-needed employment to so many residents, long piled high in tall high-risers, with no nearby industries, other than the fun-factory amusement area, open just a few short months each year.

Indeed, Coney's assets — abundant residents — have also become its handicap because industry has few areas available to expand.

So many years ago, Channel 7 did a broadcast from a Boardwalk bench

SPEAK OUT

Lou Powsner

in mid-winter, interviewing two renowned Coney greats, Ida Israel and the late Al Sinrod, then president of Coney Board of Trade. When the interviewer asked "What does Coney Island need most of all?" Al replied "Three things: jobs, jobs, and jobs."

That testament remains true today.

Can you think of a better bargain for our new governor to strike? Isn't Coney a better area for a casino hotel development than an empty race track in less-accessible Queens? Aren't oceanfront hotels more desirable than those that view the airport?

The time to answer the call to redevelop our Coney Island is at its ripest while our state is in session. We now have the opportunity to catch up, neigh, surpass New Jersey, and bring development to god's great acres, the sunny sands along the sparkling Atlantic Ocean in our very own Coney Island.

We've got it all — every train connects to Coney with a single fare; three airports all less than an hour away, and our beloved Boardwalk, waiting to support so many happy feet and share its salty healthy breezes.

Come alive Albany and put your best foot forward, don't sell your best bet short.

All Americans need some soft sand beneath their toes, sprinkled with god-given sunshine. We're proud to launch the drive to put our best foot forward in Coney Island, where casino's must rise.

This is Lou Powsner.

"You will look sexy, and feel like a million dollars when you leave," she says. "We guarantee it."

The economy is tight, says Carlino, and she understands that people may be reluctant to try a new place, so this is one way to do so without risk. Hopefully, once you see the quality of the work, you'll become a regular customer.

Fulya's Beauty and Spa may be the new kid on the block, but it's not wet behind the ears. The hairdressers at Fulya's are all experienced professionals who love what they do, says Carlino. One stylist, Lida, has been doing hair for more than a decade, says Carlino.

"It's her passion," says Carlino. She worked in Manhattan but relocated to Brooklyn to be closer to home.

Home is important to Carlino, and the commitment to Bay Ridge is something she stresses. Her family moved here from Turkey when she was 2 years old, so her roots are in the borough, and this is where she plans to stay.

"We want to be the place where everybody knows your name," she says.

It's a bit like the old television show, "Cheers," but rather than sitting on an old bar stool, customers are invited to sit on a brand new salon chair, relax, and be pampered.

"Women just don't make time for themselves," says Carlino. As a mother of two young boys, she knows this firsthand, and plans to do something about it. She understands how difficult it can be to get a babysitter. "Bring in the kids and we'll

Women, men, and children are all welcome. A special room is provided for religious women, so they can be accommodated in privacy.

Services include massages, manicures, pedicures, waxing, and make-up application. The shop offers regular and gel manicures. The latter are fabulous time-savers for women who may not be able to come in for a manicure each week.

A wash and blow dry is $15, she says. Up-dos are reasonably priced, and there are special packages for brides and bridesmaids.

"Crystal is our make-up artist, and she is excellent," says Carlino.

The salon is a new business venture for Carlino, who worked in real estate before this. She says she changed careers because, "I'm a sociable person, I love chatting," and this type of business is more conducive to how she wants to spend her day. She gladly provides customers with Turkish coffee and cookies so they can talk to her and unwind from life's stresses, even if only for a short while.

"We strive to be the customer's home away from home," she says.

Islanders

the stickmen will play one game at the soon-to-open events center on Oct. 2.

The New York Islanders will take on the hated New Jersey Devils just days after the arena's scheduled grand opening that will feature multiple concerts by the rap mogul Jay-Z.

The Barclays Center announcement hinted of professional hockey in the area's future, even though just one game is scheduled so far for the Nassau County-based team.

"We feel Brooklyn is an untapped hockey market that offers the Islanders with an exciting opportunity to grow its fan base," Barclays Center CEO Brett Yormark said.

The news of the game was hinted at by Markowitz during an impromptu preview of his State of the Borough address on Saturday at the Bay Ridge Community Council's annual luncheon.

"It would be great to see some hockey at the arena," the uncharacteristically tight-lipped Beep told us before zipping out of the Bay Ridge Manor on 76th Street, claiming that any official announcements would be made at his State of the Borough address on Wednesday. "In Brooklyn, there should be an NHL team, no question."

The Islanders will take on the New Jersey Devils at the Barclays Center just days after the arena's scheduled opening.

AP / Kathy Kmonicek

Markowitz rattled off a number of other attractions coming to the Brooklyn Nets' new home in its first year, including monster truck races and concerts by stars the Beep "never dreamed would come to Brooklyn to perform" — though he didn't give any specifics.

He did say that Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus — which folded up its tents at a summer-time spot in Coney Island last year — will perform at the arena.

It's not the first time professional hockey at the Barclays Center has been mentioned.

Atlantic Yards developer Bruce Ratner said in September that he was "hoping" that the New York Islanders would move to the Barclays Center — the heart of the controversial Atlantic Yards Project — once the struggling team's lease at the Nassau Coliseum expires in 2015. His comments were a reversal of his longtime claim that the Prospect Heights arena would be too small to host pro hockey games.

Still, National Hockey League officials seem to be leaning toward keeping the Islanders to our east: earlier this week, National Hockey League Commissioner Gary Bettman said that he found it "hard to believe" a deal couldn't be hammered out to keep the Islanders at the Nassau Coliseum.

Bettman added that any municipality hoping to draw a National Hockey League team shouldn't get its hopes up. The league makes no promises about giving anyone a franchise, he explained.

"We don't like to move teams," Bettman told New York Newsday, a Long Island newspaper.

But such a move is possible. A deal with the National Hockey League requires the Islanders remain on Long Island, which, to the surprise of many, includes Brooklyn at its western tip — making the Barclays Center an attractive option if the Islanders do decide to abandon the Nassau Coliseum.

Hockey was originally intended as one use when architect Frank Gehry initially designed the arena, but plans for an ice rink were canceled after Gehry was fired two years ago to cut costs.

As currently designed, the 18,000-seat basketball arena could only fit 14,500 spectators when configured for pro hockey. That would make it the smallest arena in the National Hockey League, but big enough to accommodate the Islanders anemic attendance in Nassau County, which averaged just 11,000 fans per game during its 2010-2011 season.

But hockey wasn't the only thing on Markowitz's mind on Saturday. He also trumpeted his desire to bring casino gambling to Coney Island — an idea this paper reported two weeks ago.

CONEY ISLAND-BRIGHTON BEACH-SEAGATE

Brighton Beach hold up

Two thugs jumped a man on Brighton Beach Avenue on Jan. 29, taking an iPhone, according to cops.

Police say the suspects attacked their victim near Brighton 11th Street at 4:50 am. One of the goons stuffed his hand in his pocket — as if he had a gun — while the other beat his victim until he handed over his smartphone, cash and jewelry.

But they didn't get far: cops say they arrested a suspect a short time later, charging him with robbery.

Wigging out on Cropsey

Cops arrested a 34-year-old man who they said went crazy inside a Cropsey Avenue home on Jan. 29, where he attacked an older woman.

Police said that the suspect punched the woman in the face — and bit her finger — during a frenzied argument inside the apartment between Hart Place and Neptune Avenue at 12:25 am.

Cops were called to the scene, where they charged the suspect with assault.

61ST PRECINCT

SHEEPSHEAD BAY-GRAVESEND-MANHATTAN BEACH-HOMECREST

Slashed on Avenue V

Cops arrested a 22-year-old who they say beat and slashed a teenager for his iPhone on Avenue V on Jan. 25.

The victim said he was between Batchelder Street and Nostrand Avenue at 2:15 am when the suspect attacked, slashing him in the back and head during the fisticuffs. The goon grabbed the victim's iPhone, but didn't get far: cops arrested a suspect a short time later, charging him with robbery in the first degree.

Car-cracker busted

Police arrested a 21-year-old who they say was caught breaking into cars on E. Fourth Street.

Witnesses called police after seeing the thief force his way into a Hyundai Sonata between Avenues X and Y at 4 pm, taking a black bag, a white laptop and several cellphones.

Air conditioner kicker

A would-be thief scaled the fire escape on an Avenue Z building on Jan. 29 in an attempt to break into an apartment by kicking in an air conditioner sticking out of a window, but was arrested by cops.

Witnesses said they saw the thief scaling the building between E. 12th and E. 13th streets at 2:40 pm and called authorities — who apprehended him before he could get inside.

Sticking it to 'em

Cops arrested a 14-year-old who they say was wanted for a Dec. 15 robbery on Avenue V — while armed with a stick!

The victim told police he was nearing E. 21st Street at 5:30 pm when the suspect and another teen jumped him, whipping him with the stick as he robbed him of his cellphone.

The thief ran off, but was apprehended this week, and charged with robbery.

68TH PRECINCT

BAY RIDGE-DYKER HEIGHTS

Wooden wallop

A pair of goons robbed a man on 68th Street while threatening him with a two-by-four on Jan 27.

The victim told cops that he was near Fourth Avenue at 2:30 pm when the duo came behind him and demanded his cash.

"Run your pockets, what you got?" one said.

That's when one thug brandish the two-foot-long piece of lumber, while the other swiped the victim's wallet, cops said.

But the duo didn't get much for its troubles: the victim only had $2 on him.

Not playing

Two thugs beat up a teen for his handheld video game on Ovington Avenue on Jan. 29.

The victim told cops that he was near 12th Avenue at 1 pm when the pair came up from behind him and punched and kicked him until he was on the ground, then robbed him of his Sony PlayStation Portable.

House bandits

Thieves swiped nearly $2,000 in electronics from a 72nd Street house on Jan 26 while its owner was away.

The victim told cops that she left her home between Fourth and Fifth avenues at 2 pm. When she returned to her house at 7 pm the next day, she found her MacBook and video camera missing.

Jeweled!

Thieves scored when they ripped off a $30,000 ring from an 81st Street house on Jan 26.

The victim told cops that he left his house between 11th and 12th avenues at 9:45 am. When he returned at 10 pm, he found the house ransacked and the platinum and diamond ring missing.

62ND PRECINCT

BENSONHURST-BATH BEACH

Slash and run

A violent thug attacked a man with a knife and swiped his cellphone on the D train on Jan 31.

The victim told cops that he boarded the train near at 86th Street and Bay Parkway at 1:27 am. When the jerk demanded the victim's cellphone, the victim refused, so the thug slashed his leg and grabbed his phone, making his escape at the next station.

What a dummy

Hustlers conned a man into giving up more than $2,000 and a cache of electronics in return for a share in their phoney lottery haul on 21st Avenue on Jan. 26.

The victim told cops that two men approached him at 11:30 am near 86th Street, asking for directions. They told him that they had won the lottery and would share it, but only if he gave them cash.

The bone-headed victim obliged, handing over $1,050, then took them to his house, where he gave them another $1,000, a MacBook and an iPhone.

The grifters handed over his share: a sock full of wadded up newspaper.

Airheads!

At least three cars were jacked for their air bags or navigation systems in Bensonhurst on Jan 29.

•Punks busted into a Nissan Maxima parked on 81st Street.

The victim told cops that he parked his car between 20th and 21st avenues at 9:50 am. When he returned at 10:35 am, he found his rear passenger-side window busted, and his air bag gone.

