Sheepshead Bay Library wins $10K

BY COLIN MIXSON

They've been lending more than books at the library in Sheepshead Bay — in the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy, the branch also lent a hand to the surrounding community, despite getting flooded itself.

That work has been rewarded with a $10,000 grant to the Sheepshead Bay branch from the Charles Revson Foundation, which cited the book lender's efforts to ease the suffering of area

Fight over charter school at Seth Low getting ugly

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

Families and teachers from Seth Low Intermediate School decried a city plan to install a controversial charter school chain in the building at the corner of W. 12th Street and Avenue P during a raucous public hearing on Sept. 30.

Not one parent, instructor, student, or community leader spoke in favor of the proposal to have Success Academy take over two of Seth Low's floors to create a charter school serving grades kindergarten through fourth grade. Speakers argued the plan would lead to congestion inside and outside the facility, unexpected expenses, and the loss of educational opportunities for the middle school students.

Several young pupils claimed that the public school's building is packed already, even without the addition of 600 new students.

"The hallways are very crowded, the stairways are very crowded," said 13-year-old Danielle Perkins, an eighth-grader at Seth Low. "Imagine having younger, smaller kids here."

Parents protested the reduced access expected for Seth Low students to the gymnasium and auditorium, which they claimed would mean fewer programs for kids.

"I want the school to remain the same," said Susanna Koclari, who plans to send her third-grade son to the same school her seventh-grade daughter currently attends. "I want to have the same education and the same opportunities for him that I had for her."

Seth Low's nurse noted that the city plan did not call for the hiring of new medical personnel, leaving

REPUBLICAN ANARCHY!

Curses, accusations fly as raucous caucus becomes GOP proxy war

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

Every Republican was seeing red at the Brooklyn GOP convention on Sept. 30, as a faction led by state Sen. Marty Golden tried — and failed — to boot party chairman Craig Eaton.

The power struggle began with arcane parliamentary maneuvering, but ended with a raucous exchange of epithets and accusations of mob rule and brainwashing.

“It’s a lynch mob here!” Eaton yelled over the noise of audience members chanting “Sham!” after his allies tossed out nearly three hundred votes against the six-and-a-half-year incumbent.

Golden (R-Bay Ridge) and his supporters wanted to replace Eaton with Timothy Cochrane — a former Conservative Party congressional candidate for Bay Ridge, Bensonhurst and Staten Island — claiming that Eaton had failed to enlarge the Republican base or challenge long-sitting Democratic electeds.

To unseat Eaton, Golden brought 565 “proxies” — signed affidavits from executive committee members not present at the convention allowing him to vote in their stead. But the party’s credentials committee — a four-person body appointed by Eaton to decide the legitimacy of proxies — threw out 295 of the affidavits before they could be counted, arguing that they were invalid because Golden had collected them before the convention was officially called on Sept. 24.

Things got nasty when Golden stood up to protest the maneuver.

“You’re not in charge here!” said credentials committee head Gene Berardelli. “Stop acting like you’re in charge and be seated!”

But Golden, Cochrane, and their backers continued to shout motions for all the proxies to be counted — motions dismissed by GOP strategist Gerry O’Brien, who acted as temporary chairman during the convention. Chants of “sham!” broke out in the audience several more times, and one Cochrane supporter was ejected from the room.

All this happened before Eaton made his pitch for re-election, arguing the he deserved another two-year term for making inroads into deep-blue Brooklyn, with the election of Bob Turner to Congress and David Storobin to state Senate, in special referendums in 2011 and 2012, respectively. But the heckling continued unabated.

“You are a nasty son of a b----!” shouted Glenn Nocera at the incumbent. Eaton severed the Kings County Republican Party’s 131-year-old relationship with Nocera’s group, the Brooklyn Young Republican club, in 2011 and formed the rival Brooklyn Young Republicans Club.

Eaton fired back by calling the crowd a group of thugs trying to enforce Golden’s will on the party.

“I’m not going to take direction from a state Senator about how I run the party,” said Eaton. “I’m not going to take direction from a state Senator about what candidates I’m going to run.”

Cochrane made his own speech, vowing greater outreach to Brooklyn’s growing Chinese, Caribbean, and Hasidic communities. The aspiring Republican boss said the party would die out without registering new members.

“We need to increase the Republican rolls, or we’re doomed,” said Cochrane.

Voters in the room backed Cochrane over Eaton 66–20. But Eaton had 420 proxy votes with him — which trumped the 270 Golden was left with after the credentials committee’s decision, for a final tally of 440 votes for Eaton against 336 for Cochrane.

Cochrane and his supporters vowed a lawsuit against the party to force it to count the tossed-out votes, arguing that there is no rule against gathering proxies before the declaration of a convention. Cochrane blasted the discarding of Golden’s proxies as a naked attempt by Eaton to cling to power.

“I’m disgusted with the process,” said Cochrane. “There’s no respect for the system.”

The convention battle followed a weeks-long mailing campaign from Eaton and his supporters. Letters sent to Republicans claimed that non-Republican members of Golden’s staff had “brainwashed” him into opposing the sitting chairman — who had been a longtime ally to the senator. A party leader said on the condition of anonymity that the main “brainwasher” is Golden’s chief-of-staff Jerry Kassar, who is chairman of the Brooklyn Conservative Party.

Kassar — who, as a non-Republican, did not attend the convention — dismissed the accusation.

“Simply not true. Anyone who knows Sen. Golden knows he is his own man,” Kassar said.

