Suicide in Prospect Park

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

A 53-year-old man hanged himself in Prospect Park early Friday, police said.

Cops found the body of Nikolay Vovchok dangling from a tree in Brooklyn's backvard with a belt wrapped around his neck at 7:48 am, authorities said.

Police said Vovchok committed suicide beside the greenspace's massive lake near the waterfall trail just off the Long Meadow. He was pronounced dead at the scene, officials said.

Vovchok lived on Avenue N between E. Second Street and E. Third Street in Midwood, according to whitepages.com.

Prospect Park-goers were stunned to learn of the suicide.

"That's so awful to hear," said Brittany Bowen, who babysits two young Park Slope children and regularly takes them to the Park. "It's frightening."

Last call for Jackie's 5th Amendment

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

It's last call for legendary Park Slope dive bar Jackie's 5th Amend-

The long-standing watering hole on Fifth Avenue at Seventh Street is set to serve its last round of brews on Sept. 14 — but not because the old-school joint cannot keep up with the affluent neighborhood's skyrocketing rents. Owner Harold Costello has fallen ill and is ready to throw in the bar towel.

"[Costello's] health isn't great," said bartender Rebecca McCarthy. "He just wanted to see [the bar] go out on his own terms."

DeBlasio Warns Consumers About Classified Ads Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble.

Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitatcommunication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. Ir some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of classifieds because vague too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."

Jacobs drops foe to win title

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

The only thing Danny Jacobs remembers about the biggest punch of his career was how enraged he was when he threw it.

The Brownsville native abandoned his game plan after veteran opponent Giovanni Lorenzo head butted him in the third round and cut him under his left eye. Jacobs immediately went on the attack.

"I really don't remember what combination I threw," Jacobs said. "I'm excited to see the replay. I blacked out. I just wanted to hurt him."

What he'll see on the tape is a flurry of angry punches backing Lorenzo onto the ropes, and Jacobs eventually dropping his opponent to the canvas with a viscous right hook for a technical knockout win at the 2:05 mark of the third round at the Best Buy Theater in Times Square on Monday night.

The punch earned Jacobs the vacant World Boxing Council Continental Americas Middleweight title.

It is also the first time Lorenzo (32–6, 24 KOs), a 32-year-old veteran of numerous world-title bouts, has been stopped in his career.

Jacobs, nicknamed "Miracle Man" after coming back from a cancer that paralyzed him, believes the victory moves him closer to a world title fight.

"The fact that he's never been stopped before gave me a boost of confidence," said Jacobs (26–1, 23 KOs). "It gave me the idea of me being a world champion. I know that I belong."

Jacobs reveled in having his glove raised and a championship belt strapped around his waist of the first time. He thanked the strong contingent of Brooklyn fans for coming out to support him, and eventually leapt atop the ring post to raise the green and gold belt in triumph.

The bout was a big moment in Jacobs' career, which was nearly derailed when spinal cancer left his legs partially paralyzed. He was told he would never fight again, but instead he persevered to earn his own main event — and got to launch the Golden Boy Live fight series on Fox Sports 1.

"God has been touching my life and my career in such a perfect way, if you think about what I've been through and where I came back from," Jacobs said.

Jacobs represents much more than himself every time he steps in the ring. He knows he is a role model for those who are battling or have beaten cancer.

"Where I come from, man, sometimes you just have to bite down and you just got to fight," Jacobs said. "I've been plenty of times with my back against the wall and I rise like a Phoenix."

Catholic girls' leagues take big step forward irls' sports in the Catholic High School Athletic Association league are heading for a long-overdue change.

The girls' leagues will soon begin moving toward a multi-tiered intersectional format with AA, A and B divisions across all major sports, according to intersectional coordinator and Mary Louis athletic director Joe Lewinger.

Currently, girls' teams play league games in their separate dioceses with no true city playoffs.

Catholic school boys' teams, on the other hand, have competed in citywide playoffs for decades.

The process of finally changing that starts this fall with non-league crossover games between squads from the Brooklyn-Queens and Bronx-Westchester leagues. It's an attempt to gauge teams' level of play in order to help league officials put together an intersectional system as early as the 2014-2015 season that will provide better quality games — particularly for the leagues' lower-level teams.

In soccer, Brooklyn-Queens Class AA teams had crossed over with Staten Island clubs in a similar manner for the last two years.

"What we are trying to do is address the parity situation in different leagues in the city," Lewinger said. "We want to be able to increase the opportunities for competitive play on every level."

The move was spurred by a competition disparity within the individual diocesan leagues, and a lack of competitive teams for games in leagues like Brooklyn-Queen's top soccer and volleyball divisions.

This fall's soccer and volleyball seasons start the process, and for the first time in the girls' leagues, soccer will feature a true citywide championship game between the Brooklyn-Queens and Archdiocesan winner, scheduled for Nov. 6.

In Brooklyn, that means teams like St. Edmund and

by Joe Staszewski

Bishop Kearney will cross over to play teams like St. Vincent Ferrer and St. Catharine in soccer, and Fontbonne Hall will take on Preston and Spellman in volleyball. Softball will feature similar matchups. In basketball, there will be crossover days on Nov. 23 at Monsignor Scanlan and Preston for the lower-level teams like St. Saviour and St. Edmund, and on Dec. 1 at Christ the King featuring some of the leagues' top programs such as Bishop Loughlin.

"We are trying to use these games to assess where everyone kind of fits in," Lewinger said. "So looking toward 2014-2015, we can hopefully come up with a system that works."

This step is important because it's an opportunity not just for teams to get to know each other, but for the coaches to start working together as well. At a meeting at St. John's Prep in April, Lewinger said he saw many coaches introducing themselves to each other.

"Some may have never heard of each other's school, and there they were giving an honest assessment of their programs," Lewinger said.

More work and obstacles lie ahead, but this is an important step forward for the league in providing the athletes with a better experience and competition.

The Clones took the first of the two shortened games in dramatic fashion when Kale Sumner was tagged out at home plate by catcher Eddie Rohan for the last out of the game.

Rohan put the first points on the board in the third, making it home on a throwing error. Patrick "To Infinity and" Biondi hit an RBI single in the fifth to put another run on.

The Cyclones were up 3–1 in the seventh, when the Yankees loaded the bases on three straight walks by Cristian Chivilli. David Wynn entered the game and gave up a single to Tejeda that scored one run. But Jared King's throw to Rohan made it just in time to tag Sumner and save the game.

A nightmare seventh inning plagued the Cyclones as they used three different pitchers, who walked three batters and allowed two runs to score in the second game of the doubleheader.

Tomas Nido started things off for the Clones with a two-run double in the second, but the Cyclones only recorded one more hit the rest of the way, as they were stymied by the Staten Island pitching, which struck out 12 batters.

Meanwhile, the Yankees added three runs in the third on an RBI by Cyclone killer Yeicok Calderon and a tworun double by Mike Ford.

Ricky Knapp allowed two players to get on in the seventh by a hit and a walk, so Johnny Magliozzi replaced him, but he went on to walk two straight batters and allowed two runs to score.

Magliozzi got upset with the umpire and was tossed from the game, forcing Ismael Tijerina, normally a shortstop, to step in and finish the game, who struck out the last batter in a wild finish

He and his teammates fought their way back into the game with defense, in true city style. They pressed full court after trailing 47–26 at the break and began to get easy baskets in transition. Carrington scored eight of his 19 points, including a reverse layup with 15 seconds left in the big third quarter to help New York City get within 58–54 heading into the fourth. The Rutgers-bound Williams added 11 points.

"They're top players in New York," Whitehead said of the Loughlin guards. "They showed that today."

Whitehead became a facilitator in the fourth to help Williams get heated up. The city was trying to fend off the hot shooting of Rosedale Catholic star Isaiah Brisco. Williams buried a 3-pointer from the corner to get the city within 78–75 with 1:17 left in regulation and converted a layup of an ally-oop pass from Whitehead to tie the score at 78–78 with 41 seconds remaining to force overtime.

"I don't know how he saw me," Williams said of Whitehead on the pass.

After their team eventually prevailed, Carrington, Williams and Whitehead left the court feeling they had defended their home turf and earned some bragging rights against New Jersey thanks to some New York City toughness when they easily could have crumbled.

"We kept our composure and showed a lot of heart," Whitehead said. "That's New York City basketball."

The Cyclones used a three-run eighth inning to stun the Renegades last Thursday.

Gavin Cecchini recorded the only hit for the Cyclones in the opening inning, but the Clones didn't record another hit until late in the game. Meanwhile, Hudson Valley scored on a sacrifice fly that seemed to be the winning margin until the eighth.

In the eighth, Patrick "To Infinity and" Biondi led off with a single and Ismael Tijerina reached first on a fielding error that also moved Biondi to second. Cecchini hit a deep sacrifice fly on two strikes to tie the game.

Alex Sanchez walked before James "Papa" Roche hit a single, loading the bases. A wild pitch allowed Tijerina to score the go-ahead run, and Matt "Bright Eyes" Oberste hit another RBI single to score Sanchez.

Hudson Valley used a four-run seventh inning to break open a tied game and the Cyclones came up just short in the loss that dropped the Clones back to .500.