•Airheads swiped a navigation device and air bag from a car parked on 76th Street.

The victim told cops that she left her car parked near Bay Parkway at 3:15 pm. When she returned at 3:25 pm, she found her electronics and safety device missing.

•Lost perps swiped a navigation system from a car parked on 20th Avenue overnight.

The victim told cops that he left his car parked between 86th Street and Benson Avenue at 10 pm. When he returned at 7 am the next day, he found his rear passenger window smashed and his navigation system missing.

Hipster wigs out in court, fined $100

A self-professed hipster and Occupy Wall Street protestor erupted in Brooklyn Criminal Court on Jan. 30, calling the court, and the judge, "obscene" — words that ultimately cost him $100.

Judge Charles Troia had the court officers handcuff hipster Cosmo Bjorkenhiem after he wigged out in the galley while waiting for four of his friends, described as Occupy Wall Street protestors, to be arraigned for trashing a home in Williamburg.

The New York Post reported that Bjorkenhiem sat impatiently. As the day drew on, Bjorkenhiem couldn't stand the fact that his friends hadn't been called up yet, and decided to say something about it.

"This court is obscene!" he screamed in the courtroom — surprising everyone sitting there — before storming out into the hallway.

"This is contempt and I won't allow it," Troia screamed back as he ordered court officers to run after Bjorkenhiem and cuff him.

After a brief struggle, Bjorkenhiem was dragged back into court, where Troia offered him the opportunity to address the court.

Bjorkenhiem would not address the judge, and instead apologized through his attorney, John Gutman.

"I guess it was the stress of the moment," Gutman said, adding that Bjorkenhiem apologized "most strenuously" for his "intemperate remark."

Troia replied that he had more than 300 defendants awaiting arraignment and that the disruption further delayed their appearances.

"We're not here for any political purpose," the judge intoned.

He found that Bjorkenhiem had committed contempt and fined the doofus $100 for attempting to "destroy and undermine the dignity and authority of this court."

Informant gets 10 years

A former Bonnano crime family capo who ratted out half of his "family" was sentenced to 10 years on Jan. 30.

Dominick Cicale may have been able to skirt the maximum sentence by turning on his associates, but he couldn't be set free for assisting in three murders, a Brooklyn federal judge determined.

But a deal's a deal: since Cicale had already served seven years in prison, he only has to serve three more before being given a new identity, courtesy of the FBI, Judge Nicholas Garaufis said on Monday, noting what he called the "Faustian bargain" the mobster had struck with investigators.

"Alright, Mr. Cicale — this is your chance. I hope you will live a law-abiding and productive life," Garaufis said, claiming that Cicale's participation in the slaying showed that his capacity for "viciousness and violence that were exceptional — even by organized crime standards."

"Mr. Cicale is a true career criminal," Garaufis said.

Cicale, 44, was a close friend of Bonanno boss Vinny "Gorgeous" Basciano, but he decided to betray his longtime pal and testify at his murder trial. Cicale's testimony helped the US Attorney convict Basciano of murder.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Nicole Argentieri told the Daily News, a Manhattan newspaper, that Cicale provided a wealth of vital intelligence that helped convict a long list of ruthless mobsters.

Twelve happy hours, one great bar

Bay Ridge restaurant is the champ of cheap booze, offering half-day drinking specials

BY DAN MACLEOD

It's official: the Greenhouse Cafe is the happiest bar in Brooklyn.

For the past two years, the Third Avenue watering hole has boasted having "the longest happy hour," with hooch and food specials for a whopping 12 hours Mondays through Thursdays.

But no one seems to know about it — there were only two patrons at the bar when we stopped by last Wednesday.

"It's the best kept secret in Bay Ridge," said owner Bobby Daquera, whose half-day sip-fests make it possible for tipplers to slug back two dozen pints of Brooklyn Lager for less than the cost of an unlimited MetroCard — while spending more than an entire work day getting soused at the taproom between 77th and 78th streets. At least in theory.

"No one has survived the full happy hour!" said Daquera, whose sudsy deal lasts from noon until midnight weekdays, and from noon to 7 pm on Fridays, when draft and bottled beers, bottom shelf liquor, and house wines sell for $4.

There's also enough cheap food to sop up the rotgut: patrons can line their tummies with $4 platters of calamari, nachos and marinated steak on garlic toast, with change to spare.

"My wife likes it because I still have money in my pocket when I come home!" said a barfly who identified himself only as "John" — sheepishly admitting that he didn't want his wife to know where he spent his afternoons (she may want to join him).

Other watering holes around town with lengthy happy hours promptly shelved their bragging

rights after learning about the Greenhouse Cafe's marathon pour: The Mark Bar in Greenpoint was close with six hours of drink specials from Monday to Friday, and eight hours on weekends, while ex-reigning champ the Soda Bar — a Prospect Heights dive which offers watered-down prices for seven hours straight — drowned its sorrows with a gracious shot of defeat.

"They beat us!" said astonished Soda Bar worker Flora Rocco. "That's crazy. Twelve hours?"

The term "happy hour" has been around since 1959 when the Saturday Evening Post first mentioned the phenomenon in an article about military life, but some would say that drink deals that last more than a half a day should not be considered a "happy hour."

Yet Daquera defended his specials, claiming — despite the turnout we saw on Wednesday — his happy hour is doing exactly what it's supposed to: drumming up business.

"These deals are designed to bring in people during slower times," he said.

Mezuzah thief hits Coney

BY DANIEL BUSH

A mezuzah-mad thief who swiped miniature religious blessings from seven Trump Village apartments in December has returned — leaving Jewish tenants there rattled.

A crook ripped a tiny plastic-encased scroll off the door frame of a 20th floor apartment on Wednesday — one month after mezuzahs were stolen from the Ocean Parkway towers, cops said.

Trump Village resident Alla Fatima said she broke down crying when she realized her mezuzah — a gift from a friend who got it on a trip to Israel had been stolen. “It was so beautiful,” said Fatima.

The bookkeeper said she paid $220 for a protective silver case for the rolled-up parchment, which contains two hand-written portions of the Torah. Many Jews affix the objects to their homes for good luck and protection.

Mezuzahs were stolen from seven Trump Village apartments in an adjoining tower on Dec. 3, police said.

A bare spot on the door jam shows where Fatima had her mezuzah before it was stolen on Jan. 25. Photo by Arthur De Gaeta Elected officials condemned the attacks last Wednesday night — and vowed to help local rabbis replace the missing mezuzahs. “We can’t sit in silence when something like this happens.” Councilman Lew Fidler (D-Marine Park) told members of Community Board 13.

It’s not the first Jewish-related attack this month.

Last week, a vandal left four swastikas and the words “Die Jews” on four Midwood properties. Investigators say a man arrested for similar attacks in Manhattan — who happens to be Jewish — is their main suspect.

In November, anti-Semites were blamed for firebombing three cars on Ocean Parkway, although police now believe the attack wasn’t a hate crime after all, but an elaborate insurance scam. That same month, a vandal defaced the Avenue J train station sign so it read “Avenue Jew.”

Anyone with information regarding the theft is urged to contact the NYPD CrimeStoppers hotline at (800) 577-8477. All calls will be kept confidential.

Do allergy symptoms keep you from doing what you want to do?

Do You Suffer From

Asthma:

A disorder affecting the airways of the lungs. People with asthma have Allergic airways that cause Wheezing and cough in response to certain “triggers”, leading to difficulty in breathing. The airway narrowing is caused by inflammation and swelling of the airway lining, the tightening of the airway muscles, and the production of excess mucus. This results in a reduced airflow in and out of the lungs. You may be waking up at night coughing or wheezing after exertion. Why suffer; today’s treatments may permit you to breath

Allergies:

An allergy is an overreaction of your body’s immune system to substances that usually cause no reaction in most individuals. Reactions can be hives, congestion, sneezing, coughing, sore throat, headache, and itchy runny eyes and nose. Allergy symptoms are triggered by pollen, molds, dust mites, cockroach and animal dander. For people allergic to these common substances, symptoms can be quite bothersome. And treatment can result in dramatic improvement.

Grimm

lowers of Rabbi Yoshiyahu Yosef Pinto — many of them Israeli citizens — feed his campaign coffers by telling donors that he had ways of getting around rules that prevented him from accepting cash donations of more than $100 and receiving contributions from foreigners.

The Manhattan newspaper reports that Grimm drove around with Pinto's aide, Ofer Biton, who is currently under federal investigation, to solicit large cash donations.

But Grimm, who spent the weekend stumping for GOP presidential hopeful Mitt Romney in Florida, flatly denied any wrongdoing and is challenging the Gray Lady's credibility.

"It's disappointing that such a story was allowed to go forward without evidence," he said in a prepared statement that noted he would ensure "these allegations are shown to be the falsehoods they are."

Yet Grimm wouldn't respond to specific questions over the scathing charges raised in the article.

The Times claims that the hard-charging former FBI agent, who is a Roman Catholic, personally picked up an envelope stuffed with $5,000 while parked in a car near the FBI's New York headquarters during the summer of 2010. The next week, the donor sent him a $5,000 check from a friend. But that wasn't enough for Grimm, who called the contributor "repeatedly," demanding another $10,000, the Times claimed.

"Every day, he used to call me, over and over," the follower explained.

Campaign finance laws cap individual contributions to congressional candidates at $2,500, but Grimm and Biton allegedly told the rabbi's followers that they could get around donation limits, and find ways to skirt other campaign finance laws.

The FBI is investigating charges that Biton embezzled millions from Rabbi Pinto's congregation.

The Federal Elections Commission has not charged Grimm with the violations outlined in the Times report.

The money Grimm received from Rabbi Pinto's followers helped fuel his 2010 campaign — and made up nearly half of all the individual contributions he received — but it certainly didn't assure his victory: incumbent Rep. Michael McMahon (D-Bay Ridge) out-raised Grimm by more than two-to-one in 2010. Grimm ultimately beat McMahon riding a wave of Tea Party support and voter dissatisfaction with the then Democrat-controlled Congress.

Biton's lawyer, Jeffrey Udell, refuted the Times claims along with Grimm.

"Mr. Biton has no knowledge about the alleged violation of any campaign finance laws by either himself or Congressman Grimm," he told us on Sunday night.

This is not the first black eye the freshman lawmaker has suffered. Last year, the New Yorker accused him of violating his authority as an FBI agent when he waved his gun around and shouted racist comments during a 1999 brawl at a Caribbean club.

Let's face it, Courier columnists have guts

To the editor,

I applaud Shavana Abruzzo's forceful, sincere statements on politics and quality of life in her column, "A Britisher's View."

That a Muslim reader prayed for her spiritually is one thing ("Forgive, Shav, Allah," Letters to the Editor, Dec. 29), but a person such as Debbie Almontaser (founder of the defunct Arab-themed Khalil Gibran International Academy) who thinks the bloody and mindless Israeli intifada is an example for emulation in the city, has no business preaching what tolerance should be, nor should she be regarded as an authority on what is fair or legal. Unless you think we are a Muslim country. I do not.

As for liberalism, let Stanley Gershebin ("It's Only My Opinion") and his critics know that while liberals 100 ago, when they were also called progressives and reformers, "gave us Social Security, unemployment insurance and FDIC," now that they have solved the problems, they have encountered what in economics is called "diminishing returns." They have forgotten these past achievements, and — by and large — the Democratic party of Michael Moore and President Obama is not the same as that of Presidents Wilson, and Ted Roosevelt and Franklin Roosevelt.