Republicans on Golden’s staff also denied the claim, and argued that challenging Eaton did not harm the party.

“I don’t think running an alternative candidate for chairman is divisive. That’s why we have conventions,” said Golden aide Ray Riley.

Gov't shutdown shuts Aviator

BY COLIN MIXSON

Aviator Sports Complex is closed indefinitely as a result of the shutdown of the federal government, which shuttered all national parks, including Gateway National Recreation Area, where Aviator is located.

Staff at the entertainment complex only learned of the closure on Tuesday morning — when they came into work and were told that they, along with all other concessionaires with Gateway National Park Service, and Floyd Bennett Field, would be closed, according to Aviator spokeswoman Jaelyn Muns.

“We had no idea,” said Muns. “Our owner and [Aviator’s Chief Operating Officer Dean] Rivera were talking with Gateway National Parks yesterday, and they weren’t giving us a solid answer. I don’t think they really knew. And this morning, they sent a Park Service representative into the facility, and they said they were going to have to close the gates and all the other concessionaires.”

Aviator employees worked long enough to ensure that everyone affiliated with events being held there were notified of Tuesday’s cancellations, including the 35 families enrolled in Aviator’s after-school program, which shuttles students from PS 193, PS 236, PS 277, and PS 312 to Aviator for help with homework, along with snacks and games.

Rivera and certain members of Aviator’s operations staff were given permission to stay at Aviator to maintain the facility and, among other things, make sure the ice does not melt on the skating rinks there.

All other so-called non-essential staff, however, were forced to leave by 3 pm in order to comply with the conditions of the government shutdown.

Floyd Bennett Field will remain staffed with employees the feds deem essential personnel, including park rangers and police, who have escorted out campers who remained inside the park two days into the shutdown.

Aviator is offering refunds for any events that are canceled as a result of the shutdown — except in certain cases, like sports practices, where make-up dates can be arranged, according to Muns. But any refunds likely will not be processed until the sports complex is back in operation.

There is no telling at this point how long the government shutdown — and thus Aviator’s closing — will last. The last time it happened in 1996, the shutdown lasted for 27 days. As a result, the folks at Aviator cannot predict how many events will be canceled before the lawmakers on Capitol Hill come to an agreement.

The following events are scheduled at Aviator for later this month, but may be canceled if the federal shutdown persists.

Gentile, Quag debate blame

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

The challenger came out swinging against the incumbent at the first debate to determine who will represent Bay Ridge in the City Council.

Ridge Council hopeful John Quaglione blamed Councilman Vincent Gentile for allowing quality of life in Southern Brooklyn to slip on his watch — but the sitting Democrat deflected the blame onto Quaglione’s boss, state Sen. Marty Golden.

Quaglione, a longtime aide and spokesman to Golden (R-Bay Ridge), recalled the halcyon days of 1998-2002 when his boss was in the council. The challenger claimed it was a time when Bay Ridge, Bensonhurst, Bath Beach, and Dyker Heights did not suffer from the plagues of graffiti, garbage on the streets, street crime, and dilapidated parks. Quaglione laid the blame at the feet of Councilman Gentile (D-Bay Ridge), who he said led the area slide from number one to number 50 out of 51 districts in funding from the City Council. Quaglione also said water bills and property taxes have shot up while Gentile has served.

“Every other neighborhood in the city of New York is getting more of your tax dollars except one,” Quaglione said. “If you believe you should pay more to live in this neighborhood that has come down, vote for Vincent Gentile, I ask you!”

Gentile defended his record in office, pointing out that he voted against property-tax hikes, and claiming to have brought home $13 million in funding for parks, built space for 5,000 seats in local schools, acquired security cameras for high-crime thoroughfares, and recently restored afternoon pick-ups for public trash cans. He also claimed credit for bringing commuter boat service to Manhattan to the community.

Gentile also noted that his years as councilman overlapped with Golden’s years as state Senator representing the same neighborhood — and that Golden had likewise failed to address those issues. Gentile served in the state Senate from 1996 until 2002, when he lost his reelection bid to then-Councilman Golden. Gentile then successfully ran for the vacant city seat, and won re-election twice. The two pols have been bitter rivals ever since.

“I’m an elected official, but there’s somebody on this panel who works for an elected official who has not worked on these issues either,” the incumbent said.

Quaglione rebuffed Gentile’s attack, pointing out that he is only an aide, with limited powers.

“I think it’s comical that an elected official, six years in the state Senate, 10 years in the City Council, just blamed a staff member for things he hasn’t done,” the challenger said.

Tish James locks up public advocate

BY JAIME LUTZ

Letitia “Tish” James won the Democratic public advocate run-off on Wednesday night, in all likelihood launching her from Fort Greene’s three-term councilwoman to a heartbeat away from the mayor’s office.

James garnered about 60 percent of the vote, handily beating state Sen. Daniel Squadron for the Democratic nomination which, because no Republican is running, almost assures her the seat and likely makes her the first African-American woman to hold a citywide political office. At the moment her win was assured, James brandished the same populist rhetoric that defined her campaign and her tenure as councilwoman.

“There’s so much more work to do because the next generation of New Yorkers are at risk of losing the opportunities that allowed us to make it in this city,” James told a crowd of supporters at her victory party on the roof of Manhattan’s Copacabana Club.

The run-off race saw its share of mud-slinging, but Squadron and James held similar stances on many issues and the contest was the only thing on the ballot, which may explain why only 187,877

VICTOR: Letitia James beat Daniel Squadron in the runoff.