The Cyclones put a dent in the lead in the top of the eighth when Gavin Cecchini hit an infield single and James "Papa" Roche hit his third home run of the year.

The comeback attempt fell short in the ninth, however, when Cyclones' batters went down in order.

The Clones fell behind early, but Roche quickly tied the game in the second with a dinger over the left field wall.

Brooklyn piled on three

Vermont cut into the lead and put the Cyclones in a jam in the eighth by getting two runners on base with no outs. But Magliozzi entered and retired all six batters he saw for the save.

An RBI single by Vermont's Jaycob Brugman was enough to beat the Cyclones, whose bats were kept silent by Vermont pitching.

Both starting pitchers went deep into the game, keeping most batters off the bases. Clones' starter Miller Diaz pitched six innings, striking out seven batters. The lone run came in the sixth, when Ryan Huck doubled to deep center, made it to third on a flyout, and then Brugman proceeded to hit the RBI single to right field.

The Cyclones got one hit in each of the first five innings, but only one runner could advance past first Gavin Cecchini was perfect from the plate, hitting four singles in as many atbats in the loss. But Cecchini only made it past first base once and the Clones never threatened to score.

The Cyclones used six hits to score three runs in a wild eighth inning to come back to beat Vermont on Sunday.

The Cyclones took a 3-1 lead into the eighth inning on RBIs by Anthony Chavez, L.J. "Mini-Maz" Mazzilli and Jared King. Rob "Notso-silent G" Gsellman pitched all seven innings, striking out five batters.

But as soon as David Wynn took the mound, the Vermont bats exploded with a single and a double, followed by two straight walks, allowing one run to score. A sacrifice fly scored another run, and James "Papa" Roche committed a throwing error, allowing another run to score.

Jefferson players boycott gridiron for ousted coach

Orange Wave could crash this season over controversial firing

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Stephen Edwards has been fired as Thomas Jefferson High School's head football coach after six seasons because of a weight room accident back in March, and the move may prevent the Orange Wave from fielding a true varsity team this season.

With Edwards gone — and his trusted assistant coach Gus Cyrus quitting in solidarity — any of the squad's returning players have considered transferring, or are simply refusing to play for new head man Frederick Nash and his staff, according to team captain Jonathan Troche.

"Losing them is like a slap in the face, because these are guys that really give an arm and leg out for all of us," Trouche said.

Edwards said principal James Anderson fired him in May because of a weight room injury sustained by rising junior Christian Valles Rivera. Valles Rivera chipped his tooth when he leaned too far down during a workout and was hit in the mouth with a bar while spotting for a teammate at a workout, according to Cyrus.

Cyrus, who has handled the bulk of game-day coaching responsibilities, was supervising the workout alone because Edwards was running late because of a flat tire.

Cyrus said Valles Rivera left without telling anyone and he only found out about it when Valles Rivera's parents came back with their son shortly afterwards to ask what happened, and the matter was deemed an accident.

Cyrus didn't even tell Edwards about the incident when he arrived because Cyrus felt the situation was cleared up, but Valles Rivera and his parents filed a report with the school later that week.

The incident led to fallout beyond Valles Rivera's dental damage because Department of Education rules require that a certified teacher with a file number be present for all team workouts, games and practices. Since Cyrus was a parent coordinator at the school, not a teacher, the workout technically should not have been allowed to start until Edwards arrived.

Still, Edwards feels the events didn't merit him being fired.

"I've done nothing wrong," he said.

"I let the kids in," said Cyrus. "It was my fault. That's how we did it."

Edwards tried to file a grievance through the union, but said it would not take up his case.

Anderson referred all inquiries to the Department of Education, but department spokesperson Margie Feinberg said she could not comment on the incident because it is under investigation.

Troche organized an in-betweenperiod sit-in outside Anderson's office in May, attended by more than 300 kids, in hopes of getting their coaches back, but to no avail. Nash, Edwards's defensive coordinator during his first season, has organized workouts for the team, but they have been under-attended so far, according to Troche. Nash did not return calls seeking comment.

Trouche said he went for the first week of workouts, but the team eventually decided to band together to try and get their old coaching staff back. The Orange Wave had just 33 kids on the varsity roster last season and only 27 on the junior varsity with the season set to open Sept. 7 at home against Boys & Girls. The players say they have no problem losing an entire season for Edwards and Cyrus.

"Most of the captains right now, they are trying to stand strong and miss practice because we want a change," Trouche said. "If we don't get a change then I'm sorry. I just can't play."

Rising junior running back Eugene Qualls has already chosen to transfer, Edwards said.

Other players, like rising senior offensive lineman Joseph Arroyo, are considering going elsewhere if Edwards isn't rehired.

"We want him back," said Arroyo, who may head to Florida.

Thomas Jefferson has been one of the Public School Athletic League's fastest-rising programs in recent years under Edwards and Cyrus,

The team won the league's Bowl Division title in 2008 and have since moved up to City Championship division, the league's top division. Last year the Orange Wave went 6–2 before being upset in the opening round of the playoffs. Jefferson has produced four Division I players on Edwards's watch, including Ebenezer Ogundeko (now at Clemson) and has a strong record of kids graduating.

The school's current players are not happy to see their coaches gone.

"They do way more than what is expected," Trouche said. "Losing them, it kind of hurts."

Bishop Loughlin guards Khadeen Carrington and Mike Williams did the grunt work at the Nike Tournament of Champions, sparking their New York City boy's hoops team back from a 21-point halftime deficit, while Abraham Lincoln star Isaiah Whitehead struggled to find his scoring stroke.

But it was Whitehead's time to shine when the city's all-star team managed to force overtime against its New Jersey counterpart at the tourney, and Williams made sure to let Whitehead know he had to close the deal.

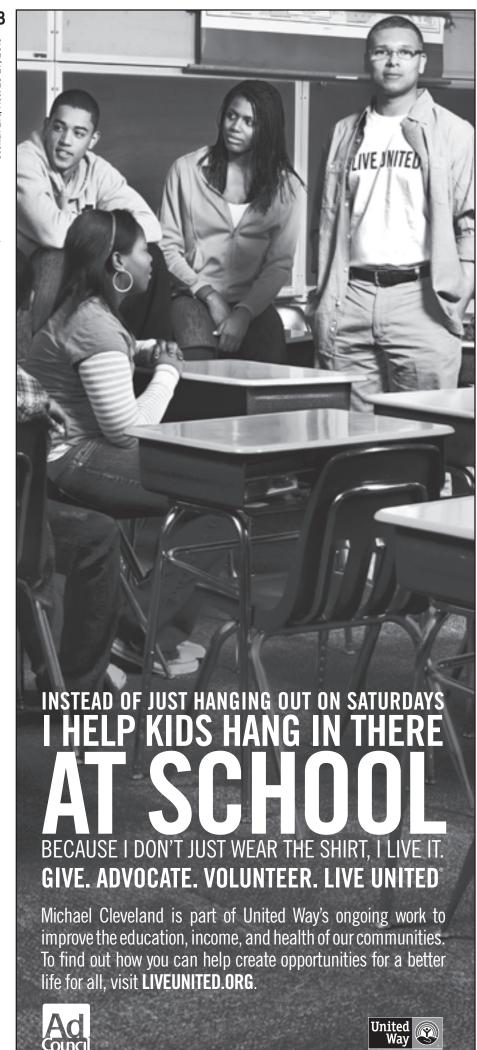

"I told him, 'Yo, you have to take us home,'" Williams said. "'Everyone says you're one of the best players in New York. It's time to show up.'"

Whitehead did not disappoint.

The rising senior scored 25 points overall, with 20 coming in the second half, and nine in overtime to propel New York City to a thrilling 90-88 win over New Jersey in the Nike Tournament of Champions title game at the Brooklyn Navy Yard's Duggal Greenhouse on Saturday. Whitehead, who also had 29 points in the semifinals, was named the game's most valuable player. His spinning layup to start the overtime gave the city its first lead of the game.

"I knew my shots would fall sooner or later," said Whitehead. "I couldn't make anything. I was making air balls, missing layups. I just kept my composure and kept shooting."

Lobster the way it's suppose to taste at Jordan's

BY CAMILLE SPERRAZZA

The lobster roll at Jordan's Lobster Dock has clawed its way to the top of the heap.

"We've got the best lobster roll in New York. The New York Daily News said so," says Bill Jordan, who runs the wholesale store and restaurant with his brothers.

The lobster roll — "A quarter pound of pure lobster meat served on a toasted hot dog bun" — is one of the signature items on the restaurant's menu.

"We don't add celery or other fillers that you'll find at other places. It's pure 100-percent lobster," says Jordan.

He doesn't even add mayo. Tartar sauce, mayonnaise, and lettuce are served on the side, allowing the natural flavors of the lobster to speak for it-

One of the reasons it is so exceptional is that, "We don't cut corners," says Jordan. "We never compromise when it comes to quality."

It starts with getting the right product.

'We are strictly buyers of USA products," he says. "Our lobster is from Maine. Our calamari is domestic."