They now focus on freeing violent criminals, aiding foreign nationalists and accusing the Jewish state of, as is often said, apartheid. Is that what Israel gets for giving us electronics, and exporting food and wine?

As for the real apartheid, South Africans only went downhill, economically and socially during and after Mandela. Israel, meanwhile, continues to host Arab communities not dreamt of in an "apartheid" state. Arabs also have dozens of their own nations, which happen to be largely adjacent to Israel. The situation has not improved with Obama. Time and again I have seen his fans on Facebook defend wedge issues, such as recreational marijuana, while ignoring the real opportunities for liberal reform, global warming and job creation.

I have come to believe that Obama is setting our country back, as did Bush, by besmirching everyone who publicly disagrees with him, while recklessly spending on programs tailored for people who did not even vote for him because they live in distant countries — and who may never say thanks!

Food 'stamp'

To the editor,

I can't for the life of me understand why some people still support food stamps finger imaging, even though it is such a waste of tax dollars that 48 states either never tried it or eliminated it, as Texas recently did ("Stamp out fraud with finger printing," Not for Nuthin', Jan. 12).

Mountains of evidence indicates that the other 48 states are equally — or more — effective at preventing fraud and eliminating duplicate cases in the Food Stamp Program through far less costly and intrusive measures. I'd love to hear why you insist on wasting tax dollars on a less effective system.

Even the New York Post has admitted that some applicants are forced go to a city office just to provide a finger image. You forgot to mention that the wait time at these offices is usually hours. Even though some offices are open on Saturday, some food stamps recipients in the city work one or two jobs, sometimes six days a week. Why in the world do you want people to have to take off work — often losing wages — to engage in a political kabuki dance of spending hours to provide a finger image that doesn't detect fraud any better than processes in other states that don't require office visits?

I thought conservatives were for less government intrusion into people's lives — or is that dictum waived for poor people? There is a fraud-detection process encouraged by United States Department of Agriculture (and supported by advocates such as myself) that the city has failed to use. Commissioner Doar recently admitted in a Council hearing that the city apparently has not taken the agency's advice to match New York's food stamps benefits roles versus neighboring states for potential duplicates. So the city has clung to an expensive system that doesn't work and has not taken a simple, cheap step that does work.

That provides further proof that this is not truly about fraud-prevention, but is actually about demonizing poor people.

Lesson for Bloomie

To the editor,

Mayor Bloomberg — the "education mayor" — gave us Cathie Black, and allowed for the Leadership Academy to turn out principals who evaluate and rate teachers, despite the fact that they never taught a day themselves ("Mayor Mike hits another homer," Not for Nuthin', Jan. 19).

Class sizes are burgeoning. You can't rate teachers fairly given the number of disruptive children in a room. When disruptive children are removed, only then may we concentrate on teaching and learning.

As long as we don't have the 600 school concept for the unruly restored, be prepared to have the same type of system no matter how much money is pumped into it.

The mayor has allowed thousands of teachers to be excessed. These people, rated satisfactory through the years, had the misfortune to be in schools that were reorganized or shut. Instead of having them teach and lower class sizes, the mayor and chancellor have demonized these teachers by relegating them to substitute status.

Some parents couldn't care less about their child's education. They never show up at conferences, or when they do, there is absolutely no change in their child's work or conduct. They claim that it's never their child who misbehaves or doesn't do homework. We need a system where active and retired teachers and supervisors run our system with parental input.

Try working in the city school system or any other system without tenure — you would be at the mercy of some principal who didn't like you. And principals will make sure that teachers they don't like get the worst classes, with regard to rating teachers partially by student test scores. That self-fulfilling prophecy renders low scores allowing the principal to get rid of the teacher.

Merit pay? Ridiculous. Principals will wield their clout over teachers! If the city has all this extra money for merit pay, how about putting it to better use by lowering class sizes and restoring the 600 schools?

Mike hits a homer? He has struck out, we're past the ninth inning, and he is making it impossible to go into extra innings.

Paula's Deen-igration

To the editor,

Kudos on your article this week on Paula Deen, Joanna DelBuono ("Wait! Paula deen has what?!" Not for Nuthin', Jan. 26).

Thanks for stressing the idea that TV cooking shows are for entertainment, information, and obviously, money for the network. In this day and age of reality TV, I do not hear anyone complaining about how shows such as "Jersey Shore" tell our youth life is all about sex, booze and verbal abuse.

The idea that no one is putting a gun to the heads of viewers and audiences, who must use their intelligence when making choices that affect them in some way, cannot be stressed enough.

My wife suffered a stroke four years ago and is an avid Food Network fan. After writing about my wife's story, Paula's publicist invited us to see her backstage at the 2010 Food and Wine Festival. Since then, my wife was invited to the Paula book signing in 2011 and appeared in a segment about Paula on the CBS Early Show last month.

With all that being said, my wife is a diabetic as well. She regulates it with diet, and needs no meds to keep the disease in check. In a conversation about butter, my wife and Paula mentioned that people need to do things in moderation. People know their own bodies and health concerns.

Thanks again for really reporting what is exactly on people's minds. Society needs to remember it is only a television show.

Hate bias

To the editor,

I was wondering what determines a hate crime in New York "Bias hate paint," Jan. 18). Does the criteria differ from one neighborhood to another — or one race or another?

I ask this because the Police Department recently claimed that car burnings and the swastikas, and "kill the Jews graffiti" all around the Jewish area of Midwood didn't appear to be a hate crime.

What then would? I'm afraid to ask.

It's Groundhog Day.

Heard that before

I want to wish you all a happy Groundhog Day. Can we say that? Do we wish people a "Happy Groundhog Day?"

There are two things that come to my mind about this special occasion. 1) The length of winter is determined by what Punxsutawney Phil sees when he pops his head out of the hole in the ground. And 2) Channel surfing will bring you at least two stations showing "Groundhog Day" starring Bill Murray, one of my very favorite flicks.

I am also a big Bill Murray fan. Like me, he is a big lover of sports. Unlike me, he is part-owner of several minor league baseball teams. When we visited one of them, the Charleston Riverdogs, we learned that management brings humor into the games. On Father's Day, they held a raffle during the seventh inning. The winner received a vasectomy. Near the end of the season the ball club set a record for the lowest attendance at a game. Several thousand tickets were sold but heavy chains around the gates prevented fans from entering. So officially, there was zero people there for the first pitch. The crowd was permitted to enter at the top of the fourth and, to make up for the "mean treatment," everybody got a free hot dog and soda.

Carol and I attended a game on "Cheapskate Night." I received a free ticket by admitting why I was a cheapskate. It was fun listening to them announce "Stanley over in Section B is a cheapo because he carefully removes the wrapping paper from his Hanukkah gifts and saves it to be reused next year."

Most of the comments were followed by boos. Mine received a smattering of hoots and a fairly large round of applause.

The number of people the Post Office — the third largest employer in America — put to work is about to go down, now that it only processes 6,516 pieces of mail every second. Processing plants will close and jobs will be cut. Meanwhile, the second-largest employer in the nation, Walmart, will probably move up into first place, because the country's largest employer, the Department of Defense, is being cut. Any week now, the big sign outside of the Walmart Supercenter near us will shout "We're number one!"

IT'S ONLY MY OPINION

I love shopping at Walmart. I always find a wide selection of fresh merchandise at competitive prices. I do not particularly care for shopping at the Supercenters. Those stores are really big. I picked up some cookies and Cokes on one side of the store and asked a clerk for the location of the bicycle accessories. He pointed to the wall way over on the far side of the store. That is about a five-mile walk from here. Will somebody please call me a cab?

I enjoy watching college basketball. During last night's game the commentator spoke about schedules.

"This particular team lost three nights ago. The next game is three nights from now. They will have played seven games this month."

After looking up the school's schedule, I noticed that half the games are being played hundreds of miles away. Hey — these are college kids. When do they have attend classes? Between the games and the practice sessions, when do they study? I am StanGershbein@Bell-south.net asking, aren't they there to get an education?

Long live the U.S. Navy SEALs!

They're the baddest badasses around!

What a relief to know that when Americans — or others — are in dire straits, the mighty U.S. Special Forces are a parachute jump away. Like panthers waiting to pounce on prey, U.S. Navy SEALs demonstrated — once again — why pond scum is no match for the planet's most unrivaled counter-terrorism unit.

Slick sharpshooters swooped into Somalia last week and pulled off a night raid daring enough to daunt even a Hollywood superhero, safely rescuing humanitarian workers Jessica Buchanan (from Ohio), and Danish citizen Poul Hagen Thisted, whom pirates were holding hostage in the central Galmudug region for the past three months.

Nine kidnapers were killed in the dramatic siege, but the SEALs — the very same who rooted out and blew away Osama bin Laden last May — sought no praise or limelight for completing their critical mission with expected success. Finishing the job quickly, without superfluous collateral damage, is a tradition for the legendary Naval Special Warfare Development Team — also known as DevGru or SEAL Team Six — whose specialists spend years training to develop, perfect and improve upon their eye-popping, heart-pounding skills for a job few would want, and fewer still would have the stomach for.

A BRITISHER'S VIEW

The SEALs are on active duty even while asleep — with one eye open — and ever ready to employ their full rainbow of combat power to subdue the enemy. Their mind-blowing assignments — ranging from special reconnaissance, unconventional warfare and foreign internal defense, to counter-drug and security assistance operations — require them to be physically and mentally stronger than their adversaries by training for war and fighting to win.

"They have gazelle legs, no waist, a huge upper body configuration, and almost a mental block that says, 'I will not fail,'" Richard Marcinko, the retired Navy SEAL commander who created the elite Team Six in 1980, told ABC News.

There isn't a price high enough to be placed on these extraordinary warriors — nor an award noble enough — to express our gratitude to them for foiling terror and protecting U.S. interests around the world. Their fearless muscle in the line of duty serves to warn evil-doers that if they endanger American lives, our blue chip rescuers are ready, willing, and able to hunt them down, capture them, and kill them if necessary.

The SEALs have historically been the choice for liberation whenever an American is in trouble — a sound selection given their aptitude and composure under extreme situations. We are forever in the debt of these unsung heroes, whom the Vietcong once dubbed "the men with green faces" and whose trademark is to attack stealthily from the sea before returning to it just as silently.

They conquered off the turbulent high seas of the Horn of Africa — one of the most complex and conflicted areas of the world — by parachuting in undetected, and moving ashore on foot to the lair of kidnapers sleeping off the drug-like effects of the stimulant leaf khat.

The operation was no small task, and certainly not for the faint hearted. For the humble, ultra-efficient SEALs, though, it was just another day on the job.

Tenure, schmenure, something's gotta give

I really hate to beat a dead horse, but this whole tenure mishegas deserves another visit.

I'm really tired of all the carping. "I have too many students," "I don't have enough free periods," "I don't get properly compensated," "It's the principal's fault." Blah, blah, blah.

The average days worked in a year for educators is 180. To add insult to injury it's not even a full eight-hour day. With lunch, study, and break periods the average teacher teaches about a six and one-half hour day.

Since the 1960s, class sizes have steadily gone down (I picked those years because that's when I was a student and that's when there were 40-45 students in my class) — it's also when Albert Shanker and the United Federation of Teachers held the first teacher strike (1960). When my daughter started school, some forty years later, the average class size was 24 to 27 children. That's a lot smaller.