New Yorkers turned out to vote, though pundits had predicted as few as 100,000 would turn out.

At the decisive hour, Squadron, who will maintain his position as state senator, was able to muster some kind words for his victorious foe.

“I know that Tish will be their great advocate for New Yorkers across the city,” Squadron said in an e-mailed statement. “Although we did not win tonight, I will keep on doing what I’ve always done in public office — fighting for New Yorkers and a city I truly love.”

James is a former Legal Aid lawyer who, as a councilwoman, opposed the threat of eminent domain to seize property by proponents of the Atlantic Yards development.

Threatening scrawl triggers bomb scare

BY WILL BREDDERMAN

A bogus bomb threat forced the evacuation of Coney Island's Abraham Lincoln High School on Sept. 25.

Police reported that a teacher found a message scrawled on a second-floor windowsill warning of an impending explosion inside the Ocean Parkway school. Department of Education officials reported that students and staff exited the building en masse at 10:15 am, and waited on the bleachers around the football field while police swept the building. The search turned up no explosives, and the teachers, aides, and pupils returned to the facility at 11:50 am.

Authorities said they are still investigating who left the threatening message.

Asthma:

A disorder affecting the airways of the lungs. People with asthma have Allergic airways that cause Wheezing and cough in response to certain "triggers", leading to difficulty in breathing. The airway narrowing is caused by inflammation and swelling of the airway lining, the tightening of the airway muscles, and the production of excess mucus. This results in a reduced airflow in and out of the lungs. You may be waking up at night coughing or wheezing after exertion. Why suffer; today's treatments may permit you to breathe and live much better.

Allergies:

An allergy is an overreaction of your body's immune system to substances that usually cause no reaction in most individuals. Reactions can be hives, congestion, sneezing, coughing, sore throat, headache, and itchy runny eyes and nose. Allergy symptoms are triggered by pollen, molds, dust mites, cockroach and animal dander. For people allergic to these common substances, symptoms can be quite bothersome. And treatment can result in dramatic improvement.

'Tower Run' salutes 9-11 firefighter

BY SHAVANA ABRUZZO

Park Slope firefighter Stephen Siller left behind a wife and five young children when he raced through the Brooklyn-Battery Tunnel to the burning World Trade Center on 9-11, wearing 75 pounds of firefighting gear.

The Squad One smoke-eater never returned home.

On Sunday, more than 25,000 runners from across the world carried the Stars and Stripes and chanted,

"U.S.A." while retracing Siller's fearless footsteps for the 12th annual Tunnel to Towers Run. Siller's brother Gary, and actors Gary Sinese and Steve Buscemi, championed the runners as they made their way from Red Hook to the World Trade Center.

Some, like a uniformed unit from the London Fire Brigade, crossed oceans to come and help raise money for the Stephen Siller Tunnel to Towers Foundation.

The group helps gravely wounded soldiers and children who have lost a parent, much like Siller, the youngest of seven siblings whose lost both his mother and father by age 10.

Amputees, burn victims, and paraplegics in recumbent bicycles kept pace with the human river of support raging towards the finish line for post-run ceremonies, featuring a free concert by Sinese's band, Gary Sinese and the

Lt. Dan Band.

First-time participant Steve Cornella, a volunteer firefighter from New Jersey, said he was astonished by the turnout.

"I was amazed at how many people signed up for this," he said. "I saw kids from 4 years old to people in their 80s, including some on crutches and in wheelchairs."

Cornella promised to return with his buddies next year.

Teachers, parents: No charter at Mann

BY COLIN MIXSON

A group of Mill Basin parents thinks "Success" could mean failure for their children's school.

The School District 22 Parent Teacher Association is rallying local parents and the community at large ahead of an upcoming public hearing to oppose the city's push to co-locate a Success Academy charter school with the Roy H. Mann middle school — but they have an uphill battle convincing a Panel for Education Policy that is stacked with mayoral appointees.

"We're just trying to get people to be knowledgeable," said Cynthia Prevete, vice president of the Parent Teacher Association. "Hopefully if they see the whole community is not for this, they'll reconsider. It's unusual, but it has happened."

The Department of Education proposal outlines the co-location of the charter school serving elementary grades in the E. 68th Street middle school beginning in 2014 with a kindergarten class of between 120–180 students, and additional grades added until the 2017–2018 school year culminating in the inclusion of grades K–fourth grades and up to 450 students.

In addition, the Roy H. Mann middle school would see a gradual reduction in the amount students it may enroll starting in Sept. 2014, with an overall reduction of between 160–190 students by the 2017–2018 school year.

The enrollment reduction will likely lead to funding cuts, not only for Roy H. Mann, but for local elementary schools PS 203, 236, 251, and 312, which will likely lose students, if not real estate, to the charter school, according to Prevete, eventually resulting in a loss of teachers.

"Once you lose students, you lose funding, and when the funding goes, so do the teachers," she said.

Assemblyman Alan Maisel, who worked as a teacher and assistant principal for 30 years before he entered politics, and who serves on the Education Committee in Albany, has signed on to support the community against the Department of Education's co-location plans, and said he doesn't see the sense in bringing an additional primary school into a community that already has several "excellent" elementary schools.

"The elementary schools are wonderful schools and they have been for 50 years," the assemblyman said. "So, now you're going to put in a charter that will compete with these good schools? There's no sense in that."