Experience is another

"We were the first to introduce the lobster roll to New York," he says. His father started the establishment in 1938, now in its 75th year — standing strong through tough economies and bouncing back from the beating Hurricane Sandy threw its way last fall. The restaurant was closed for about six weeks, renovations were made, and Jordan credits Borough President Markowitz with helping Jordan's throughout the ordeal. Like a hardened sailor, Jordan's Lobster Dock took on the sea, and declared victory.

Providingvalue to customers is another reason for its success.

"We buy lobster by the ton," says Jordan. This means they get the best pricing, and pass these savings on to the consumer.

"We are a no place," he frills says. There are no waiters to take your order. "We cook, and focus on quality. You pick it up, sit down, and enjoy it."

He says this is good for families because they don't have to leave another 15 to 20 percent for a tip.

"Every little bit helps,"

Enjoy lobster steamed, broiled, or prepared one of the ways offered on the blackboard of daily specials. If you prefer, you can pick up live lobsters and cook them at home yourself. Or, you can call ahead. and Jordan's will steam them for you, so you can take them home, ready to serve.

The restaurant serves a variety of treasures from the sea: shrimp, mussels, clams, oysters, soft-shell crabs, crab legs, fish cakes, swordfish, salmon, tuna steak, and calamari, among them. Seafood platters served with corn on the cob or French fries and cole slaw.

Chicken. burgers, pasta, hot dogs, and steak are also on the menu, as are mozzarella sticks, zucchini sticks, onion rings, and sweet potato fries. You can also get a nice bowl of clam chowder or a cup of hot lobster bisque.

Enjoy it all with a cold beer or a glass of wine. For dessert, there's cheesecake, chocolate cake, and key lime pie.

Eating lobster is good for you.

"A lobster is lower in fat, calories, and cholesterol than white meat chicken and turkey," Jordan says.

Jordan's Lobster Dock [3165 Harkness Ave., corner of Knapp Street in Sheepshead Bay, (800) 404-CLAW, www.JordansLobster.com.] Open seven days a week, 9 am-10 pm, and on Fridays and Saturdays until 11 pm. There's a Jordan's Lobster Farm in Long Beach: [1 Pettit Place in Island Park, (516) 889-3314, www. Jordanlobsterfarms.com]. Open seven days a week, 9 am-10 pm.

FITTED BICYCLES

These handmade rides are built for every size

By Natalie Musumeci
etting a new bike is a lot like getting a new suit.
Handmade bicycle builders in Brooklyn say that before constructing a twowheeler for a customer they take full body measurements of the person to make sure that the bicycle is a perfect fit for the rider's body.

"It's fully custom so the smallest detail is specific to that person," said frame builder Benjamin Peck of Fort Greene's Benjamin's Cycles, adding that a factory-made bicycle cannot accommodate riders who might have longer legs and shorter torsos or the other way around. "A custom built bike can accommodate them."

Peck's hand-built bicycles, which are all engraved with his signature, start at frames for $900 and the prices only go up from there when choosing the wheels and bike components like the handlebars, seating, and other customized add-ons.

"There's a high attention to detail. The bike isn't worked on in an assembly line through five different people — it's worked on by one person and that one person builds it from start to finish," said Peck, who specializes in all-steel custom bikes that cater to the city commuter.

Peck recently teamed up with David Perry, owner of Manhattan's Bike Works NYC and a former US National team cyclist, and Harry Schwartzman, founder of the Brooklyn Bike Jumble, to create the upcoming inaugural Bike Cult Show — a two-wheeled version of an auto show that will only feature handmade rides.

Nearly 20 independent bikesmiths who hand-build one-of-a-kind bicycles will converge at the Warsaw in Greenpoint at the end of the month for the two-day festival on Aug. 30 and Aug. 31 that will spotlight the intricate two-wheeled creations from masterful bike crafters across the northeast.

Bike craftsman Thomas Callahan of Williamsburg's Horse Cycles, whose two-wheelers will also be featured in the show, said that he specializes vintage-looking bicycles made with classic materials and high performance bicycles using newer materials like carbon fiber.

Callahan said that in order to create the two distinct looks he uses different methods of bike frame welding – tungsten inert gas welding for the high performance bike and gas welding for the classic-looking bike.

Callahan's two-wheeled hand-built bikes start at $1,800 for a frame and fork.

Other Brookyn-based bike craftsman who will be showing off their creations at the bike show include Johnny Coast of Coast Cycles, Seth Rosko of Rosko Cycles, Lance Mercado of Squarebuilt, and Jack Wolf of Ceremony Bikes.

Peck said that festival attendees will get to feast their eyes on "the most beautiful handcrafted bikes in America that are all custom-crafted down to the best you can get."

Bike Cult Show at Warsaw (261 Driggs Ave. between Eckford and Leonard streets in Greenpoint, bikecultshow.com). Aug. 30, noon–9 pm, Aug. 31, 10 am–4 pm, $10 per day, $15 two-day entry, free for kids under 14.

The best reads
— handpicked by local bookstore employees

WORD's pick: "Love Dishonor, Marry, Die, Cherish, Perish" by David Rakoff

Against my expectations, I adored this book. I am highly allergic to hype, and this book couldn't really have more. It's Rakoff's first and only novel, published posthumously, and it's in verse, and it's got the full Chip Kidd treatment, plus illustrations by Seth. There's a lot going on there — but it was lovely. The rhyme scheme is very Seussian, which seems weird at first but then turns out to be a lot of fun even during the sad parts (and there are a lot of sad parts), and Rakoff's wit has a lot of bite to it.

— Jenn Northington, WORD [126 Franklin St. at Milton Street in Greenpoint, (718) 383–0096, www.wordbrooklyn.com].

The BookMark Shoppe's pick: "Winter of the World" by Ken Follett

Book Two of Ken Follett's Century Trilogy is finally releasing in paperback. "Winter of the World" picks up right where Book 1 ended, with saga, intrigue, and deception, featuring five families from different parts of the world including America, Russia, England, and Germany.

The story revolves around great historical moments beginning with World War II and through the Cold War. Follett is a truly gifted story teller, weaving history and fiction seamlessly. This historical epic is a great read, and fans should also go back to "Pillars of the Earth."

— Bina Valenzano, co-owner, The BookMark Shoppe [8415 Third Ave. between 84th and 85th streets in Bay Ridge, (718) 833–5115, www.bookmarkshoppe.com].

Greenlight Bookstore's pick: "Tumbledown" by Robert Boswell

Funny, sad, and slightly off-kilter, Robert Boswell's "Tumbledown" is brilliant. A story about a man's life coming undone, the book brings together many different characters, all fumbling about to make sense of the chaos. Perfect for fans of "Silver Linings Playbook" and "The Squid and the Whale."

— Emily Russo, Greenlight Bookstore [686 Fulton St. between S. Elliott Place and S. Portland Avenue in Fort Greene, (718) 246–0200, www.greenlightbookstore.com].

hat better way to cap off the summer than with an outdoor display of everything Williamsburg is famous for: local bands, local cinema, and local food from local vendors — all in the nabe's newest local park.

For three Tuesday nights in August and September, comes a music, movie, and food extravaganza in Havemeyer Park — the temporary community art, bike, yoga, and veggie space at the Domino Sugar factory development site.

Organizers Nitehawk Cinema said they have been pushing for weeks to get into the park and bring its indie stylings to a bigger audience.

"We wanted to do what we normally do at our cinema, but on a larger scale outdoors," said cinema owner Matthew Viragh.

Each night — Aug. 20, Sept. 10, and Sept. 17 — will have a theme, with a matching band and moviee playing on the park's performance platform. The Aug. 20 event featured Brooklyn's premiere Dolly Parton cover band Doll Parts, and the Queen of Country Music's famed film "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." On Sept. 10, Michael Arenella and the Dreamland Orchestra — a Brooklyn-based throwback swing band — will perform before surrendering the stage to the 2002 Jazz Age musical "Chicago." And on Sept. 17, filmscoring septet Morricone Youth will play a set of '60s spy songs before a screening of the James Bond classic "Goldfinger."

And, of course, Viragh said there will be plenty of food, made right here in the hippest borough in the world. Nitehawk will be serving up plenty of its popcorn, while brunch hotspot Brooklyn Star will be on hand with its beloved chicken and waffles. Oddfellows Ice Cream will be scooping out its eclectic, small-batch ice cream flavors, and Brooklyn Brewery will be quenching everyone's alcoholism with its lager.

THE ARTISTS ARE PRESENT

A night of performance art takes over the museum

By Jaime Lutz

t night, the museum comes alive.
For one evening, performers are going to fill the Brooklyn Museum with all manners of theater, sound, and dance in what is a recent trend of fine-art establishments embracing live works in their usually quiet halls.

"I think there's a hunger both on the institution side and the public side for experiential events, as opposed to just observing art," said Stephen Shelley, who is organizing the event as a part of the Beat Festival, which is a week-long series of performance art in Brooklyn.

"People want experiences."

Much like Jay-Z turning the Pace Gallery into a bizarre concert space or Tilda Swinton taking a nap at the Museum of Modern Art, various artists who specialize in experimental theater and art installations will attempt to change visitors's expectations of a trip to the museum.

"We're playing off the idea of a museum tour," said Liza Wade Green, one of the members of a theater group called the Institute for Psychogeographic Adventure.