A report in the Post headlined "Can't ex-spell idiots" blew the whistle on an English teacher that couldn't spell, and another that took off 39 times in one year and was late 16 times.

Yet neither was kicked out. How do you explain that away? The answer is tenure. Each had more than 15 years on the job.

NOT FOR NUTHIN'

Joanna DelBuono

One reader commented, "What if the shoe were on the other foot? How would you feel if the newspaper you wrote for fired you because of an unjust reason?"

Newspapers, networks, banks, shops, and every other business lets people go for unjust reasons, all the time. Ergo, the phrase "It's not what you know, but who you know," was coined. Build a bridge — get over yourself.

The level of incompetence at schools is way over the limit of acceptance. No union or entity should wield the kind of power that keeps incompetents in the classroom. The mayor and governor are correct: something has to give.

The wham-balance whimps find it easier to blame someone or something else for the breakdown in our education system. But the simple fact remains: bad teachers exist and the quality of education has gone way down. It has to stop.

Yes, some of the problems are parents not parenting, but the bottom line is that teachers are providing sub-par educations and our children are coming out of school unable to read or put a string of words together in a coherent and grammatically correct manner.

The time has come for the excuses to end — if you can't do your job, no amount of tenure should keep you in. Mea culpa to all the deserving, hard-working teachers out there, however you are amply compensated so stop whining.

Not for Nuthin™, I work a full year, don't get off every holiday under the sun, and don't make nearly as much as the average teacher, yet like millions of other workers in the non-union, non-tenured world, I do my job and do it the best I can. So stop whining. It's so not attractive.

Awards season! And they ain't the Oscars!

I'm madder than an alcoholic groundhog who went on a bender on Feb. 1 before collapsing in his bed at 5 am, only to be annoyingly dragged out two hours later by crazy guys in funny hats over the fact that, once again, those hoity-toity folks at the Oscars have stolen my thunder by announcing their candidates for their awards dinner the same week that I'm announcing mine!

Look, you all know that the Screecher prefers the stage to himself, and when anyone — and I mean anyone — steps into his limelight, he tends to lose it!

So when I found out that Brad Pitt was officially up for "Best Ascot" the same week that I was announcing who the Bensonhurst West End Community Council's "Couple of the Year," I was outraged! I mean, who cares what kind of neck garment that pretty boy is wearing? Really!

And the only Oscar I aspire to is the grouchy one who lives in a garbage can in the Village! So you can bet there was smoke coming out of my ears when I learned that George Clooney would rather

BIG SCREECHER

Carmine Santa Maria

hang out with his pals at that ridiculous "Kodak Theatre" in Hollywood to hear what those dimwits at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences have to say instead of making a b-line to the fabulous El Caribe in Mill Basin to cheer on the true heroes of America (and when I say America, I mean Brooklyn!).

I mean, seriously, what do you care more about? What movie had the "best sound mixing," or what neighbor did the most for his community! It's no contest.

So this week, I'd like to tell you about our roster of spectacular honorees (and I'll do it without all the pomp and circumstance of the Oscars, in one big, run-on sentence): Man of the Year: Victor Iacovano the Assistant Principal from IS 303; Woman of the Year: Connie Hamilton from Kingsborough Early College Secondary School; Couple of the Year: Selima and Don Marbury, Principal from 329 and Parent Coordinator from PS 18 in Staten Island (that's right! Staten Island!); Parent of the Year: Maria Di Graziano Vice President of President's Council D21; Humanitarian of the Year: Eddie Mark, Chairman of Community Board 13; Educator of the Year: Harla Musoff-Weiss, Principal of PS 238; and introducing our inaugural Outstanding Student Activist: Priscilla Consolo of Midwood High School.

In the coming weeks, I'll feature a biography on each of our esteemed award winners (after I screech about something, of course!). It will all lead up to our 51st Gala, which will be, as if you didn't guess, a food orgy. Last year, the honorees were so popular and the reservations response was so large (twice as large as we anticipated, in fact) we moved the gala to the El Caribe.

Oh, and there's a story there too. One casualty of the move was, Mr. & Mrs. Frank Cataldo — the one couple that didn't learn of the change of caterers. Belated apologies. Our musical entertainment is provided by our favorite emcee, Nicky, who we use for most of our galas. I won't at this time comment on the catering of the EL Caribe. OK, I will: it will be outstanding, extraordinary and a guaranteed two pound weight gain for everyone.

Of course, I can't do all this alone, so before the music comes up, I'd like to get in a few "thank-yous."

There are the Committee Chairmen from each honoree that set up the reservations, etc. etc. There is our Dinner Dance Committee that does all the legwork, which obviously I can no longer do, as I do not walk. That committee is headed by my lovely wife Sharon, which is great for me because it permits me to get away from all of her scrutiny and bossiness as she diverts her attention to the committee, which, incidentally, she has been heading since March 16, 1968. Wow, that's a long time.

Look, you all know that I'm not a mathematician. But let's do the math. On March 22, Sharon and I will have been married 44 years and six days. And that is why I am so glad for these two months; she will be too busy to pick on me! She can pick on Mary Montemoro, Randi Garay, Linda Dalton, Heather Fiorica and Sid Schatzman.

And it's really nice to have all these people working for you, because when everything goes right, I get all the accolades. But when something goes wrong, well, you can blame the committee!

Screech at you next week!

Machine turns trash to treasure

Now, you too can do the old switcheroo thanks to the 'Swap-O-Matic'

BY ELI ROSENBERG

There's take a penny, leave a penny — and now there's take an Aladdin DVD, leave some Band-Aids.

A Prospect Heights ice cream parlor is revolutionizing the act of barter with the Swap-O-Matic, a vending machine styled like a 1950s automat that lets patrons trade their trash for treasures (or, depending on your taste, more trash).

The machine, which operates at Ample Hills Creamery on Vanderbilt Street, is meant to comment on consumerism, but it has come to address recession-era economics, according to the machine's inventor, Lina Fenequito.

"It's more about American consumption than it is about saving money, but it's kind of apropos for the moment," said Fenequito, who designed the Swap-O-Matic as part of her thesis as a technology student at

A noisemaker and yo-yo could be yours if you trade something else with the "Swap-O-Matic" at Ample Hills Creamery.

Parsons School of Design in 2005.

"We Americans have a lot of stuff," she said. "We consume a lot and we waste a lot and I thought this idea was a fun way to comment on and combat overconsumption in our culture."

The contraption has 13 glass compartments that would-be swappers can fill with items they want to give away. Each time they hand over an item — whether it's a pair of nearly new pair of Adidas sneakers or a yo-yo — they earn one credit that can be used to claim items from the Swap-O-Matic's other cubbies.

First-time users are given three credits to start, all managed by a small monitor on the "Swap-O-Matic," which uses email addresses to keep track of people's swapping accounts.

The machine's sleek, retro look is an homage to the futuristic ideals of the fifties, said Fenequito, who has been perfecting the design over the past six years.

Like any swap meet worth its musty records, the Swap-O-Matic features occasional duds, such as the plastic spoon available in one cubbie on a recent visit. But for the most part, the machine's items are at least as good as the free stuff Brooklynites leave up for grabs on their stoops.

"I haven't actually used it myself," admitted Fenequito, who lives in Park Slope but said Ample Hills was an ideal home for the piece because of its community feel. "Every time I go there, I see something exciting and I want to save it for somebody else!"

They say the best things in life are free, or at least obtainable for your junk — and that's true thanks to the Swap-O-Matic, shown off by Ample Hills employee Caroline Glass. Photo by Elizabeth Graham Assemblywoman Nicole Malliotakis (R-Bay Ridge) offered kudos and presented Certificates of Merit to a brand spankin' new group of Eagle Scouts in Boy Scout Troop 715, chartered at Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Church in Bay Ridge. The five young men, Vasilis Papayiannis, Christopher Xanthos, Michael Leonardos, Nicholas Mutskakakis and Constantine Panagakos received high praise for their leadership, dedication and community service. Standing O pal, Assemblywoman Nicole said, "These young men have demonstrated exemplary community service and are tomorrow's leaders. I congratulate them for what they have accomplished at such a young age." Hear, hear!

Robots rule!

Not satisfied with just lungs, New York Methodist is also adding gastric bypass surgery to the list of robotic assisted programs at the hospital, which is only one of three in the whole northeast to offer this type of procedure. Standing O pal and surgeon extraordinaire Dr. Steven Carryl said, "Weight loss surgery can greatly improve the quality of life for many patients. Bariatric surgery can be a good option for many obese patients who need to lose a significant amount of weight." This procedure helps patients lose up to 70 percent of body fat and allows for increased precision and enhanced magnification for the surgeon, which results in less pain and a shorter recovery period for the patient. Less pain and shorter recovery sounds like a home run to Standing O!

For those who don't want the surgery but still want to lose weight, NY Methodist also offers a comprehensive, customized weight loss program. According to Dr. Alfred Ba Tun Leong, "Working with a support team makes the process of losing weight easier. This program is not about a quick fix, but rather long-term lifestyle changes."

No good deed goes unrewarded!

MARINE PARK

Do-gooding tweens and teens finally got their 15 minutes of fame at a special meeting on Jan. 26 at the Salt Marsh Nature Center (3301 Avenue U), when Assemblyman Alan Maisel (D-Marine Park) presented each one with a certificate of merit for their unwavering support and help at the annual Santa in the Park event held last December.

The annual whoop-de-do, which is sponsored by the Marine Park Civic Association and the Parks Department, invites neighborhood children to visit with Santa, play games and do crafts.

The volunteers, Natalia Crociata,

Francine Crociata, Francis Crociata, Melissa Fitzgerald, Madison McCormick, Alyssa Silvestri, Alyssa Vazquez, Theresa Calitri, Madison Black, Ashleigh McGregor, Jeffrey Roth and Nicholas Detorfinio gave up going to their own hip holiday soiree to help out with face painting, organizing and directing the tiny tots throughout the day.

"It's always good when kids get involved with civic matters. The children are dedicated and enthusiastic volunteers who have given generously of their time and skills to help make the Santa in the Park event such a great success," said board member, Mary Campbell. Standing O couldn't agree more.

to cancer when they hosted this year's kick-off party for the Relay for Life fundraiser, coming this spring. "Relay for Life is an awareness raiser about the progress against cancer as much as it is a fundraiser," explained Aviator's team executive Matthew Kemp to Standing O. The party on Jan. 20 held at the center brought a whole lotta luck to the borough's stick men when the Aviators iced the New Jersey Outlaws 6-1. Entertainment was provided by Elizabeth's Dancing School with lots of raffles and prizes.

Relay for Life is an all day celebration where individuals and teams barbecue, dance and take turns walking around a track, relay-style, to raise funds, celebrate survivors, and remember those who lost their battle. At night, participants light hundreds of luminaria around the track to honor survivors, friends and families.

The first Relay for Life in the Mill Basin, Bergen Beach and Marine Park area will be held on Sat. June 2.

Oraia was named a local hero for her founding of RightRides, a women's safety program created in 2004 that provides free late-night rides home for women living in North Brooklyn. What started out as a one-woman operation now has more than 200 volunteers offering rides in 45 neighborhoods. Oraia also received $5,000, which she directed to a non-profit charity of her choice.

Ryan Louis of Canarsie and Xue Yun Gao of Dyker Heights were both recognized as student leaders, and were selected to participate in a leadership summit in Washington DC as well as a paid internship with a local non-profit organization. # Minimally invasive surgery at NY Methodist

FOCUS ON HEALTH

Doctors are now better able to treat your kidney stones.