The fate of the proposal will ultimately be decided on Oct. 15 by the Panel for Education Policy — a panel where the majority is appointed by the mayor — a major proponent of charter schools — and can be replaced by the Bloomberg administration at any time.

The result is a panel that frequently votes politically, according to Maisel.

"If they rally and they fight, I don't want to say they absolutely can't win, but I haven't seen this administration as one to give way to community pressure."

Cutting-edge crime

A crook invaded an 11th Avenue bodega and stole $1,000 from inside sometime overnight on Sept. 24, according to cops.

The victim told police that he shut his shop between 63rd and 64th streets at 8:30 pm and pulled the front security gate down.

When he came back at 7:30 am the next day, he discovered the bars on the safety shutter cut, the glass door smashed — and the money missing from the register inside.

Peek-a-boo

Three thugs holding their hands over their faces jumped a woman on 63rd Street on Sept. 24, police state.

The victim reported she was walking between Eighth and Ninth avenues at 12:30 am when a silver minivan pulled up alongside her.

The trio of fiends jumped out, hiding their identities behind their palms.

The threesome threw the woman to the ground, and took her iPhone and $1,000 in cash. The crooks dropped the money a few feet away, but held onto the phone.

Tireless

A lowlife jacked the tires and rims from a car parked on 88th Street on Sept. 25, cops say.

The victim said he parked his vehicle between Colonial Road and Ridge Boulevard at 11 pm.

When he came back the following day at 8:45 am, he found his passenger-side window smashed — and his rubber treads and flashy hubcap covers gone.

Nightmare on 64th St.

Thieves looted two apartments in a 64th Street building on Sept. 25, authorities allege.

One victim said she left her home between 10th and 11th avenues at 11:20 am to go to lunch. At 1:36 pm, she got a phone call from her alarm system provider — but disregarded it because she did not recognize the number.

When she got back at 3 pm, she found the door to her pad open, her dresser drawers in disarray — and three jewelry boxes containing two pairs of earrings, a bracelet, and four necklaces missing.

The other victim said he took off for work at 6:30 am, and got a call from his neighbor about the raid inside the building.

When he got home at 5:55 pm, he found the door to his home pried open, and his living room ransacked — with his laptop, bracelet, necklace, and watch all stolen.

Cops cuffed a man who they say tried to break into an 82nd Street building on Sept. 26.

The homeowner said she witnessed the man climbing the scaffolding around her home between 23rd and 24th avenues at 11:04 pm. The woman said the accused tried to pry open her window before running off.

Terrible trio

Three men were arrested for their alleged involvement in a brutal gang assault on 86th Street on Sept. 26, cops reported.

The victim said he was near 20th Avenue at 2:15 am when the three men in custody punched him in the face and body several times.

He said one of the accused pulled out a knife and stabbed him in the hand — inflicting permanent nerve damage.

Hit and run

Police picked up a man who they say beat up someone on Bay 35th Street on Sept. 26.

The victim said the defendant punched him in the face between Benson and Bath avenues at 2:12 am, then fled.

Police picked up a man who they say assaulted a woman and damaged her walking stick on Mermaid Avenue on Sept. 28.

The victim said she was near the corner of Stillwell Avenue at 12:24 am when the defendant grabbed her by the hair and tried to throw her to the ground.

After she maintained her balance, she said the suspect grabbed her cane and slammed it repeatedly against a nearby telephone pole, denting and bending the walking aid.

Hitting the bottle

A man was arrested for hurling a bottle at a woman inside a W. 33rd Street building on Sept. 25, police said.

The victim said that the man in custody flung an empty vessel at her at 3:30 pm, inside their residence between Surf and Mermaid avenues.

The bottle hit her in the face, causing cuts and swelling.

No tip

Authorities netted a suspect who they say helped rob a pizza delivery man inside a W. 32nd Street building on Sept. 2.

The victim said he went to deliver the pie to the defendant's residence between Surf Avenue and the Boardwalk at 6:30 pm.

He alleged that when he rang the suspect's door, the suspect answered with two other men, one of whom carried a black handgun.

The pizza-carrier said the fiendish trio then stripped him of his iPod, cellphone, $35 in cash, and the pizza.

The victim told police that he was asleep in the abode between Avenues U and T at 9 pm when his girlfriend doused him with the boiling water.

The victim's skin "bubbled" as a result of the attack, according to police.

Laser thief

A thief stole laser surveying equipment from a Shore Parkway storage container sometime between Sept. 26 and 27.

The victim told police that he locked up his storage container between Knapp and Brigham streets before he left for home at 2 pm that day, and returned at shortly after 5 pm the next day to find the container open and his tools missing.

According to the victim, the crook made off with a $1,200 Topcon Laser Survey tool, along with $400 worth of various other tools.

Cash envelope

A crook looted a man's Bedford Avenue apartment on Sept. 26, taking an envelope with more than $6,000 inside.

The victim told police that he left his home between Voorhies Avenue and Shore Parkway at 12:45 pm, and returned the next day at 2 pm to find someone had rifled through his closet and removed an envelope with $6,300 inside.

The crook nabbed some jewelry as well, and there were no signs of forced entry, cops said.

The iPhone job

Cops are hunting for two gun-wielding thugs who they say robbed a Nostrand Avenue electronics store on Sept. 27, taking 16 iPhones.

Employees at the chain store between Avenues X and Y told police they were working there at 6:55 pm when the goons burst in, waving pistols.

One of the crooks grabbed an employee and ushered him towards the back of the store, where he forced the man to open a locker containing the pricey smartphones.