"We'll be in every nook and cranny of the museum."

And if that seems scary and unpredictable, a ticket-holder can also use the map

The night is a way to kick off the Beat Festival and highlight all the featured artists, some of whom are coming back to the Museum during the week while others are exploring other stages outside a traditional theater, such as the lobby of 1 Metrotech Center, home of this newspaper.

hese dancers are light on their feet.

"Becoming-Corpus" is a combination of video and movement coming to the Brooklyn Academy of Music, where performers must react to images projected all over the stage, blanketing the people—seemingly challenging them to adjust to the light patterns.

"The optical effects produce a space that can be static or kinetic," said choreographer Ximena Garnica. "One usually dances in a still setting, but when the space moves, your rhythm too, has to change or you'll topple."

During the rehearsals, conducted in a Williamsburg studio dubbed "Cave," one can hear Garnica shout, "Interact with the space and each other," as dancers morph fluidly like latex figures. With under a month until the premier of the show, the practice sessions are conducted with absolute diligence.

The production is the work of a partnership between two different disciplines. The Columbian-born Garnica's choreography is joined by Japanese-born Shige Moriya video programming.

"I use video as a lighting source," said Moriya. "Most of the abstract images are derived from nature trips such as during camping."

The two artistic directors of the show form Leimay, an arts organization that not only produce their works but run diverse programs year-round. Their bulletin includes artist residencies, training programs, an online network, and summer festivals. Moriya and Garnica track the arts organization's beginnings to sometime in 1996. Most of their work explores the interconnectivity of dance, sound, video, and visual art.

Along with the show, visual art by Garnica and Moriya will be exhibited at the performance space. The artworks act as historical documentation of earlier and discarded creative processes leading to the "Becoming-Corpus," which marks Leimay's first time performing at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Gallery becomes park for new exhibition his exhibition gives new meaning to the phrase "outsider art."

A South Slope gallery will turn into a public park for the next month in an ode to the late landscape designer Frederick Law Olmsted, the man behind such green landmarks as Prospect Park and Central Park.

Starting Aug. 24, Open Source Gallery will host picnics, theatrical and musical performances, and a film series inspired by the man as part of the exhibition "We Know Now Exactly Where or How."

The poetic title comes from Olmsted himself, who, after visiting England's Isle of Wight in 1850, remarked, "Gradually and silently the charm comes over us; we know not exactly where or how."

Curator Elizabeth Spavento was inspired to create a space that explores that charm, and other ineffable qualities of parks, in an exhibition that relies on community participation.

To that end, Spavento is taking an interdisciplinary approach, bringing together music, theater, and art throughout the exhibition's run.

Some of the free public events scheduled include public picnics in partnership with the Greenwood Heights CSA; a mural by Molly Dilworth painted on the gallery doors; a live performance by the music group Exact Change Project; film screenings; a performance by artists Athena Kokoronis and Jan Mun that explores birds, trees, plants, and fungi; a bike workshop hosted by Sustainable Flatbush; and, kicking things off on Saturday, a performance of "Olmsted in Autumn," a new play by Anne Phelan based on the life and work of the landscape architect.

"My tendency whenever I curate is to approach one topic from as many different perspectives as possible," said Spavento.

"There's something for everybody."

And, of course, the gallery itself will be a piece of work, as the former two-car garage will be outfitted with trees and planters, providing shade and places to sit or read, just like you would normally find in a park.

"Imagine a pocket park that's inside instead of outside," said Spavento. "I don't want to reveal too much, I want people to come down and experience it."

The mind of Dick Doblin is a strange place.

The private eye from Pittsburgh dispenses words of wisdom and puts on a serious face, but take a closer look at his so-called advice and you might glean a guy who's like most noir detectives. He's seen more than he can handle.

Here are some of his tips for living in Brooklyn, both for aspiring detectives as well as the rest of us, courtesy of Doblin himself:

- 1. Look both ways before crossing Dick Doblin.
- 2. Never trust the G Train. She'll stab you in the back.
- 3. Most crimes occur in the home, so never go home.
- 4. Even you, Joe Citizen, can help the NYPD. Next time you see a boy in blue, give him a big hug and say, "This is from Dick."
- 5. You never know if food in Brooklyn will be "vegan" so bring some bacon bits just in case.
- 6. Is it illegal to smell bad on the subway? No, but it should be.
- 7. A good private eye never reveals his clients unless that client is Spike Lee and he still owes you money.
- 8. Being a private eye isn't all meeting women next to steamy sewer grates on dark nights. But sometimes it is - and sometimes that woman is names Lucille Marlow and she'll break your heart because she doesn't know what's good for... I'm sorry, what was your question?
- 9. If Dick Doblin was mayor, you know what would be illegal? Plaid shirts and quinoa.
- 10. If you don't have any money or fancy equipment, make a web series about characters that also don't.

BIG TIPPER

Clueless film detective gives advice

By Danielle Furfaro

e might have been a successful private eye in Pittsburgh, but Brooklyn is a whole other beast.

A comedy web series presents the character of Dick Doblin, a detective with a shady past, and an even murkier grasp of reality. The mustachioed investigator possesses the swagger and over-confidence of a 1930s noir detective, but he struggles to talk to cute girls and obnoxious neighbors as he tries to crack the case of his stolen camera — which he calls a picture machine.

And if the hipster detective shtick has gotten old for viewers already familiar with the HBO series "Bored to Death," then the creators of the Doblin series promise they're doing something entirely different, with their cinematic inspiration coming from "source material" films such as "The Blair Witch Project," and "Cloverfield."

"I never saw it done successfully in a comedy way, so we wanted to see if we could do it," said Ross Brunetti, one of the creators of the show.

Also, there were more practical concerns for making it a single-camera style shoot, like

"If you make it in a low-budget style, then you can make something low-budget without it looking low-budget," said Hall.

"It's never going to look like a network show."

For the protagonist of the show, the transition from the Steel City to New York City has apparently been rough. The first episode reveals he left his former city due to romantic and legal complications. But still, the delusional detective dishes out pro-tips on how to be a private eye — such as "acting natural," and "finding your man."

Producers Tyler G. Hall and Brunetti met when they both worked at Nitehawk, the dine-in cinema on Metropolitan Avenue. They became fast friends and started taking improv classes at Upright Citizens Brigade in Manhattan. They came up with the idea for the series when they put their friend Lucas Whitehead, who plays the eponymous character, in a trench coat and realized that he looked perfect for the part.

Do You Suffer From

Asthma:

A disorder affecting the airways of the lungs. People with asthma have Allergic airways that cause Wheezing and cough in response to certain "triggers", leading to difficulty in breathing. The airway narrowing is caused by inflammation and swelling of the airway lining, the tightening of the airway muscles, and the production of excess mucus. This results in a reduced airflow in and out of the lungs. You may be waking up at night coughing or wheezing after exertion. Why suffer; today's treatments may permit you to breath and live much better.

A primer on education for the next mayor ew York City's education system, like the rest of America's, has been hijacked by politicians who are eager to tout their success at making much-needed gains.

But since the political class is a transient one, as elected leaders come and go — except in Albany — due to term limits, we are constantly seeing new programs that are continuously depleting our ability to make progress and prepare all kinds of learners to become "educated citizens"

Remember "No Child Left Behind?" That was the George W. Bush administration's catchy title for revamping public education in America. That lasted about eight years, and was then replaced by "Race to the Top," another peppy slogan invented by the Obama-land educrats. How did that work? Well, it got a number of states to commit to important reforms that got them a pot of federal money.

MAYORAL SPIN CYCLE

But has it made our overall education system better? Are our children better off today in the classroom than they were four years ago? Twelve years ago?

Thirty years ago? No, no, and no.

And now comes along another slickly named new idea: the "Common Core Curriculum." I'm not sure more than 10 people in New York can give you a comprehensive explanation of what "Common Core" means, but it is now the talk of the town and has emerged as the new hot topic in the mayoral race.

In a nutshell, "Common Core" means that we are now shifting the way we assess student progress, with a greater emphasis on critical thinking, higher reasoning, and strong writing skills. These are, obviously, all worthy goals, and who could argue that this is a long-overdue reform in an ossified education system.

But the educrats who designed this system botched so many things, I don't know where to start.

No big smiles or other joyful expressions by 6 months

First, here's an anecdote that sums up part of the problem. Last Spring, my very intelligent 13-year-old daughter came home and told me she took this very hard statewide test. "Daddy, I had to skip eight questions. We didn't even learn that stuff. Why would they test that?" This, from a student, who tested well enough to get into New York's most prestigious public high schools.

It was one of those rare moments as a parent when words failed me and I couldn't explain to her why she was being tested on material she had never seen before.

So, my question now is: why wasn't Common Core phased in? We've known about it since 2009, so why weren't teachers prepared to teach it much earlier and then our kids wouldn't be set up for a test everyone knew the majority would fail. Is making children and their parents frightened about lack of "proficiency" a political policy to shock the system?

And what about that large segment of students who may not be well-suited for liberal arts educations or high-end professional careers — shouldn't we be preparing curriculums or tests that play to their relative strengths? Why, in education, do we always fall for the mistaken notion that "one size fits all."