New York Methodist Hospital is now using an improved technology, known as the Sonolith i-move, for dissolving kidney stones. The technology uses extracorporeal shock-wave lithotripsy, which allows for a minimally invasive surgical procedure to treat patients' kidney stones.

Physicians in Methodist's Division of Urology, headed by Ivan Grunberger, MD, make up the first team in the United States to use the new lithotripsy device.

"The new generation of lithotripter is capable of generating shockwaves with the same intensity from one firing to the next, something that older models could not do," said Grunberger. "This makes the pulverization of the kidney stones more accurate, and also means that a higher number of patients will be stone-free after the first treatment."

The new lithotripter can also monitor patient movements in real time with revolutionary infrared tracking: if the patient moves slightly during the procedure, the machine locates the kidney stone and completes treatment. The extended penetration depth of the shockwaves also allows for treatment of patients who are obese.

"With the added conveniences of a handheld ultrasound probe to locate the stones, and the ability to generate consistent shockwaves, we can treat patients with kidney stones with more precision and accuracy than ever before," said Grunberger. "The new [extracorporeal shock-wave lithotripsy] technology gives our urologists the ability to better target and monitor stones, ensuring better patient outcomes."

Kidney stones are solid masses of tiny crystals that can form in the kidneys and cause bleeding, kidney damage, or ongoing urinary tract infections. They can cause acute and severe pain. It is estimated that more than one million patients with kidney stones are treated annually in the United States.

Oral care can be fun for kids

FOCUS ON HEALTH

Children's oral care is something many parents are concerned about year-round, but there are also several times during the year when oral care is especially important. For example, Halloween, the winter holidays, Valentine's Day and Easter are all large candy-eating times in the year, making it essential to take the time now to teach children the importance of maintaining good oral health.

"Tooth decay is the most common chronic childhood disease, so it's important to teach children effective tooth brushing habits, especially around the holidays, when children are typically consuming more sweets than usual," says dentist and mom Dr. Jennifer Salzer.

Oral care isn't usually a top priority for children, and teeth cleaning may even be considered a chore to kids, which is why it is so important for parents to get involved early on and teach children the importance of proper oral care. To make oral care more fun for children, Salzer offers some of her best tips:

- Parents should brush their teeth with their child to set a good example. Children also learn by watching and imitating their parent.

- Sing your child's favorite song, like "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star," or play a song from his favorite singer for the two minutes while he is brushing his teeth.

- Give your child a toothbrush that is designed to appeal to a toddler who is learning to brush and whose baby teeth are growing in. For younger children, when their first teeth begin to appear, parents should brush teeth using a child-sized, soft-bristled toothbrush with a cushioned head to help protect babies' tender gums.

- It's important that children 2 and older use fluoridated toothpaste to help prevent decay as their teeth continue to develop.

Major grant for Downstate's research

FOCUS ON HEALTH

Brooklyn is on the way to having the healthiest eyes in the city.

Research to Protect Blindness, the world's leading organization supporting eye research, has awarded SUNY Downstate Medical Center with a grant of $220,000 to continue its work to find causes, treatment, and prevention of blinding diseases. The grant adds to the more than $6 million in funding for eye research that the hospital has received in the past five years.

"At Downstate, we invented or introduced many of the tools currently used in eye surgery," says Douglas R. Lazzaro, a professor and chair of ophthalmology at the medical center. "More than 14 million people in the United States have impaired vision, a number expected to double by 2020. Preventing blindness, both through research and medical care, is our goal."

Lazzaro, a Bay Ridge resident, heads Downstate's team of physicians and researchers. Downstate's ophthalmologists diagnose and treat glaucoma, retinal disease, dry eye conditions, cataracts, childhood eye disorders, and more. The new Laser Vision Correction Center, located at Downstate at Bay Ridge, uses cutting-edge equipment and techniques.

Top honors for Maimonides

FOCUS ON HEALTH

One of Brooklyn's top hospitals has proved it's also one of the nation's top hospitals.

Maimonides Medical Center has once again been named a "Distinguished Hospital for Clinical Excellence" by HealthGrades in its Hospital Quality and Clinical Excellence study. This is the third consecutive year that the hospital has received this designation, placing it in the top five percent nationwide for clinical performance. In New York City, only three hospitals were awarded this distinction: New York Weill Cornell, New York University, and Maimonides.

"We strive for the best patient outcomes, so this is wonderful news for the patients and families we serve," said Pamela S. Brier, President and CEO of Maimonides. "The entire staff is pleased to be recognized at a national level for our efforts on behalf of patients."

HealthGrades' study objectively identifies those hospitals with the best overall clinical performance across all 26 medical diagnoses and procedures that the organization rates.

These 263 top-performing hospitals represent only five percent of the nation's hospitals, and each is designated as a "HealthGrades Distinguished Hospital for Clinical Excellence."

"Maimonides Medical Center can be proud of the contributions of its physicians, nurses and staff in achieving outstanding patient care," said Kristin Reed, HealthGrades vice president of hospital ratings and author of the study. "The Brooklyn community is fortunate to have access to some of the highest quality hospital care in the nation."

Specific procedures and diagnoses for which Maimonides achieved five-star ratings include: heart attack, heart failure, stroke treatment, coronary interventional procedures, cardiology, bariatric surgery, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, pneumonia, women's health, GI bleed, bowel obstruction, sepsis, respiratory failure, gynecologic surgery, and appendectomy.

TAKE A CHANCE ON A 'RANDWICH'

Brooklyn's first mystery sandwich delivery service

By Kate Briquelet

Two music business expats-turned-amateur chefs have created the ultimate cure for lunchtime doldrums: homemade mystery sub sandwiches, delivered right to your door.

Jeff Stockton and Jenn de la Vega bring you "Randwiches," a random sandwich service that's taking orders beginning Feb. 3, and unleashing zesty bombshells of roast beef, chicken adobo, jalapeno mustard, pecorino, Mofongo, mashed plantains with garlic and pork rinds — or whatever else they feel like making on that particular day.

"The anticipation is not unlike that of the holiday season or birthdays," said sandwich construction artist and Randwiches mastermind Jenn de la Vega. "You know you're going to get something but you don't know what — and the combinations may be something you never thought of."

De la Vega and Stockton, her roomie in Bedford-Stuyvesant, began crafting their punch-packed lunches in October after initially delivering to friends, just for fun.

They honed their skills at barbecue cook-offs and last fall's Brooklyn Bacon Takedown, winning the "People's Choice" award for their curry bacon nachos.

Randwich ingredients change each week, and the team often morphs brave new flavor combinations that won't be replicated, though they hope to build a permanent menu soon, based on the reviews their customers give each sandwich, via online survey.

Some known Randwiches include the Bresaola with broccoli rabe, Alfredo sauce and garlic cheese; and the seven-hour pulled pork with pickled onions, Mahon, cream cheese and arugula.

Hungry souls must order online at least two days ahead of time, pay through PayPal or Venmo, and specify any allergies or dietary preferences. The chefs will then hand deliver their delicacies — with an ingredients list scrawled on the paper bag — to any location that's accessible by subway.

If foodies can't pay, Randwiches is willing to barter for ingredients or services, and they won't take tips but will gladly accept acolytes on Twitter, or word-of-mouth recommendations. And it must be working, because these breadwinners have an 85 sandwich backlog.

"It's a great opportunity to take a gamble," Stockton said. "You get tired of the restaurants near your work very quickly. Here's an open-ended lunch where you never know what you'll get."

To order a Randwich, visit <http://randwich.es> or e-mail randwiches@gmail.com

We don't know what's in these sandwiches — they're "randwiches," after all!

The sub standard! No. 7 Sub sets up shop in Greenpoint

By Juliet Linderman

It's the greatest thing on sliced bread — literally.

No. 7 Sub, the super-delicious sandwich outpost from the mad geniuses behind No. 7 restaurant in Fort Greene, opened up shop on Manhattan Avenue a few weeks ago, and we couldn't wait to take get our hands around Tyler Kord's creative creations — including that enticingly weird Sriracha cocktail.

"I drink a lot, and I have weird ideas," Kord said of dreaming up his menu of truly inspired sub sandwiches that includes flavor combinations such as pork and shrimp sausage with shishito peppers, roasted onions, grape jelly sauce and cilantro; and cheese with spaghetti squash salad, honey roasted peanuts and peach muchim. "I'll think of something classic like a Reuben, and do something else; for example, our special sauce is made of Chinese mustard, sweet chili and Japanese mayo."

Kord opened his celebrated Fort Greene restaurant No. 7 in 2008, which immediately garnered acolytes for its constantly changing menu and bold, flavorful and seasonal ingredients, and in 2010, he opened an offshoot sub shop in the Ace Hotel. The popularity of the first sandwich bar beget another, and thus Greenpoint's latest and greatest sub shop was born.

"I think about texture and try to make it crunchy and creamy at the same time," Kord said. "It's not like a restaurant where you have a plate of different things; with a sandwich, you need to get all the flavors in every bite. I wanted it to be interesting."

And interesting his sandwiches are: All served on toasted Caputo bakery rolls, the BBQ chicken is perfectly seasoned and slathered in a not-too-sweet sauce, offset with tangy, briny pickle slices and stiff, salty corn chips that add a perfect accent of crunch to the sandwich experience. Kord's take on a Reuben, with tender sauerkraut, melted swiss cheese, smoky slabs of brisket and a special sauce chock full of dill, is heavenly; and the vegan option, fried broccoli with black olives, marinara and banana peppers, is by far the best of the three. The fried broccoli is battered and fried with expert restraint, and enough aplomb to preserve that grease-tinged crunch, and the sweetness of the marinara sauce plays perfectly with the salty olives and spicy, vinegar-soaked banana peppers.

"There are fancy sandwich places where one is served on baguette, one is served on brioche — it's not like that here," Kord said. "It's about what inside the bread."

It's also about the sides — don't leave No. 7 Sub without an extra spicy muchim pickle. And wash it town with a Sriracha cocktail, made with tequila, maple syrup and lime. Weird? Yes. Delicious? Absolutely.

Sew W'burg

This isn't your grandma's sewing circle. The Queens-based SEW Moni sewing studio is opening its first Brooklyn outpost on S. Third Street in Williamsburg, where founder Moni Briones will offer top-notch stitching tutorials from sewing masters to the craft-hungry masses, desperate to put their needles and thread to good use.

"People want to learn how to get back to their roots, have a greater hand in what they're wearing and really own their clothes — not just buy them," said Briones.

Briones — a Mexican-American — chose S. Williamsburg as her sewing shop's new home in an attempt to inspire and empower the area's Hispanic community.

Starting
2/5

"Another Latina will see me in the store and ask [if I'm a laborer]. I get to tell them, 'this is my store,'" said Briones. "I want women to know that [owning a business] is something that they can do."

SEW Moni offers beginner, intermediate and advanced classes that cover everything from sewing 101 to dress and denim construction.

"People have dreams and, when they realize that they can actually do it," said SEW Moni manager and instructor Katie Mann. "We help them to build those skills and they go on from there."

I'm tawkin'!

Here's suttin' Brooklyn can tawk about! Heather Quinlan is unleashing knishes, egg creams and some good old-fashioned chutzpah at the Brooklyn Heights Cinema next week at a party fundraiser for "If These Knishes Could Talk" — her unfinished documentary all about the New York accent.