Meanwhile, the other accomplice looted the register, before both thieves fled in a gray Range Rover. Altogether, the suspects made off with more than $10,000 in electronics and cash, cops said.

Computer crook

A thief stole two laptops from a man's E. 22nd Street apartment sometime between Sept. 26 and 28.

The victim told police that he left his home between Gravesend Neck Road and Avenue W at 5 pm, and returned two days later to find that his padlock had been busted, and his mobile computers were pilfered.

Knuckle head

A man was arrested for possessing brass knuckles after cops spotted him driving down Guider Avenue without a license plate on Sept. 27.

The arresting officer reported that he was near Coney Island Avenue at 10:35 pm when he spotted the suspect driving his 2007 BMW without a plate and pulled him to the curb.

There, the officer allegedly spotted a set of brass knuckles in plain view inside the suspect's center console and arrested him, cops said.

Tough love

Cops arrested a man who they say beat and robbed his girlfriend on Nostrand Avenue on Sept. 29.

The victim told police that she left her boyfriend's apartment between Avenues W and X following an argument at 5:47 am, but that he caught her in the lobby and dragged her back to his abode.

There, the man threw her into a door and, after she tried calling 911, he grabbed her phone and ran from the apartment, police reported.

Carnival of car carnage in Canarsie

High-speed collision destroys one wall, two vehicles, and sends six to the hospital

BY COLIN MIXSON

A catastrophic crash in Canarsie destroyed a brick wall, totalled two cars, and sent six people to the hospital on Sept. 27, all because a driver fled a traffic stop, according to police.

Cops pulled over a driver on E. 85th Street near Greenwood Road at midnight, after an officer allegedly spotted the man driving his white sedan with its headlights off, police said.

When officers got out of their unmarked cruiser and approached the car on foot, the suspect suddenly peeled out down E. 85th Street, heading south at high speed.

A spokesman for the NYPD was adamant that officers did not give chase, but whether they wanted to or not, the officers didn't have much of a chance, according to Canarsie resident Clive McDonald, who watched from the sidewalk as police pulled the suspect over.

"When the car took off, the police got back in their car and went after them, but he was traveling at such a tremendous speed they couldn't catch up with him," he said.

Almost immediately, the suspect caused a minor collision when he ran a red light on Flatlands Avenue, just one block south of where he was pulled over, but that wasn't enough to stop him from barrel-ing further down E. 85th Street.

McDonald wasn't able to see what happened next, but he certainly heard it, and quickly followed to witness the grisly aftermath.

"I heard another bang," he said. "When I caught up with him, it was an incredible scene."

In his attempt to escape from police, the suspect ran a second red light and collided with a black sports utility vehicle traveling across E. 85th Street on Avenue J, sending the other vehicle rolling through a brick wall and coming to rest on its side in the front yard of Family Group Day-care.

"The SUV was in real bad shape," said McDonald. "I saw one person hanging down, lifeless. I don't know if he was dead, but he wasn't moving."

Paramedics rushed to the scene and transported two patients to Kings County Hospital and four to Brookdale Hospital, according to a spokesman for the

You don't have to suffer from back pain!

Would you like to be able to walk, sit or sleep without aggravating your back pain? Would you like to be able to play your favorite sport or game without any discomfort? How about being able to go on a long car drive?

You are not alone. There are thousands of people like you who suffered in pain for years until they came to Alfredo N. L. del Castillo, M.D. at The Pain Relief Center (9731 Fourth Avenue, 718-966-8120). After treatment these patients have said, "You restored my quality of life. Now I am pain free after years of suffering."

Chronic back or neck pain can be due to many causes. It may be due to whiplash, muscle spasm, ligament problems, arthritis, herniated disc, bulging disc, or spinal stenosis. However, one of the most common causes of persistent pain not responding to drugs, physical therapy, or chiropractic is a herniated disc or bulging disc. The disc contains a very inflammatory substance which leaks out when its wall breaks. This substance causes severe inflammation within the spinal canal resulting in back or neck pain with muscle spasm. The inflammation may be associated with pain going down the legs or pain going through the arms and hands.

Dr. Castillo wanted to help. Looking for ways to help these patients, he learned that an epidural was a very effective way to treat chronic back and neck pain. In order to learn and master epidurals, the doctor started anesthesiology training at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York City.

With an epidural injection, the inflammation is neutralized. As a result, the body is able to heal, shrink the disc and the pain disappears. The technique of performing epidurals is very important. Dr. Castillo has mastered the art of doing epidurals in a very gentle and nearly painless way.

He began the practice of pain management in 1981 to help people suffering from back and neck pain. This pain could be due to whiplash, herniated discs, sciatica, spinal stenosis, or arthritis. He was a pioneer in the field of pain management.

Dr. Castillo is the most experienced pain management specialist in Brooklyn and Staten Island having performed safely more than 25,000 procedures. His reputation has become so well known that even doctors and their families come to him for their neck and back pain.

Dr. Castillo was the first pain specialist in Staten Island and one of the first in Brooklyn. In 1987, he established and directed the Pain Management Center at Bayley Seton Hospital. At the same time he served as Director of Anesthesiology. He was the first pain specialist in Staten Island to be Board Certified in Pain Management by both the American Board of Anesthesiology and the American Board of Pain Medicine.

Because Dr. Castillo wants only the very best care for each of his patients, the procedures are done in a clean, new pain management suite built specifically for these procedures. Care is of the highest caliber. The doctor has a staff of trained professionals who have worked with him for many years. Most insurances including No fault insurance cover the cost of the procedure. Complimentary car service is provided to patients when they have the procedure.