Tests are not a substitute for great teaching and real learning. They are a blunt tool that measures "progress" and "proficiency," but we now live in an age where everything must be quantified so we can hold students, parents, and teachers "accountable."

I think I speak for many parents and a silent majority of concern education citizens when I say that we should slow down, focus on training great teachers, and make sure that our children learn effective communications and basic computational and reasoning skills.

But let us not lurch from one panacea to another — from "No Child Left Behind" to "Race to the Top" to "Common Core Curriculum," we are just packaging the latest fad in education reform and losing sight of the fundamentals of teaching and learning.

As one pretty poor student named Albert Einstein once famously said: "Not everything that can be counted, counts. And not everything that counts, can be counted."

How true.

Rogue pols

To the editor,

Politicians are so dumb that if they weren't politicians, they would probably

Too many of them think they're big shots. It takes no time for them to turn into swindlers. Or were they that way all along? Whatever happened to the oaths of office they take to honor the public trust?

There's a whole rogue's gallery of them. Disgraced, former state senator Carl Kruger pocketed more than a million dollars in bribes before he was caught, tried, and packed off to prison for seven years. Fellow ex-state Sen. Pedro Espada Jr. was sentenced to five years for looting a nonprofit to redo his home, get spa treatments, and enjoy lobster dinners on the taxpayers' dime.

State Sens. Eric Adams (D-Crown Heights), Velmanette Montgomery (D-Bedford-Stuyvesant), and John Sampson (D-Canarsie) are all currently being investigated for a variety of alleged con jobs.

The racketeering goes all the way up to Capitol Hill. In 2010, a Texas court convicted former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay for conspiracy and money laundering, and sentenced him to three years in jail.

Porky Christine

To the editor.

Mayoral candidate Council Speaker Christine Quinn has done nothing to stop her murky slush-fund trail, raising questions about her allegiance to special interest groups, if she is elected.

Sadly, she might actually have a shot, given her sorry crop of challengers. Quinn gave hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars to the High Line project on the west side of Manhattan. In return, the Friends of the High Line has showered her with more than $50,000 since 1999. Millennium Partners, a nationwide real estate developer, is another favored snout in Quinn's endless barrel of pork.

To top it all, Quinn is endorsed by Goldman Sachs' fat cat Lloyd Blankfein, whom Forbes named one of "The Most Outrageous CEOs of 2009" for bilking low interest rates and making huge trading profits during the market meltdown of the late 2000s.

Special interest groups have a friend in Christine Quinn. That makes her no friend of the average New Yorker.

Chance encounter

To the editor,

Too often we focus on the negative, but I witnessed something truly inspiring the other day.

I was on the B9 bus, and an elderly woman with a cane and shopping bags got on. Three teen boys were sprawled on the front seats, talking loudly and joshing around. They seemed like the kind of kids who made you wish you had waited for the next bus.

However, as soon as they saw the senior, they sprang up and rushed to make room for her. One of them escorted her to a seat. Another boy gathered up her shopping bags and put them beside her. And the third teen gave the woman a big smile. and began chatting with her. He asked her how her day was going, and complimented her on her hat. You could tell the woman was loving it.

Then these youngsters wished her a good day and moved to the rear of the bus. They must have kept their eyes on the woman because when she rang the bell to get off, one of them rushed up to help her with her packages.

I was so impressed with the conduct of these teens, that it has made me rethink my attitudes about people in general. From now on, I won't be judging a book by Ruth Weingarten

Not so long ago, our avenues used to be full of thriving mom-and-pop shops, but now banks, drug stores, and telephone companies are pushing them out because their rents are too high.

There's a lot of talk that NYPD should abolish stop-and-frisk. How else are cops supposed to act on their suspicions? Or should they just suppress them?

Sandy-blasted Sunny's to reopen

Red Hook watering hole shines again Aug. 29

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

Break out the aged whiskey — Sunny's Bar is back!

The more-than-a-century-old Red Hook watering hole is reopening its doors later this month for the first time since Hurricane Sandy ripped through the waterfront neighborhood nearly 10 months ago. The superstorm clobbered the Conover Street pub with floodwaters that completely wiped out the bar's basement, causing major structural and electrical damage. But now, after a lot of sweat and tears and more than $100,000 in repairs, legendary barkeep couple Sunny Balzano and Tone Johansen are reopening the saloon on Aug. 29, Balzano's 78th birthday.

"I never considered that we wouldn't get here," Balzano said.

The Sandy-battered bar did not qualify for a disaster assistance loan from the Small Business Administration because it is so old, so it had to rely on the help of hundreds of Sunny's fans to get on the road to recovery, according to Balzano. Supporters pulled through in spades, first contributing $35,000 in December through a Kickstarter cam-when Sandy hit and narrowly escaped the rushing waters.

Sunny's among the last Red Hook businesses still closed after Sandy.

Balzano, whose grandfather opened the bar in 1890, said he plans to repaint the facade of the bar black and transform it into a blackboard where patrons can sign their names and create a living memorial to the community's support.

The grand reopening emony will include tunes from the band Xylophone People and Johansen says that she is breathless with anticipation.

"It's like an out-of-body experience — I can't wait," said Johansen, adding that all remains to be done is installing the ice machine and stocking the shelves with liquor.

G'pointers: Biker death preventable

Residents say recent deadly crash happened on a neighborhood drag strip

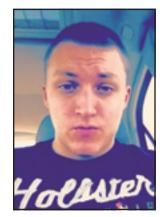

BY DANIELLE FURFARO

A teen died last week in a motorcycle accident and now Greenpoint residents are demanding police halt the speeding and drag racing they say has consumed the north end of the neighborhood for years.

Eighteen-year-old Jakub B. Kizer was killed last Thursday night when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car at the intersection of Manhattan Avenue and Eagle Street. Kizer's body sustained massive trauma in the crash.

Police have not said whether Kizer, who lived on Nassau Avenue between Monitor and North Henry streets, was racing at the time of his death, but neighbors say the speeding and racing are out of control and police have done little to stop it.

"The motorcycle and car races happen pretty much every weekend," said Laura Hoffman. "They come racing right down Manhattan

Hoffman said she got so fed up that she went to a police precinct meeting six months ago to talk about the issue. At that time, she says officers promised her they would keep a watch on the area, but she claims nothing has changed, and that the problem has gotten worse this summer.

Other residents agree. saying that speeding is not limited to Manhattan Avenue, and claiming that the speeders are a danger to themselves and pedestrians because drivers ignore the rules of the road.

"They speed down Commercial Street and Box Street all summer," said Keith Sirchio. "I wouldn't walk out onto Commercial Street. There is a stop sign there that most people ignore."

The drag racing in the area dates back to a time when there were many desolate streets with few cars, residents said.

Police did not return repeated requests for comment.

All in all, it was just another plant in the wall.

A Downtown plaza that neighbors busy Flatbush Avenue got spruced up by students from George Westinghouse High School on Thursday. The green-thumbed teens crafted a living wall from discarded crates and vegetable plants, adding welcome greenery to the austere plaza between Gold and Willoughby streets.

The 14 students have been working with the Downtown Brooklyn Partnership on the area they are calling Future Plaza since May, enlisting the help of La Fantastica Design Studio to create an aesthetically pleasing plan for the space.

And the wall is just the beginning. Next spring, the group will install another vegetable garden, flat this time.

Bushwick is big on 'Buck Hunter'

BY JAIME LUTZ

It comes as no surprise that Pinebox Rock Shop, Bushwick's diveiest bar that serves only vegan drinks, is also the Big Buck Hunter capital of New York — racking up 285 more games in a month than its closest competition.

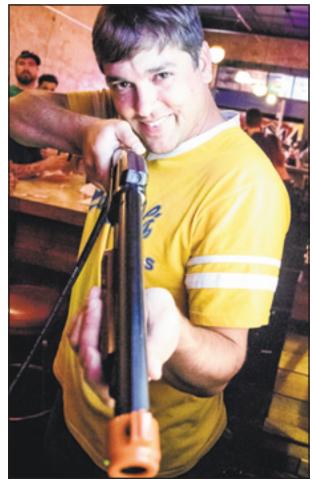

Nor does it come as a surprise that the bar, on Grattan Street between Morgan and Bogart streets, was an honored stop on Thursday during the video game's Summer Training Tour, which pits Buck amateurs against the Buck master — Chris Fream, the 2012 world Big Buck Hunter champion.

Yes — that exists.

In honor of the visitation from the champ, the bar had four Buck Hunter consoles on free play, saving quarters better used for laundry (but not tips, we hope).

There was even a minitournament, hosted by the "Big Buck Girls" (models in tight T-shirts). That this was part of the event should be obvious to Buck fans, since the game has almost as much cleavage as it does caribou.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Pursuant to Section 695(2)(b) of the General Municipal Law and Section 1802(6)(j) of the Charter, notice is hereby given that the Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") of the City of New York ("City") has proposed the sale of the following City-owned property (collectively, "Disposition Area") in the Borough of Brooklyn:

Address

137 Jamaica Avenue

Block/Lot 3487/p/o Lot 20

Under the Section 202 Supportive Housing Program for the Elderly, not-for-profit sponsors selected by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") purchase land from the City or from private owners and then construct residential buildings (or rehabilitate existing vacant buildings) on such land. HUD provides acquisition, construction, and permanent financing through a capital advance and the City provides tax exemption pursuant to Section 422 of the Real Property Tax Law. The completed buildings provide rental housing for elderly persons of low income and receive operating subsidies from HUD through a project rental assistance contract.