"The accent can be seen as really gruff and angry," she said, "but there's a certain charm and sweetness to it, too."

Quinlan will screen a 25-minute version of the film at the Henry Street twin cinema, followed by a Q&A with "Knish" celebrities and mystery guests.

The talkie was released in August and quickly earned acclaim as a light-hearted probe into the Brooklyn-heavy timbre.

Now Quinlan hopes to raise more funds to finish an 80-minute version, where she'd travel to New Orleans to find Yats — Southern folk whose cadence is dripping with the Borough's famous dialect.

"People marvel at you when you're from New York, like you're half a celebrity or something," said Ben Lee, a garbage man and Bay Ridge resident who's featured in the film. "Certainly for us natives, it instills a little bit of hometown pride."

"If These Knishes Could Talk" at the Brooklyn Heights Cinema [70 Henry St. at Orange Street in Brooklyn Heights, (718) 596-5095], Feb. 9 at 6:45 pm. Tickets $15; $25 for a reserved seat and DVD of the film. For info, visit newyorkaccentfilm.com.

BEST BETS

Battle of the home brew

Want to meet the next greatest craft beer monger? Look no further than your neighbor's closet.

At the Brooklyn Wort amateur home brew championships, hosted by Sycamore Bar and Brooklyn Homebrew, 25 of Brooklyn's best DIY brewmasters will bottle up their spoils and compete for suds-soaked glory, and a chance to break into professional brewing.

"The first winner we ever had is now a brewer at Greenport Harbor Brewing Co.," said Justin Israelson, the owner of Sycamore and founder of the two-year-old bi-annual festival, where amateur brewers showcase their beers for a panel of professionals from breweries such as Sixpoint and Kelso.

For the first time, would-be contenders must submit a bottle of beer before Feb. 3 to be considered for one of the 25 coveted slots for the spring contest — a sure fire sign that there's a vibrant Brooklyn brewing community.

"When we started Brooklyn Wort, we were very surprised to see the community that existed around home-brewing here, and how strong it was," Israelson said. "Now there are home brew shops popping up on every corner in Brooklyn."

The competition's organizers will select the 25 brewers by the end of February — giving the beer men and women two months to perfect a keg of their finest brew for the contest on April 28, where judges and hundreds of paying attendees will sample the goods and vote on a winner.

More than 250 people turned out to sample the suds last year, and to participate in a local tradition that dates back decades.

"Our local brewing history here had such a prolonged interruption after its early hey days faded out, that we are, in a sense, starting over," said Danielle Cefaro and Benjamin Stutz, the owners of Brooklyn Homebrew. "[But] the popularity of home-brewing has really always been here and 'stewing' quietly away."

Drop off unmarked bottles of home made beer to compete in "Brooklyn Wort" at Sycamore [1118 Cortelyou Rd. between Westminster and E. 11th Street in Ditmas Park (347) 240-5850] and Brooklyn Homebrew [163 Eight St. between Third and Fourth avenues in Gowanus (718) 369-0776] Feb. 1-8. $5 to enter. For more info about the contest, visit www.brooklynwort.com.

Hype it up

This graffiti is coming to a gallery near you. Bushwick artist Ad Deville, who formed street art outfit, Skewville, with his twin-brother 13 years ago, is taking over the Flushing Avenue gallery he has called home since 2008 for a new show, "Skewville Turns 80: A Retro Retrospective," on Feb. 3.

The prolific printer will empty his vault and haul out three decades worth of screen printed wooden signs, plywood sneakers, and bold-type bric-a-brac for a stroll down a heavily tagged, paint-splashed memory lane.

"It's our basic way to shamelessly promote our decades of deviance by showcasing our collection of unseen Skewville pieces, as well as artwork that people didn't buy when it was cheap — plus a birthday cake," said Deville.

Expect to see the full range of Skewville styles including spoofs of street signs and billboard marketing, figuration painting, several editions of the wooden converse shoes that Skewville hung on telephone wires, giant installations of playgrounds, and a wooden box with the word "Hype" printed on all six sides.

Deville is quick to credit his mom, an art teacher, with encouraging him to follow his path — which has led him to galleries and dark alleys all over the world.

"She probably didn't like that we drew on the walls as kids, and she's definitely not happy that we did it as adults, but she's still supportive nonetheless."

But this could be his last show in Brooklyn for a while — the globetrotting graffiti writer has plans in the works for exhibits in Lebanon, Istanbul, France and San Francisco, which could force a hiatus from the borough.

So head over to Factory Fresh before Deville goes back to the streets and paints the town red.

"Skewville Turns 80: A Retro Retrospective" at Factory Fresh, (1053 Flushing Ave. at Thames Street in Bushwick). Opens Feb. 3, 7 pm-10 pm. For info, visit www.factoryfresh.net.

New takes on old classics at Bklyn Museum

The Brooklyn Museum is kicking off the new year by opening its doors — and handing over its showrooms — to two promising young artists inspired by the museum's venerable permanent collection.

Red Hook artist Shura Chernozatonskaya's playful vertical paintings grace the third floor of the museum as a part of a continual and rotating exhibition of works by up-and-coming Brooklyn artists called Raw/Cooked, while Rachel Kneebone's delicate porcelain sculptures cascade across the institution's fourth floor in the eponymous exhibit Rachel Kneebone: Regarding Rodin.

Chernozatonskaya isn't nervous about showing her creations alongside the museum's iconic impressionistic and religious paintings in the grand third floor hall. In fact, those works inspired her to create the site-specific pieces.

"It's been a wonderful experience," said Chernozatonskaya. "I've had a wonderful time working with the museum's collection."

Her paintings contain broad, colorful strokes and circles, which echo the street signs and traffic lights of her neighborhood.

Artist Shura Chernozatonskaya's giant vertical paintings on the Brooklyn Museum's third floor tease humanity from the iconography of street signs. Here she is, in her studio.

"The circle that appears in all of my paintings connects to the different genres in the museum," said Chernozatonskaya. "I find the circle to be a perfect form that is unattainable and the imperfection reflects our practice in general and makes the art move."

Upstairs, in the museum's esteemed Sackler Center for Feminist Art, Kneebone is showing nearly a dozen hand-molded porcelain figures with miniature human forms that merge and mutate in odd combinations.

Kneebone cites master humanist Auguste Rodin's "Gates of Hell" and Dante Alighieri's "Divine Comedy" as the source of her inspiration. Several of the museum's Rodin bronze sculptures sit in the exhibit next to her original works in vivid contrast.

Her curator, Catherine Morris says the exhibit helps its audience examine Rodin and modern art history from a different perspective.

"Rachel's figures are displaying their fragility and humanity in a vulnerable but also universal way," said Morris.

"There's strength in vulnerability." # BROOKLYN EATS

THE KEEPER OF THE KNISH

By Eli Rosenberg

A good knish is hard to find — unless you're at Adelman's Kosher Deli in Midwood.

Mohamed Salem keeps the fading tradition alive at the delicatessen — whose owners were Jewish, then Italian, and now Muslim — and the knishes have only gotten better over the years. Salem should know: even after taking over the joint, he hasn't lost his appetite for the knishes that stole his heart many years ago.

"The first knish I ever had was at Adelman's," said Salem, who started working at the kosher deli more than 20 years ago, long before buying it, because it was one of the only places in the neighborhood where he could eat as a halal-keeping Muslim (the demanding dietary restraints of which prohibit Muslims from eating unkosher meat). "And I still love to eat them."

It's true that knishes can be found elsewhere in the borough — on the hot plates of street vendors and in the windows of many Eastern-European groceries in Brighton Beach, for example — but Salem's delicious $3 knishes, lovingly stuffed with mashed potato, onion and a variety of other fillings, are a puff above the rest, according to bona fide deli expert David Sax.

"Knishes can either be done really well, or really poorly," said David Sax, who ate at nearly 250 delis worldwide while he was researching his book, "Save the Deli: In Search of Perfect Pastrami, Crusty Rye, and the Heart of Jewish Delicatessen," published in 2009. "Many places you take two bites of a knish and you have to drown it in mustard. But Adelman's knishes are works of craftsmanship; they're my favorite knishes in Brooklyn."

Knisheries were as once popular as bagel and pizza joints in the borough — even sparking wars throughout the city at times — but the heavy fried-or-baked snack's popularity has since plunged, along with the number of delis; of New York's 1,500 delicatessens that were alive and thriving in 1930, only two dozen remain. Nonetheless, nowhere in the country — or world — does the knish elicit such nostalgia as New York.

"There's a strong emotional attachment to knishes in New York that you don't have elsewhere," said Sax.

Enter Salem, who took over the decades-old Adelman's in 2006 and made it his mission to be the custodian of the knish amidst a kosher cuisine climate still devastated by the loss of Mrs. Stahls — a Brighton Beach staple that was considered the city's premier knishery when it closed in 2005, after 70 years in business.

Salem rose to the challenge: he took a classic Adelman's recipe — and made it his own.

He serves up eight different kinds of knish every day, including spinach, kasha, mushroom, potato, broccoli, vegetable, meat, and even sweet potato — an unlikely knish that Salem put on the menu when he took over.

Given the knish's New York ties, it's fitting then that it lives on at Adelman's, a place that has been passed from one immigrant group to the next throughout its history: the deli was opened by Jewish owners in Borough Park 70 years ago, before it was bought after it moved to Kings Highway in 1986, by Anthony Papeo, an Italian-American, who then sold it to Salem in 2006.

Salem is happy to be one of the city's foremost knish-bearers.

"We have a good relationship with the community," he said, noting the deli's mostly Jewish clientele. "There is no problem between Jewish people and Muslims. We all came from the same neighborhood, you know?"

A true s'mac ('n cheese) down!

By Sarah Zorn

Got Lactaid? Everyone's favorite ooey-goey comfort food was front and center at the Mac and Cheeze Takedown at the Bell House in Gowanus — where 25 amateur competitors hurled insults, threw elbows (along with penne, shells, and orecchiette) and served up pounds of souped-up mac to 300 hundred hungry spectators in the fight for dairy domination.

"There's a lot of trash talk here, it's great," crowed local filmmaker-turned-Takedown creator, Matt Timms.

"It turns out that people have really passionate opinions about macaroni and cheese," he continued. "It's something that's really hard to screw up, but also really hard to make brilliant."

Most competitors wound up taking a more-is-more approach — hoping to curry favor with in-your-face flavors (bourbon BBQ sauce, blue cheese, jalapeno poppers, sauerkraut), luxury add-ins (lobster fondue, truffle oil), copious amounts of animal product (spareribs, corned beef, duck, pulled pork, sausage, bacon, bacon, more bacon), and beer.

"They know they need to wow you with just that one bite," said Timms. "But if you had a whole bowl of anything you tried here, it would be too decadent — your head would pop off."

At the end of the day, it was a nation of mac and cheese lovers divided, with the judges going for the bells and whistles: 4 Mushroom M and C with dried morel and porcini béchamel, gruyere, fontina and emmentaler cheeses, pickled beech and roasted oyster mushrooms, Meyer lemon, heritage bacon lardons and bacon fat bread crumbs; and the audience making the case for classicism, awarding top marks to "The Baby Maker" — a cheddar and gruyere casserole with a sage and onion panko crust.

"It's fun when there's some sort of twist, but when it comes down to it, you have to taste the cheese," said attendee Diane Castelucci.