People do not have to live with pain. "We want to help," says Dr. Castillo. Make an appointment today. Call 718-966-8120. Additional information may be found at www.brooklyn-painreliefcenter.com.

Gerritsen Library is back!

Shows off $1.5-million fix

BY COLIN MIXSON

The Gerritsen Beach Library has been renewed.

The neighborhood branch on Gerritsen Avenue was checked out for nearly a year after Hurricane Sandy flooded the building and ruined the roof, but the Gerritsen Beach Library is finally back in the book-lending business as of its Sept. 30 reopening, with more space and even a few extra gadgets.

"In a lot of respects, we're better than before," said library supervisor Christine Dille.

The book lender, like many homes and businesses throughout Gerritsen Beach, was flooded during last October's superstorm, which ruined the floor, the boiler, and the electrical wiring — not to mention hundreds of books.

The branch's roof, which a Brooklyn Public Library spokeswoman said was already in bad shape, sprang a few extra leaks, as well.

In fact, just about the only thing that wasn't replaced at the Gerritsen Beach Library was its wooden frame, according to Brooklyn Public Library president Linda Johnson, who spoke of the old building's skeleton in downright poetic terms.

"It's got good bones," said Johnson. "It has nice, high ceilings and beams. I'm glad we were able to keep that."

But after extensive renovations costing $1.5 million, the Gerritsen Avenue branch is back with two new meeting rooms, a new roof, wifi, two self-check-out machines, and twice as many computers, among other technological improvements.

"Compared to before the storm, it looks a lot better," said Gerritsen Beach resident Chris Santiago, who inspected the branch on reopening day with his wife and son. "I really like it."

For the staff at the Gerritsen Beach branch, many of whom live in the neighborhood and suffered Sandy damage of their own, Monday morning was as much a reunion as a reopening celebration.

After the library was closed following the storm, the staffers there were sent to different branches across the borough, and some hadn't seen each other since before the storm — until Monday.

"Wherever they needed us, that's where we would go," said Dille. "But we're all really happy to be back. It's such a lovely branch, and it's a lovely community."

Feds: Let the Superfund cleanup begin

Finalized Gowanus plan calls for tanks to catch sewage despite city's objections

BY NATALIE MUSUMECI

It's signed, sealed, and delivered!

Federal bigwigs finalized a controversial plan to dredge and clean the fetid Gowanus Canal on Monday, making it the law of the land despite the Bloomberg administration's opposition to a major part of the half-billion-dollar Superfund cleanup.

Under the federal plan, the Environmental Protection Agency will force the city to pay to stop millions of gallons of raw sewage from polluting the waterway by building massive, $78-million underground holding tanks, even though the city claims the project is completely unnecessary because poop is the least of the canal's problems. The plan's authors make it clear that they think the city's pleas are hogwash.

"The tanks are essential," said environmental agency regional administrator Judith Enck, who stood with officials alongside the banks of the waterway to make the announcement. "We included this in the [final plan] because it doesn't make sense to dredge the contaminated sediment and then have recontamination."

The two gigantic tanks — one holding as much as eight-million gallons and the other holding as much as four — are to be buried alongside the canal to catch the storm water and untreated toilet slop that spews into the waterway during heavy rains.

Combatting sewage overflow was not the initial focus of the Superfund plan. The feds originally targeted the crud at the bottom of the canal for dredging because it was known to be loaded with dozens of dangerous contaminants, including heavy metals such as mercury, lead, copper, and other chemicals. But when investigators found gasoline, diesel, and coal tar residues in the water, they added the tanks to the plan, which already called for digging up 10 feet of the canal-bed muck and covering it with sand, clay, and gravel to keep the remaining poisons in.

The finalized Superfund plan is a formal decree by the federal government, but officials with the city who oppose paying for the tanks say they still see room for the feds to change their minds.

"It is our hope that the [Environmental Protection Agency] will ultimately conclude that building two large tanks is unnecessary to remediate the canal, and not in the best interests of New Yorkers, who will foot the bill," said Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Carter Strickland, responding to Monday's announcement.

The city department reacted to the December 2012 proposal of the tanks by saying that it has a $200-million grab bag of cleanup projects on tap that will clean the water enough that it will not need the tanks to end the scourge of the brown tide.

The response of federal officials has always been a firm no and, though they say that sewage is not the primary form of pollution on the foul canal, they concluded that it is damaging enough to un-do their cleanup, saying that the city's measures are tissues on a situation that calls for a diaper.

The only aspect of the plan that is now up for discussion, the federal agency says, is the placement of both tanks.

The feds are still considering burying one of the tanks beneath Gowanus's Thomas Green Playground and Douglass-Degraw Pool, which sparked outcry among neighbors. Superfund project manager Christos Tsiamis said that if the tank is placed underneath the park, the feds will work with the city to provide an alternative for those left without a place to play during the years-long construction.

The finalized clean-up plan, which was overwhelmingly cheered by locals, activists, and elected officials on Monday, is the result of years of community input and more than 1,800 formal comments that neighbors submitted after the federal agency released a final draft in December 2012.

In the final plan, the federal agency nixed its initial plan of storing de-contaminated sludge dredged from the Red Hook waterfront — a proposal that some Red Hookers vigorously opposed.

“We’re most appreciative of the fact that the Environmental Protection Agency listened to the community,” said John McGettrick, co-chair of the Red Hook Civic Association. “This is a win for the entire community.”