HPD has designated Cypress Hills Senior Housing Development Fund Corporation ("Sponsor") as qualified and eligible to purchase and redevelop the Disposition Area under the Section 202 Supportive Housing Program for the Elderly. The City proposes to sell the Disposition Area to the Sponsor at the price of $1 per tax lot pursuant to Article 16 of the General Municipal Law. The Sponsor will thereafter be required to undertake the new construction of a 5-story elevator building in the Disposition Area. When completed, the building will provide 53 units of rental housing for elderly persons of low income, plus one unit for a superintendent.

The appraisal and the proposed Land Disposition Agreement and Project Summary are available for public examination at the office of HPD, 100 Gold Street, Room 5-A1, New York, New York on business days during business hours.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that a public hearing will be held on September 9, 2013 at Second Floor Conference Room, 22 Reade Street, Manhattan at 10:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as the matter may be reached on the calendar, at which time and place those wishing to be heard will be given an opportunity to be heard concerning the proposed sale of the Disposition Area pursuant to Section 695(2)(b) of the General Municipal Law and Section 1802(6)(j) of the Charter.

Individuals requesting sign language interpreters should contact the Mayor's Office of Contract Services, Public Hearings Unit, 253 Broadway, Room 915, New York, New York 10007, (212) 788-7490, no later than seven (7) business days prior to the public hearing. Shake Shack on tap for Dumbo

Three makes a trend and Brooklyn is trending toward Shake Shack!

The milkshake and burger joint is coming to Dumbo, making it the third in the borough by the time it opens in the old Pete's Downtown location in mid-2014.

The upscale burger chain announced the new restaurant last Wednesday. Shake Shack will take over the large space in the prime location on Old Fulton Street at Water Street, steps from the Brooklyn Bridge Park, and its opening will come on the heels of a new Barclays Center location.

"Amazing views of the Brooklyn Bridge and Manhattan skyline? We're in!" Shake Shack said on its Facebook page.

Restaurateur Danny Meyer's famous patty parlor will fill a restaurant space that has been vacant since the landmark Pete's Downtown closed in early 2012. The corner building, built in 1835, once housed the Franklin House Hotel, which anchored an important center of trade before the construction of the Brooklyn Bridge. The new Shake Shack will have some iconic neighbors to contend with, sitting next door to the River Cafe and down Old Fulton Street from Grimaldi's.

The cow product-centric eatery's first location opened to great fanfare in 2011.

R-ide the new Brooklyn local!

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

Straphangers commuting along the R in Brooklyn are enjoying quicker trips and brighter, cleaner, more modern trains thanks to the closure of the line's link to Manhattan — but it won't last, according to the Metropolitan Transit Authority.

The agency said that its 14-month shutdown of the Montague Street tunnel the tube under the East River — for repairs related to Hurricane Sandy has meant Kings County commuters can move about in their own borough without having to deal with backups from the Manhattan and Queens section of the line.

"That means trains aren't being held back and you're seeing more seamless service in Brooklyn," said transit spokesman Kevin Ortiz.

Bay Ridge commuters are also riding in much newer cars than before. The agency services the older R46 model cars that usually run on the R line — which have been in the system since the Koch Administration — at a maintenance facility in Queens, so Ortiz said the transit authority would be unlikely to transfer them back to Brooklyn while the Montague tunnel is closed.

As a result, R riders are getting a taste of the newer R160 trains normally reserved for J, Z, L, M, E, F, N, and Q line commuters.

But the convenience for those who both live and work on the Brooklyn side of the line will come to an end once the tunnel reopens next fall. Ortiz defended the agency's plan to again stick the Bay Ridge to Forest Hills local with the nearly 40-year-old trains, pointing out that the length of the cars makes them only compatible with a handful of lines, the R among them. He also argued that the old cars still run fine.

Driving need for parts

A group of car-part thieves have been pulling the catalytic converters out of cars in the neighborhood, police say.

Crooks stole the converter — which is a very expensive part made with platinum — out of a car parked on Meeker Avenue on Aug. 16.

The victim told police she left her vehicle in front of a warehouse between between Van Dam and Varick streets and went inside.

When she came out at 9 am, she saw three men working on the car, who then ran off with the part.

Police say bandits then stole the part out of three cars parked in a public lot on Freeman Street the next day.

Officers report the converters went missing from the autos in the lot near West Street sometime between 4 and 8 pm.

Shooting for a free gun

Someone stole a gun and other items out of a woman's car on Lorimer Street on Aug. 17.

The woman told police that she parked her vehicle between Bayard Street and Driggs Avenue while she hung out in McCarren Park. She heard the alarm go off at 2:05 pm and ran to her car to find the window smashed and her Smith and Wesson gun missing, along with a purse, tote bag, gold chain, and diamond earrings.

BAY RIDGE-DYKER HEIGHTS

On hold

Two brutes put a man in a chokehold and stole his bag on Senator Street on Aug. 12, police say.

The victim reported that he was walking to his car parked between Third and Fourth avenues at 7:10 pm when one of the punks grabbed him and put him in a headlock. The other demanded his satchel.

"Drop your bag," the mugger ordered.
The man let go of the sack — with $5,500 in cash and two pairs of glasses inside — and the goons grabbed it. The thugs then jumped into a nearby car and sped away.

Empty-handed

Two thugs jumped a woman for her empty purse on 64th Street on Aug. 13, according to cops.

The victim told police she was walking between 12th and 13th avenues at 2:50 pm when the lowlifes ran up behind her and knocked her to the ground. The pair then grabbed her purse and, after a struggle, pulled it away. The woman suffered a minor arm injury, but no severe losses, since there were no valuables in the bag.

Hit and run

A pedal-pushing punk snatched a woman's purse on 78th Street on Aug. 16, authorities alleged.

The victim said she was near Third Avenue at 11:15 am when the bike-riding brute rolled up, jumped off, and shoved her to the ground. The crook then seized her bag — with $100 cash inside.

Homeless beating

A vicious villain struck a homeless man with a piece of wood inside McKinley Park on Aug. 13, according to police.

The victim said he was sitting inside the green space near the corner of 66th Street and Seventh Avenue at 2 pm when the fiend came up and cracked him on the skull with the chunk of lumber.

Dyker heist

A perp pillaged a 68th Street apartment of cash and electronics on Aug. 15, cops reported.

The victim said he left his pad between Eighth Avenue and Fort Hamilton Parkway at 8 am. When he returned at 9:30 pm, he found his home ransacked, and his two iPhones, one iPod, and $3,300 in cash missing.

Re-tooled

A crook ripped off thousands of dollars in tools from an 88th Street construction site sometime overnight on Aug. 14, cops said.

The contractor said his workers got off the job at 3:30 pm, and locked the plywood fence behind them. When the laborers returned at 11:30 am the next day, they found a sheet of plywood removed, and a nail gun, compressor, impact drill — plus its battery and charger — several ladders, a hammer, and two saws all gone.

Shoplifter

A pickpocket swiped a woman's wallet from her purse inside an 86th Street clothing store on Aug. 17, police state.

The victim said she was perusing the racks at the shop between Fourth and Fifth avenues at 1:40 pm when she felt somebody bump up against her. But she did not think much of it until a few minutes later, when she looked in her pocketbook and discovered her billfold missing.

Pricey heist

A crook looted nearly $10,000 worth of goods from a man's Ninth Street apartment on Aug. 15.

The 27-year-old man told police that the perp broke into his residence near Fourth Avenue while he was at work around 2:30 pm by pushing the air conditioner into the window on the first floor and climbing inside.

The thief made off with a MacBook laptop, a Michael Kors watch, a Movado watch, a Philippe Patek watch, an antique diamond ring, a pearl necklace, and a Swarovski bracelet.

Crutched away

A handicapped crook stole a woman's purse while she was working at a Fourth Avenue candy story on Aug. 14.

The 31-year-old victim told police that the perp, who was walking with one crutch, made his way into the basement of the establishment near Seventh Street at 11:40 am and snagged the woman's purse, which was holding her Yemen passport, $700, and $112 unlimited MetroCard.

Jacked two-wheelers

A bandit swiped a man's two bicycles that were chained to a bike rack on Ninth Street on Aug. 17.

The 38-year-old victim told police that he locked up the folding two-wheelers — each priced at $1,500 — on the rack between Fifth and Sixth avenues at 5:10 pm. When he returned just 10 minutes later, the bikes were gone.

Tag team

Two perps waltzed into a Seventh Avenue Thai restaurant and made off with a worker's belongings on Aug. 15.

The 23-year-old victim told cops that the male and female duo walked into the eatery between Lincoln Place and Saint John's Place at 4 pm and asked about the menu. The face-tattooed blonde woman kept the staff busy as the man walked into the back of the restaurant and grabbed the employee's purse, debit and credit cards, and identification.