"So many of these dishes had so many ingredients, they wound up tasting like something else completely," she added. "Ultimately, it's important for the cheese to be the star."

Bklyn's best Caesar: it's the schmaltz!

By Sarah Zorn

Chef Brian Leth is king of the Hill.

Hired six months into the opening of Vinegar Hill House — widely considered to be one of the best restaurants in Brooklyn — Leth has been wooing palates and winning acolytes ever since with his fuss-free, season-specific fare.

"Basically, we try to keep it simple and execute well," Leth said. "The flavors here tend to be pretty big, partially out of necessity — there's only three people cooking here, so it's really to our advantage to do bold flavors that people can really appreciate."

Although it's the storied Cast-Iron Chicken and Red

Wattle Pork Chop (both created by owner Jean Adamson) that garner the lion's share of Vinegar Hill House's press, Leth's own creations are nothing to sneeze at.

"People will come here because they've heard of those dishes, yes, but hopefully they'll wind up trying other things," Leth said. "The menu is constantly changing and evolving — it's nice to have people return just because they appreciate the way you cook."

Leth's dishes are uncomplicated yet whimsical, like in a dish of papardelle with garden snails, watercress, walnuts and pears ("it started as a little nod to the fact that when you buy fresh watercress, it often has a bunch of little snails clinging to it. I thought it would be interesting to actually eat them together,") and a classic Caesar salad, topped with croutons bathed in every Jewish grandma's secret ingredient — chicken schmaltz.

"I wanted to turn one of the oldest dishes into something interesting and delicious," said Leth. "It was also conceived as a way to get a Caesar salad on the menu, so we can eat it in the kitchen as often as possible!"

Can't score a back-stage pass to Leth's kitchen — or for that matter, a notoriously hard-to-come-by seat for dinner? Luckily, no reservations are required to whip up this creamy, crunchy salad in the comfort of your own home.

Vinegar Hill House's Caesar salad with schmaltz croutons

Courtesy of executive chef Brian Leth • Serves 8

INGREDIENTS

- 6 heads romaine lettuce
- 1 egg yolk
- 10 anchovies in salt, rinsed and filleted
- 5 cloves garlic, chopped
- 2 tbs Lemon juice
- 1 cup canola oil
- 2 tbs olive oil
- Black pepper
- Parmesan cheese, grated

- 1/2 cup schmaltz (rendered chicken fat)

- generous handful parsley, finely chopped
- Stale crusty white bread, such as Sullivan Street pan de commune or similar

DIRECTIONS

Add egg yolk in a blender with three cloves of chopped garlic, the anchovies, lemon juice and a little water. Turn it on and let it run for 20 seconds. Start slowly emulsifying in the canola oil, then finish with the olive oil and a sprinkle of parmesan.

Melt the schmaltz in a pan with the two remaining cloves of chopped garlic and the parsley. Add 1-inch cubes of crusty bread and gently fry until they are delicious, schmaltzy croutons.

Cut the romaine into ribbons, using only the light green pieces. Toss in a bowl with a generous amount of the dressing and croutons.

Garnish with more grated parmesan and black pepper.

A slice of modernity

By Eli Rosenberg

It's pizza 2.0 — with all the fixings of a classic Brooklyn pie.

The two bold brothers behind Posh Tomato, Midwood's two-month-old pizza spot, are combining two of the city's obsessions — technology and gourmet food — to create a unique pizza-eating experience, only blocks away from old-school pizza legend Domenico DeMarco of Di Fara fame.

Posh Tomato slings thin-crust personal pizzas with classic toppings such as ricotta, garlic and eggplant — with an option to customize your pie — with the promise that its pizzas are healthier than most other slices.

"Our pizza is fresher and lighter than other places," said Morris S., 31, who opened the "fast casual"-style shop with his brother Solomon, 28, after more than a year of planning. "Why should you have to walk into a pizza shop and have the slice be heavy and greasy?"

True to form, the $9.50 "Melenzana" pie — featuring homemade tomato sauce and mozzarella with eggplant, ricotta, parmesan and parsley — came out of the oven within minutes, was rich and delicious, and not too heavy.

The style of the place sets it apart from other restaurants, bagel shops, and corner stores in the area, as well. The minimalist pizza joint features sleek wooden counter tops, electronic music on the speakers, and a cash register run on an iPad, but Morris doesn't think the open embrace of modernity will scare anybody away in the typically conservative, religious Jewish neighborhood — especially since his pies are certified kosher.

"People might not know what they've been missing," said Morris, who has two master degrees in business. "We wanted to mix the experience of a upscale pizza restaurant with consumer preferences around technology in a way that will fit with everybody's lives."

Are these two brothers trying to topple the venerated pizza palace that is Di Fara — where whispered rumors about Domenico DeMarco's "heavy hand" with the olive oil jug and long lines have occasionally brought the place's revered stature into question?

They insist that they're not.

"Apparently one of the best pizza places in the city is over there," said Morris. "But my goal isn't to say I'm the number one pizza place. My goal is to provide a top-notch product in a quality setting at a reasonable price."

● 'We train very hard and winning was the only expectation going into today.'

— Grand Street's Jorje Jimenez

● 'We beat two number-one teams this year.'

— Boys and Girls coach Ruth Lovelace

Grand Street take-down king nearly taken out!

BY CHRISTOPHER BARCA

For Grand Street Campus wrestling star Jorje Jimenez, being taken down nearly turned into being knocked out.

"I hit my head a little bit, but I think I'm alright," Jimenez said after being body slammed by Monsignor Farrell's Andrew Psomas during the first overtime period of the 2012 NYC Mayor's Cup 160-pound championship match, in which the Wolves ended up finishing second to Farrell. "I didn't want to be the first Grand Street kid to lose in the finals today; I just wanted to win that match so bad."

After Psomas drove Jimenez's head into the mat, the blond-haired brawler was forced to call an injury timeout to try and regroup. Grand Street coach John Zarcone recognized his star wrestler was possibly in trouble and offered him a chance to pull out of the match.

"I told him that this match wasn't the most important thing in the world, and that it was alright if he quit," Zarcone said. "But he said no and kept going. I'm so impressed with his will to win, it was amazing."

After suffering a concussion just two weeks ago, Jimenez was able to recover in time to deliver a dramatic Mayor's Cup-winning take down in the third overtime to claim the fourth straight victory for Grand Street wrestlers in the finals.

Still woozy an hour after being slammed, Jimenez was only focused on his team's successes instead of his own disorientation.

"I'm very proud of this team, I didn't expect four wins in the finals at all," Jimenez said. "We train very hard and winning was the only expectation going into today. I put pressure on myself to win because I was the fourth of us to go and I wanted to give us a chance to go five-for-five."

Grand Street isn't planning on simply celebrating such a strong showing, they plan on carrying their momentum through the state championships and beyond.

"We're going to push twice as hard going into the postseason," said Keanu Thompson, who claimed victory in the 120-pound weight class. "We're happy with second place, considering we came in fourth last year. This team works so hard every single day; we plan on beating Farrell next year."

Coach 'Tiny' shames Lincoln

BY ZACH BRAZILLER

Lincoln High School Coach Dwayne "Tiny" Morton lashed out against his "selfish" players in a wild tirade after the Rail-splitter's loss to Hudson Catholic High School on Saturday, the team's third loss in four games.

"The vibes I'm getting from this team, we're going downward," he said in an all-encompassing interview in his locker room, in front of his sullen team. "Everybody's not happy. I've never seen a team where everybody thought they should be playing. I respect it, but c'mon. There are only 32 minutes [in a game]."

At one point, Morton said his team wanted to put up individual numbers rather than sacrifice for the greater good. He also zeroed in on star sophomore Isaiah Whitehead, a highly recruited standout with scholarship offers from St. John's, Rutgers and Syracuse; said he was upset starting guard Shaquille Davis came down with a back injury that prevented him from playing yesterday; and felt forward Tafari Whittingham has failed to assert himself in the paint.

"Our record doesn't reflect our team," said Morton, who has won seven city titles and three state crowns during his tenure. "I don't think the goal is to win a championship. It's to get some writers in their face. This team just wants to shine. It's worried about getting recruited, who's in the top 25."

But Saturday's loss was nothing to be ashamed of. Hudson Catholic is one of New Jersey's top programs, a team with up to five Division I prospects including impressive juniors Michael Stewart and Reggie Cameron and Iona College-bound guard Grant Ellis. It's led by as many as 10 points late in the third quarter before Lincoln (16-4) came storming back, drawing to within 50-46 on a Rakim Lesane basket with 1:58 remaining.

Lesane came up with a steal moments later along the end line, and tried to throw the ball off Hudson Catholic's Nassir Bar-

The other Cam Neely

BY ZACH BRAZILLER

A Carroll Gardens hockey player has a very recognizable name for those into puck drops and slapshots — one that could doom him or help him skate to a great career on the ice.

At first, Cam Neely — who shares the same name with the Boston Bruins great — didn't understand the jokes. Why were his youth hockey coaches telling him, at age 7, that he was a Hall-of-Famer when he just picked up a pair of skates and a stick? Why were they continually asking him what he was doing playing in Prospect Park when he was a world famous NHL star?

His parents suggested he surf the Internet: a few key strokes later, he quickly figured out what they were talking about — he shared a name with the Cam Neely, the Bruins' current team president.

"It was funny," the Xavier junior recalled. "I

Xavier's Cam Neely has led the Knights' recent surge.

was excited. It was pretty interesting."

It was completely coincidental, too: Neely is the first member of his family to play hockey — but he has taken to it. He watched tapes of the Bruins Hall-of-Fame center and has become a Neely clone for Xavier — a scoring machine on the ice and leader off of it.

He's scored six goals and added four assists in the Knights' last four matches — three wins and a tie — and has 17 goals and 14 assists on the year. Xavier coach Al Dimauro said the biggest difference in Neely is his improved skating and strength, which comes from training sessions during the spring and summer.

"He's skating through hits, he's taking the puck and moving with power and force," Dimauro said of Neely, who plays travel hockey with the North Jersey Avalanche. "Guys are hitting him and he's going through the hits. He's stronger on his skates this year. It makes him a stronger player."

With Neely finding his groove, the Knights have risen to within two points of the Catholic High School Hockey League's Class B leader Holy Cross, tied with St. Francis Prep and St. Peter's for second place.

"I think we can win the championship," the 16-year-old standout said. "We're getting hot at the right time. Our goal is playing really well, we haven't been making many mistakes, just playing solid hockey."

Just as important, Neely has matured as a person, which is significant considering how young his team is: it's made up of nine sophomores and five freshmen and Neely, though just a junior, has emerged as somewhat of an elder statesman. When the team got off to a slow start in league play, dropping three of its four matches, he made sure nobody lost confidence. And now, with the playoffs in sight, he's leading the confident Knights.

Like a leader, Neely refused to acknowledge his role solely for his team's hot play. When asked about his goal-scoring frenzy, he talked about his teammates' ability to dig pucks out of the corner and Xavier's improved chemistry.

"He's coming out of boyhood into young manhood," Dimauro said. "He's growing up."

That selfless attitude was one quality teammates always cited about the NHL Neely. Xavier's Neely hears about his double often, more from coaches than teammates, who aren't familiar with the NHL's past stars.

He loves to hear the jokes now.

"It gets me more attention and gets me noticed," he said. "I've watched film of him. I like how he plays."