Along with the city, which the federal agency singles out as one of the biggest polluters of the canal, the feds have tapped three-dozen polluters and owners of historically polluting sites to foot the bill for the cleanup, including energy giant National Grid, Con Edison, and Verizon.

The $506-million cleanup, which is expected to start in either 2016 or 2017 after a design phase is completed, will address the worst contamination of the man-made waterway that comes from its 150-year history as a major industrial transportation route for manufactured gas plants, paper mills, tanneries, and other chemical plants that operated along its banks, according to agency officials. In their rosier projection of the cleanup, officials say that water will still only be three-quarters of the way purified, meaning that Brooklynites still will not be able to swim or eat fish out of the water-way any time in the foreseeable future.

The Superfund designation prompted luxury developer Toll Brothers to back out of a planned high-rise development on the banks of the putrid channel, but officials with another company called the Lightstone Group took over and says that the latest step in the long march towards the cleanup does not phase them.

“The Lightstone Group was very familiar with the probable timetable for the cleanup,” said company spokesman Ethan Geto, adding that the real estate firm has been in close collaboration with the Environmental Protection Agency as the company moves toward building a 700-unit complex.

Construction of the plush rental towers might be complete by the time the dredging begins, Geto said, meaning that new tenants would have front-row seats for the operation that agency officials say will take between eight and 10 years to complete.

The Superfund cleanup plan also calls for:

- Blocking any illegal pipes running into the sewer system around the canal.

- Treating the foul gunk scraped from the canal-bed and disposing of it off-site at either a facility upstate or in New Jersey.

- Removing any contaminated material from the canal’s First Street basin and restoring approximately 475 feet of the former basin.

- Excavating and restoring the waterway’s Fifth Street basin.

- Other efforts to keep sewage out of the canal including water-retaining green spaces, funded by federal and city grants.

Federal officials said they will hold two meetings about the clean-up in Gowanus and Red Hook sometime in October.

Cash for Kingsborough

Department of Labor gives $3.9 million for job training

BY COLIN MIXSON

Storm-racked Kingsborough Community College will receive the lion's share of a $7-million federal grant for new job-training programs.

The Department of Labor grant to the City University of New York will be split between Kingsborough, which will get $3.9 million, and LaGuardia Community College in Queens, receiving $3.2 million, according to Sen. Charles Schumer, who announced the grant.

"These grants are a game-changer for Kingsborough Community College," said Schumer. "Training our young people today for the jobs of tomorrow will pave the path to keeping New York City at the top of the heap for generations to come."

The grant comes as part of New York's slice of $474.5 million being doled out by the US Department of Labor to schools across the country to build career training programs that can be completed in two years or less.

Kingsborough will use the $3.9 million grant to create seven free or low-cost courses to help unemployed people find work in fields that are currently hiring, according to Dr. Babette Audant, executive director of Kingsborough's Center of Economic and Workforce Development.

"This grant was given to us with the expectation that we would help people get work," said Audant.

The courses, which include Certified Medical Assistant, Community Health, and Paramedic programs, will not require students to enroll at Kingsborough, although some of the programs are designed to prepare students for a college career.

All the antics on Atlantic Avenue

BY WILL LEVITT

The 39th annual Atlantic Antic packed Atlantic Avenue with vendors, performers, and party people on Sunday afternoon.

Belly dancers and musicians strutted and strummed their stuff and artists, craft brewers, and other vendors from around the city, more than 400 in total, showed their wares. Atlantic Avenue establishments like the House of the Lord Church got in on the action, too.

"It's a great opportunity to meet different people and raise funds," said Dawn Daughtry, a church minister who was selling food and books to benefit the church.

The festival stretched from the Barclays Center to Brooklyn Bridge Park and organizers said the projects were fitting book-ends for what they claim is the city's largest street fair.

The Antic boasted all the staples of a typical New York street fair, but offered not-so-standard fare as well, with Bacchus Restaurant serving up blue point oysters and Mile End Deli dishing out smoked meat sandwiches.

"[The Barclays Center] is a great addition to the avenue," said Christian Haag, president of the Atlantic Avenue Local Development Corporation, which organizes the event. Haag said he is also a fan of the waterfront park at the road's end.

No street fair would be complete without a bit of political theater and this year's Antic delivered in a big way when Congresswoman Nydia Velazquez (D-Brooklyn Heights) and Councilman Steve Levin (D-Williamsburg) crowned Borough President Makrowitz the king of Kings County.

Revisit the top

Last month's Democratic primary proved that shock and awe are part of Brooklyn's mission statement, and here is where future leaders are shaped. Upstarts toppled incumbents. Both the Democratic and Republican challengers heading for a mayoral face-off in November call Kings County home. And the pair of candidates dueling for Public Advocate hail from Brooklyn. Month in Review recaps these and other top stories that kindled our web and print editions in September.

Primary coverage: Six-term District Attorney Charles Hynes was sentenced to retirement, when former federal prosecutor Kenneth Thompson knocked out the newly minted reality star, becoming the first challenger to unseat an incumbent district attorney in more than 100 years, and setting him up to be the first African-American to hold the office. Voters in the 48th Council District also delivered an upset, selecting Flatbush Shomrim founder Chaim Deutsch over two Russian-speaking candidates in an area recently redrawn along ethnic lines to be a so-called "Super Russian District." Brooklyn was the clear winner, too, in three of the hottest races in the city, with Park Sloper Bill DeBlasio claiming the Democratic nomination for mayor, Brooklyn Heights boy Joe Lhota grabbing the Republican line, and Carroll Gardens state Sen. Daniel Squadron and Fort Greene Councilwoman Letitia James heading into an October runoff for Public Advocate.