The victim said that the perps made a $91 purchase with her debit card at a subway station, according to a police report.

Ransacked

A criminal burglarized a woman's Prospect Park West apartment and made off with a MacBook laptop on Aug. 12.

The 39-year-old victim told police that the perp broke into her home between 13th and 14th streets while she was at work sometime between 7 am and 7:30 pm. When she returned to her abode she found her apartment in disarray and with the back window open and the screen slashed, according to a police report.

Car loot

A robber stole a bunch of items from a parked car on Third Avenue sometime between Aug. 12 and Aug. 13.

The 31-year-old victim told cops that he parked his black Toyota near Baltic Street on Aug. 12 at 8 pm. When he returned the next day at 2:45 pm he noticed that his navigation system, bicycle, first-aid kit, and eye-washing water bottle were missing from his ride.

Choked out

Cops arrested a 52-year-old woman who they say choked another woman at an Eighth Avenue community center on Aug. 15.

The 53-year-old victim told cops that the suspect strangled her after the two got into an argument inside the establishment between 14th and 15th streets.

Ride gone

A thief stole a man's car from its First Street parking spot sometime overnight on Aug. 16.

The 50-year-old victim told police that he left his blue Volvo on the street between Fifth and Sixth avenues on Aug. 16 at 5:30 pm. When he returned the next morning at 7:15, his ride was missing.

Bank bomb threat

A bank robber ran off with nearly $3,000 after threatening to blow up a Chase Bank on Flatbush Avenue on Aug. 14, police said.

The perp passed a note to a teller at the business near Fulton Street at 1:23 pm, demanding money and saying that he had an explosive with him. The suspect — described as a 40-year-old white man about 5-feet-6, 180 pounds, and with brown hair — took $2,760 from the financial institution.

Bike share

A burglar stole $1,900 worth of bikes from a yard on Columbia Heights on Aug. 2, police said.

The thief apparently climbed a fence near Everit Street and made off with the bikes between 2 and 7 am. Unfortunately, there were no security cameras on the scene.

Stick happens

An apparently disturbed man attacked someone with a wooden stick on a Coney Island-bound Q train near the Dekalb Avenue stop on Aug. 17, police claimed.

The victim was listening to his iPod at 12:10 pm when a man with a strange expression on his face started whacking him across his head and arms until the victim was able to escape the subway car. Police were not able to find the man on the train, and the victim said that the perp did not appear to be homeless.

Tread lightly

An athletic thief took a wallet left on the treadmill of an Atlantic Avenue gym on Aug. 16, police said.

The victim said he absentmindedly left the treadmill near Boerum Place at 4:20 pm. When he returned to the exercise machine 10 minutes later, the wallet was gone.

Expensive taste

Three unknown crooks stole expensive designer clothes from a boutique on Atlantic Avenue on Aug. 16, police said.

The suspects took a Chanel lace jumper, two Rick Owens blazers, and a Theory jacket from the store between Hoyt and Bond streets without paying. A security tape showed that the perps hid the merchandise, valued at $3,860 in total, under their clothes.

Automatic taking machine

A nasty bandit punched a man in the face and robbed him while he was leaving a Livingston Street bank on Aug. 16, police said.

The suspect made off with $760 in cash from the victim at the establishment near Smith Street at 11:10 am.

Movers and takers

Movers stole from their client as he was relocating to a new home on Third Avenue on Aug. 15, according to a police report.

The man told police he walked inside his new home near Wyckoff Street only to have the moving van drive off with his designer accessories, clothes, and a standalone closet — at 6 pm. — Jaime Lutz

The victim told police he was talking on his phone while walking between Berry and Bedford avenues at 11:50 pm when the two came up behind him and grabbed the phone out of his hand.

Then the other robber started going through the victim's pockets and took his backpack.

"Don't make this hard on yourself," one of them said. "Don't make me stab you."

They took the victim's laptop computer, iPhone, wallet, backpack, and cash and ran off down the street. The victim told police he waited two hours to call 911 because he was "in a state of shock."

Stick 'em up

A robber pretending to have a gun in his waistband stole from a guy on Bushwick Avenue on Aug. 15.

The victim told police that he was near Skillman Avenue on his way home from the L train at 3:45 am when the robber cut in front of him and stuck his finger in his waist as if he had a gun.

"If you move I will f----- shoot you," the robber said. "Give me your phone."

The victim took his wallet out of his pocket and gave it to the robber, but he was not satisfied and asked for more. The victim then handed over his cellphone and the robber ran down Skillman Avenue.

A gassy robber held up a Morgan Avenue service station with a gun on Aug. 15.

The clerk told police that the robber stormed into the station between Anthony Street and Meeker Avenue at 10:50 pm brandishing a gun.

"Give me your money," the robber said, while pointing the gun in the clerk's face.

The brazen clerk refused and grabbed the gun and the two struggled until the robber got his gun back and ran out the door.

A fire broke out on the top floor of a Prospect Heights apartment building on Friday afternoon, injuring a woman who was trapped inside, witnesses and fire department officials said.

Firefighters rushed to the scene and rescued resident Annika DePaula from the flames, said Peter Entner, a former resident of the apartment who witnessed the fire.

"She said she walked in her room and the curtain was on fire," said Entner, who lived with DePaula and two other roommates at the duplex apartment on the fourth and fifth floors until a week ago.

The flames began at about 12:36 pm on the fifth story of the Underhill Avenue residence, between Pacific Street and Washington Avenue, and took 60 firefighters to extinguish, a fire department spokesman said

"The whole fifth story was on fire," said Entner, owner of the neighborhood pizza joint Pete Zaaz, adding that many of his belongings were ruined by the blaze. "Everything was completely destroyed."

DePaula suffered burns on her arms and hands and was taken to Weill Cornell Medical Center where she was listed in stable condition, the fire spokesman said.

The cause of the fire, which was brought under control about 30 minutes after it sparked, is under investigation.

Gowanus voters condemn poll hike

More than 1,500 told to vote in Red Hook

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

It's a poll too far.

A polling place move is supposed to make voting more handicap-accessible for Gowanus residents, but the voting booths are headed to a hard-to-reach part of Red Hook, meaning ballot-casters will have to vote with their feet — and some might not make it.

"The change makes no sense. It is totally out of our area," said 11th Street resident Jane Janiak, 66. "As a senior, I know I won't do that trip and I can't see mothers with children doing it either."

For the past several years, Gowanus residents have cast their votes at Camp Friendship on Eighth Street in Park Slope, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, but 1,683 registered voters recently learned that they will have to schlep to the Joseph Miccio Community Center in Red Hook for the Democratic primary election on Sept. 10. The Board of Elections says it made the move because Camp Friendship was deemed "inaccessible" to people with handicaps following a recent federal ruling that all polling places must be Americans with Disabilities Act compliant, an election board spokeswoman said. But area voters say the new polls are less, not more accessible.

Impacted voters say that the new polling location, which is on W. Ninth Street between Hamilton Avenue and Henry Street, is way out of the way for Park Slope seniors, disabled people, and stroller-pushing parents, since the site is across busy Hamilton Avenue from the nearest B61 bus stop, three long blocks away.

"How are we supposed to trek down to the Miccio Center and cross that wide and dangerous roadway?" asked Third Avenue resident Lorraine Muczyn, 70, who has a heart problem. "No citizen of New York City who wishes to vote should face this kind of unfair situation."

Residents said that their polling place has moved in the past, but that each move was only a few blocks — never as far as this. When voters received mail notifying them of the change, they inundated the office of Councilman Brad Lander (D-Park Slope) with complaints, which the councilman's office says it hears loud and clear.

"The Board of Elections should be making it easier, not harder, for people to vote," said Alex Moore, a spokesman for Lander.

The Board of Elections' response? People who do not like it should vote from home.

"Anyone that feels the distance is too far, they can always request an absentee ballot," said election board spokeswoman Valerie Vazquez.

The Board of Elections website specifies the following reasons to qualify for voting with an absentee ballot: occupation, business, studies, travel, imprisonment, illness, disability and hospitalization. Apparently borough voters can add inconvenience to that list.

Judge: A LICH in time saves nine

Surprise ruling takes hospital from state

BY JAIME LUTZ

Clear!

Long Island College Hospital got a shocking jolt yesterday when a judge ordered the hospital out of state hands because of what she called the state's possible "sinister purpose to seize its assets and dismantle the hospital."

Brooklyn Supreme Court Judge Carolyn Demarest's court order ripped the hospital from the grip of the State University of New York, which has been trying since February to close the hospital's doors. In her order, Demarest wrote that the state may have taken over the hospital in a badfaith scheme to shutter the 155-year-old Cobble Hill institution and unload the real estate it sits on, which according to her is worth as much as a billion dollars. The judge wrote that she could not say whether a tough medical market, the state's incompetence, or a real estate scheme were behind the closure plan, but that the state definitely dropped the ball and could no longer be trusted to care for the medical center.

"At the very least, there appears to have been a lack of due diligence," Demarest wrote in the order.