Boys and Girls trump Hayes

BY MARC RAIMONDI

Bedford Stuyvesant's Boys and Girls High School held off rallying host Cardinal Hayes for a big, 63-61 win in non-league basketball on Saturday afternoon in front of a raucous Bronx crowd.

Coming in, Hayes was ranked No. 1 in the city. Boys was No. 3.

It was a victory that didn't just prove something for Boys and Girls High School, coach Ruth Lovelace said, but for the public school league as a whole.

"We convincingly won that game," Lovelace said. "The score doesn't really indicate the game. I feel the Public School Athletic League is the toughest division in the city. Our division is tough. We beat two number-one teams this year — Christ the King and these guys. It's definitely a statement."

Boys and Girls (17-3) did lead 57-41 with just 3:05 left before Hayes (16-2) went on a wild, 14-1 run. The Cardinals trailed just 62-61 with 4.8 seconds left after giving Tyler Wilson two free throws.

But it was too little too late. The Kangaroos celebrated on their court, making a case that the Public School Athletic League is stronger this year than the Catholic High School Athletic Association. Both Lincoln and South Shore have defeated Boys and Girls High School this year in Public School Athletic League Brooklyn AA league play.

"It's a different type of game in the public school league," said Boys and Girls senior Joel Angus, who transferred this year from Bishop Loughlin. "It's a faster pace. It's tough, gritty and every night we're playing against somebody that's not gonna back down from you. I love it."

Leroy (Truck) Fludd had 16 points, Angus and Wesley Myers had 15 points and Bryce Jones added eight for the Kangaroos, who upped the speed of the game, pressuring the Hayes guards and fronting future Division I posts Amadou Sidibe (Fairfield) and Jalen Jenkins. Boys and Girls led 21-20 after a helter skelter first half.

"It was a slugfest defensively in that first half and I think that worked to our favor," Lovelace said.

The game didn't change until sophomore Shavar Newkirk went off for Hayes. He had 13 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter and almost led the Cardinals all the way back. Newkirk had a personal 7-0 run to get Hayes within 58-55 with 1:18 remaining.

"We showed a lot of toughness by holding onto our lead, but we have to do a better job sustaining that lead and taking care of the ball," Angus said.

Hayes coach Joe Lods down-played the notion that this game's result means the Public School Athletic League is better.

"They beat us today, sure," he said. "They got us today. But I'm a Catholic league basketball supporter. I'll take my chances with the Jack Currans (legendary Mollo coach) and the Tim Learys (St. Francis Prep)

Ida says the Giants will be victorious!

There are three things everyone knows about our pigskin princess Ida Eisenstein: don't cut in front of her in line at the Silver Star meat market; don't ever criticize ex-Seattle Seahawk Brian Bosworth in her presence; and never, ever, speak to her during Super Bowl week.

It's not that Eisenstein is too busy to talk — quite the contrary. She takes the entire work week off and drives up to her summer compound in the Adirondacks, where she hunts for fat winter rabbit and forages for root vegetables to make a hearty soup.

On the night before the Super Bowl, Eisenstein will have the usual guests assembled: Oslo's deputy minister of fisheries; 11 former members of the Peruvian National Guard; and a Dutch organist known only as "Blond Bear."

If past history is any indicator, guests will laugh and brawl into the wee hours, but Eisenstein will be silent as a golem as she sits stone-faced at the head of the otherwise festive table, chewing each bite exactly 33 times before swallowing.

An hour before kickoff, she'll retire to seclusion to her den, where she'll listen to the game on an old Atwater-Kent cathedral-style radio, wildly jotting down numbers inside a leather-bound notebook.

When the final whistle blows, Eisenstein will finally speak, summoning, as she always does, Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy, her inspiration for the offseason: "The two most powerful warriors are patience and time."

Ida's Kryptonite Lock of the Week:

Giants (+3) over Patriots:

"I just think that they can do it, they can taste it, they want it so bad they'll do anything they can to get it — although the other team probably feels the same way."

136-124-7, 13-8 on Kryptonite Lock of the Week.

A's harpooned by Whalers in Danbury

BY COLIN MIXSON

It was, for the most part, a winning week for the Brooklyn Aviators, who trounced two teams before crumbling in front of the Danbury Whalers on Saturday — snapping a five-game winning streak in the process.

The Aviators entered Thursday's match against the top-ranked 1,000 Island Privateers high on a three-game winning streak — they hadn't lost since Jan. 15, when Brooklyn beat the Danville Dashers at home.

Brooklyn bested the Privateers 5-2 at the Androscoggin Bank Colisee in Maine, a match known lovingly to Federal Hockey League fans as “the Maine Event,” laying the foundation for their victory early by scoring two goals in the first period.

The remaining three goals trickled in over the next two sets, with right winger Brendan Baumgartner sinking in the game's final puck.

The Aviators continued their winning streak on Friday by scalping the Akwesasne Warriors — the team that stole the cherished Commissioner's Cup from Brooklyn last year — at the Aviator Sports and Events Center in Floyd Bennett Field, beating their arch rivals 8-3.

Both victories had a common thread: Brooklyn scored early and often, jumping to a 3-0 lead in the first period against Akwesasne. Aviators Center Lucas Schott found the back of the Warrior's net pretty easily in the first set, knocking in bookend goals as the Aviators capitalized on multiple power-plays.

The Warriors managed to slip two pucks by Brooklyn netminder Jo St. Pierre in the second period, but they still couldn't slow the Aviators' advance as Brooklyn's Boys of Winter netted three more goals before the middle frame came to a close.

It was fun to watch Brooklyn win, but the real treat came from watching the Aviators whip the Warriors into a frenzy. Eight Akwesasne flyers were boxed for more than 100 minutes — longer than the game actually lasted — for a variety of infractions that culminated in two knock-down brawls in the last period.

Aviators coach Rob Miller attributed the Aviators' recent wins to the return of several injured A's, including high-scoring rookie forward Andrew Owsiak.

“We got some guys back and we got some guys healthy and, as a result, we went on a good little tear there,” said Miller.

And their victories are finally bearing fruit: after defeating three of the Federal Hockey League's top-ranked teams over the last week, Brooklyn's moved up in the standings, from fifth place to third. Unfortunately, it didn't last long.

Saturday's game marked the end of the A's winning streak, a streak which amounted to a mere quarter of the 21-consecutive wins Brooklyn earned last season — and saw Brooklyn's Boys of Winter again dropping to the Federal Hockey League's fifth ranked team.

The Aviators were sunk by the Danbury Whalers, losing 8-3 to the hated sea mammals at the Danbury Ice Arena in the Nutmeg State.

Unlike the previous two games, this one started slowly, with the Whalers earning the only first period goal after Sean O'Malley slipped the puck past Brooklyn's netminder Jo St. Pierre.

But things started heating up in the second when Danbury earned a blistering-fast goal before the first minute was over — a goal that Aviator Matt Astoff quickly countered with a powerplay goal after Whaler James Sanford was boxed for slashing.

The ultimate massacre came in the final round: Brooklyn earned the period's first point, but the Whalers — as if they were being led by mad Captain Ahab himself — lashed out with four unrelenting back-to-back goals in a frantic showing. Brooklyn managed to score one last point 13 minutes in, but the Whalers scored twice more, sealing the rout.

The game saw a rash of penalties on both sides, including a good ol' fight between Aviator Joseph Pelle and Whaler Jason McCrimmon in the final moments of the third period.

The tragic defeat — which was as heart-breaking as any other loss, especially considering Brooklyn's winning streak — is somewhat mitigated by the fact that Danbury was well rested for the match. The Aviators had two other games under their belt before taking on the Whalers, Coach Miller said.

“[The Whalers] hadn't played since last Saturday, while we'd played for three games the last three nights,” said Miller. “We were tired, we played them very well and then in the third period we kind of just fell apart, our goalie was tired. We play them home and home this Thursday and Friday, so, hopefully the results will be better then.”

The Brooklyn Aviators will return to the Aviator Sports and Events Center [3159 Flatbush Ave. in Floyd Bennett Field in Marine Park, (718) 758-7580] on Feb. 2 for a rematch with the Danbury Whalers. Tickets are $12 ($10 for seniors and children under 14) For more info, visit www.BrooklynAviators.com.

Lincoln

riño. Barrino, however, scooped it up like a catcher, sprinted the other way and set up Stewart for a slam.

“It was the turning point in the game,” Barrino said.

Morton wasn't as concerned with the loss than he was with the growing trend he's noticed: his teammates using the word “I” instead of “we.”

Part of that, he said, comes from lack of leadership — uncommitted seniors worried about their future. It drove Morton up a wall that his team attended Friday's night's Christ the King-Bishop Loughlin game instead of the South Shore-Boys and Girls tilt — especially since the two Brooklyn schools are on Lincoln's schedule in the coming week.

“Huge week, they don't even realize it,” Morton said. “We're scouting the wrong teams and we're trying to win a championship.”

He faulted Whitehead (15 points) for taking 21 shots, missing 14 of them and failing to get to the free-throw line. But more than that, Morton is bothered by the star's quiet demeanor.

At the season's outset, Morton said he wanted to see Whitehead become more of a leader running the team, which he felt hasn't happened yet.

“That's our problem,” Morton said. “We don't got no leaders.”

When he asked his team who was his best player, nobody spoke up, which Morton said spoke volumes of the team's current issues.

“I guess everybody thinks they're the best player,” Whitehead said. “We have to come together.”

Whitehead is confident this rut won't last. He expects tough practices over the next few days before the showdowns with Brooklyn AA rivals South Shore and Boys and Girls — contests that will determine the regular season crown.

“We're definitely gonna come out hungry,” Whitehead said.

Morton plans to make the most out of the games. They will be like tryouts, only in early February with far higher stakes.

“I'm gonna use these two games to see who's gonna play in the playoffs,” he said. “It's gonna be different after this week.”

Boys and Girls

and the Jack Alesis (Xaverian) against the public schools.”

Sidibe, Chris Robinson and Tyler Wilson all had 10 points apiece for Hayes, which was playing without starting guard Naasir Williams.

Boys and Girls has now defeated two of the top Catholic High School Athletic Association teams. When asked if he'd like some more Catholic school teams on the schedule, Fludd didn't hesitate.

“Yes,” he said. “In states.”

DeBlasio Warns Consumers About Classified Ads

Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble. Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."

Fast Growing Cutting Edge Profession Homeland Security & Security Management

The Homeland Security and Security Management program, developed and directed by Richard S. Colt, Major General, United States Army (Retired), is the ideal program for those seeking careers in law enforcement, fire fighting, private and corporate security, airline security, and emergency planning and response. In addition, there are many opportunities in the field of Homeland Security. Options exist for those that want to be in the forefront of protecting America from natural and manmade disasters. Our degree program was developed by practitioners in the very courses they are teaching. The faculty possesses backgrounds in a wide array of professions ranging from military, F.B.I., and police departments, amongst others and their careers in public service are commendable.

Areas of Employment Opportunities in Homeland Security & Security Management:

- Border Patrol Agent
- Airport Security, Air Marshal
- Immigration and Customs Enforcement
- Police Officer
- Detention & Deportation Officer
- Immigration Enforcement Agent
- Security Specialist
- Asylum Officer
- Immigration Officer
- Corporate and Private Security
- Security Supervisor
- Security Investigator

Join the first line of defense and take those initial steps to a career with many employment opportunities, while gaining the sense of pride that your skills will be primed and ready to keep our communities and people safe.

*Additional training & testing may be required for some or all Federal & State positions.