The judge oversaw the state's 2011 takeover of the hospital from management company Continuum Health Partners and her Tuesday ruling threw a wrench in court battles that have been raging over the hospital's fate.

Demarest recommended the teaching hospital to be returned to Continuum management, but the former operator issued a statement saying it would be unable to take the reins, leaving the health care facility without a clear caretaker.

Despite the uncertainty, hospital advocates say that the unexpected ruling was a victory that at least backed up what they have been saying for years: that the state took over the medical center to sell it, not to save it.

"Real estate profits must not be put before the health care needs of an entire community," said New York State Nurses Association executive director Jill Furillo at a press conference following the ruling.

A new operator will likely still sell some hospital buildings and cut some services in order to save the hospital from financial freefall, but those steps must be done with the intent to keep it open as a general teaching hospital, according to the court order.

"At the very least, it is a probability that LICH can only be sustained as a smaller and leaner facility after the sale of some of its assets," Demarest wrote in the order.

A spokesman for the state university would not say if it will appeal the order — and hospital advocates question whether an appeal is even possible without a full hearing into the state's original plans but the state does contend that it acquired the hospital with "the best of intentions."

"Unfortunately, SUNY and LICH became victims of the daunting realities of Brooklyn's health care delivery landscape," said Robert Bellafiore, a school spokesman. "We are disappointed it did not work, but it was not for lack of effort."

In 2011, the state said that its plan was to keep the hospital open indefinitely despite its poor financial situation — in fact, the deal included the understanding that the hospital would likely lose $144.4 million for the first three years, according to the court order.

To date, Long Island College Hospital has only lost $30 million, the order said.

The court is holding a hearing this Thursday to discuss transferring power back to Long Island College Hospital staff and getting a new hospital operator.

VMAs LAND HERE

Here's the down-low on MTV's first Brooklyn show

Brooklyn stand up — and get ready for detours.

The MTV Video Music Awards are happening for the first time ever in Brooklyn and that means unprecedented street closures around the Barclays Center to make way for limos full of big-name celebrities. Don't have the golden ticket? More worried about what the Aug. 25 awards show means for your weekend than what Beyonce will be wearing? Don't worry: Brooklyn Courier has you covered.

Prospect Heights residents eager for details packed a Monday meeting about the impacts of the awards show, but representatives for MTV and the mayor's office failed to appear, leaving many questions unanswered. Still, we have been able to glean a few things about what to expect when the moon man touches down:

Sixth Avenue is it

The star-studded event does not begin broadcasting until Sunday evening, but MTV has already started building the set for the hourlong red carpet session, which will take place towards the back of the arena on Sixth Avenue between Dean Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Lights, camera, noise

There will be a red carpet rehearsal sans celebrities on Saturday from 6:30 pm to 9 pm, complete with outdoor lights, loud music, cameras, and other production equipment, according to a letter MTV sent to neighbors.

Street closures galore

Sixth Avenue will shut down between Atlantic Avenue and Dean Street, beginning on Friday and continuing through midnight on Sunday. Starting on Saturday at 7 am, there will be no parking allowed on Dean Street between Flatbush and Carlton avenues and on Pacific Street between Sixth and Carlton avenues. Police from the 78th Precinct will also shut down those streets periodically throughout Saturday and will close Pacific Street between Fourth and Flatbush avenues from Sunday at 2 pm until midnight, police sources said.

Papers, please

On the day of the awards show, Dean Street will be completely blocked off between Flatbush and Carlton avenues and Pacific Street will be closed between Sixth and Carlton avenues. The closed blocks will be restricted to residents only, meaning residents will have to show identification to police officers to gain access, according to a letter sent out by the 78th Precinct Community Council.

A mixed parking bag

Neighborhood car owners will get a break from the parking crunch by way of a Barclays Center parking lot on Pacific Street that MTV has reserved for residents. Bicyclists are out of luck, though, as the bike parking racks in the large plaza near Sixth Avenue have been temporarily removed to make

Alleged P'Park serial dog attacker bailed out of jail

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

The man arrested for allegedly stabbing and beating dogs in Prospect Park is free — for Donnell Barden, 42, who police and park-goers say terrorized Brooklyn's backyard, was released from custody on Aug. 12 after coming up with $2,500 bail, jail officials said. Dog owners who take their canine companions for walks in Prospect Park say they cannot believe the suspected serial dog attacker is out so soon after his Aug. 5 arrest.

"It was a shocker," said Brown, who testified against Barden at a Downtown grand jury after Barden allegedly sicced his pit bull on her Doberman pinscher in early August.

Barden faces a charge of aggravated animal cruelty, a felony, as well as counts of menacing, harassment, and criminal possession of a weapon, all misdemeanors. The charges stem from two incidents — the attack on Brown's Doberman and a May 17 incident in which Barden allegedly stabbed a dog about 10 times and threatened to knife its owner — but parkgoers say Barden's violent spree started as early as February. Before Barden's release, a judge ordered him to stay away from his supposed victims, both the dogs and their owners, according to the district attorney's office.

The judge's words gave little reassurance to Brown after all that she says Barden has done.

"He put his hands on our pets," Brown said. "There was blood, there was trauma, and it affects everyone in the park."

Barden's next court date is Oct. 7, a Department of Corrections spokesman said, and prosecutors are urging other people who have had run-ins with the accused animal assaulter to come forward and testify, according to a letter from the district attorney's office that Fellowship in the Interest of Dogs and their Owners, Prospect Park's dog advocacy group, posted on its Facebook page.

Rockettes high-kick in Slope

Legendary dancers pass out ice pops at People's Pops

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

Christmas came early this year — at least for Park Slopers.

The legendary Rockettes high-kicked their way into the Slope last Tuesday to dish out free ice pops created especially for the precision dance troupe by a local pop shop.

Donning sexy, sparkling showgirl outfits, the long-legged ladies lined up and interacted with passersby in front of Union Street's People's Pops with the frozen treats to promote their upcoming, annual Christmas Spectacular production at Radio City Music Hall.

"It was so much fun," said of People's Pops, who added that seeing the troupe in the neighborhood was a surexperience. "The Rockettes are kind of instant celebrities."

The rare summertime sighting of the showy ladies made for a great photo-op for families and chil-

Carrell and his team created cranberry-apple-flavored "Rox Pops" for the Rockettes to pass out. The pop maker said that the all-

David Carrell, the co-founder natural pops were inspired by the Christmas season.

> "The idea was Christmas in August," said Carrell. "We made something that very much tasted Christmas-y."

The Rockettes toured all over the Big Apple on Tuesday, making their last stop in Park Slope. Carrell said that throughout the day the high-stepping ladies dished out 12,000 of the Rox Pops, which are going to be on sale at the shop through October.

If only they'd play Barclays.

Benefit for children of dead restaurateur

BY DANIELLE FURFARO

Union Pool hosted a benefit concert last Friday for the children of Colin Devlin, the award-winning Brooklyn restaurateur who committed suicide last month.

The bands Eastern Hollows, Dead Stars and American Darlings performed at the benefit.

The funds raised will go to the college funds of Ludivine and Cole, the children of Colin Devlin, who police say shot himself on the side of a Pennsylvania road on Devlin was the owner of the popular restaurants DuMont, DuMont Burger and the recentlyshuttered Dressler. Media outlets have speculated that money woes led Devlin to take his own life, but his friends and family have refused to comment.

John Watterberg, the bassist for Dead Stars, organized the benefit. He and Devlin were ac-

SANDIMONIUM!

Long Islanders takes top prize at annual Coney Island Beach castle contest

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

It's a wonderland of sand!

Dolphins, lions, and seals — not to mention castles — popped out of Coney Island's beach for the 23rd year in a row, as hundreds of artists descended on the People's Playground for the annual Sand-Sculpting Contest.

The molders came in all ages and from all over the New York metro area, shaping mounds of sand either individually or as teams.

Sponsors said the competition is a boon for commerce in the amusement district and raises Sodom by the Sea's profile as a destination.

"The event brings together the local community, businesses, and visitors for a day of true family fun," said Johanna Zaki, spokeswoman for the Alliance for Coney Island business group.

But for the contestants, it was all about sand-sculpting as an art form.

"It's very therapeutic," said William "The Sandman" Petrosino, whose team placed second in the group competition. "It teaches you patience, and to live in the now, since once you make your sculpture, you can't take it with you you have to leave it."

Petrosino — a personality on Kingsboro Community College radio and a Coney Island resident — said he and his teammates practiced once a week all summer long to prepare for the contest. When they hit the sand, the three decided to transform their pile of sand into three lions, and called the work "Pride and Joy."

"In the morning I didn't know what we were going to create," said Petrosino, whose team took home

Other winners said their work was similarly sponta-

"We built on the fly. We just let our imaginations run wild," said first-place winner Rich Demand of Seacliff, Long Island.

Demand teamed up with buddies Tim O'Keefe and John Alberga to create "Merlin's Castle," a fantastic structure of gates and towers.

"We gave it a real airy kind of feel," said Demand.

The champion said he and his friends came in second in last year's contest and vowed to return to Brooklyn in 2014 to defend their trophy against any challengers.

"We went back with the attitude, 'we're going to win this time," said Demand, whose group won $400. "Now we have to hold the title."