American Day Parade. Gyrating dancers, marching bands, and bedecked floats proceeded down Eastern Parkway in the city's largest street extravaganza to celebrate Caribbean culture.

Lethal chopper: A daredevil aircraft whiz, who loved to fly state-of-the-art remote-controlled helicopters, was partially decapitated when his whirlbird spun amok and hacked off the top of his head in Calvert Vaux Park. Roman Pirozek, 19, was performing a heli-trick at the greenspace, near the corner of Shore Parkway and Bay 44th Street, when the chopper spiraled out of control, killing him instantly.

Whatta drag: Bushwick morphed into "Bushwig," as swarms of va-va-voomers in fake tresses, platform heels, and yards of chiffon descended upon Secret Project Robot for the annual festival of drag performance and gender bending. Entertainers, artists, and club kids added more oomph.

Compost cart-off: Some greenies in Greenwood Heights and Windsor Terrace weren't thrilled to be guinea pigs for the city's Brooklyn debut of its new composting program. Thousands of households were selected to separate their food scraps from other garbage for recycling into compost. But the folks we spoke to claimed adding another color of trash bag to their kitchen duties was a rotten hassle. The pilot program begins officially this month.

Twilight trophy: Term-limited Borough President Markowitz expires at the end of the year, politically speaking. plaudit that allows Marty and fellow honoree Terence Winter — creator of the premium-cable hit, "Boardwalk Empire" — to rest in peace at the storied graveyard along with the likes of William Poole, better known as "Bill the Butcher" from Martin Scorsese's "Gangs of New York," and notorious mobster Johnny Torio.

Heinous attack: Neighbors remembered fatal attack victim Jeffrey Babbitt as simply "the sweetest," after the 62-year-old Sheepshead Bay man was randomly assaulted in Manhattan on Sept. 9 near the comic book store he loved to visit. Babbitt slipped into a coma at Bellevue Hospital Center, where he was declared brain dead. Alleged assailant Lashawn Marten struck the victim after threatening to "punch the first white man" he saw, according to witnesses. Marten was held on a $1 million bond while a grand jury weighs manslaughter and hate crime charges against him.

Mud in yer eye: Brawny patriots with deep wallets headed for the frontlines of Floyd Bennett Field, coughing up $100 a piece to buck through the muck and raise money for U.S. soldiers. The boggy, military-style challenge for civilians was billed as one of the most grueling, comprehensive, and mud-diest obstacle course runs in the country. A portion of the proceeds went to the Navy Seals Foundation and the 31 Heroes Project.

Fughedabout it Marty: Borough President Markowitz sang the blues after a community panel sank his dream to convert the landmarked Childs Building in Coney Island into a concert hall. Marty had counted on knocking a hole in the wall of the storied former restaurant and erecting a stage inside, with a seating bowl accommodating more than 5,000 people in an adjacent lot. Residents objected to sinking $50 million into a new entertainment venue while many schools, streets, community centers, and public housing buildings were still in disrepair after Hurricane Sandy.

Boo-walk balk: A phantasmagorical 29-year Brooklyn tradition screeched to a halt, sending goosebumps through the neighborhood, when organizers of the Marine Park Halloween Walk cancelled the popular jaunt because of a law suit. The Marine Park Civic Association, which runs the annual stroll, would only say the unprecedented suit stemmed from an incident last year, leaving ghosties, goblins, and other assorted trick-or-treaters wailing the boos.

Vendor 'Oscars': And the "Academy Award" goes to — a Red Hook food truck! El Olomega, a 23-year fixture, took home the top honors at the Ninth Annual Vandy Awards, billed as the Oscars of sidewalk dining. The Street Vendor Project, a team of attorneys dedicated to defending pavement peddlers, selected the Latin American snack wagon for its Salvadorian-style sammys. Organizers also honored dozens of rolling kitchenettes for bringing food to Hurricane Sandy victims.

Greenpoint restaurant, aptly named Eat, had an introspective message for gabby diners looking to commune with their grub: Shut up and chow down. The eatery ladled shark-and-squid stew in a silent dining room to connect patrons with their inner soul-plates. "If we limit our engagement with speech, we can find our consciousness doing other things," dished feast curator Nicholas Nauman. We're speechless.

Blackout run over by N.J. Express

BY COLIN MIXSON

The Brooklyn Blackout basketball team narrowly lost its inaugural game against the reviled Express from New Jersey 79-71 at the Aviator Sports and Event Center on Sunday night — but with only three practices under its belt, the rookie club could have done far worse against the 2013 American Basketball Association North-East Division champs.

"I'm definitely happy," said Onez Onassis, co-owner of the team. "I told them after game, 'don't walk out with your head low. At the end of the day, they didn't beat us — there's just some things we need to work on.'"

To be clear, the Jersey

Express did actually beat the Blackout — a team which only finalized its 14-man roster on Sept. 15.

But the young club put up a stiff fight and went into the second half trailing their veteran opponents by only a single point.

Jersey started running express early in the third quarter, and the Blackout was left 10 points behind.

That's when the Blackout showed a quality that coach Mark Cook looks for in any team — heart — and the team rallied to take a brief lead before the buzzer.

"I was just proud we fought back," said Cook. "Good teams do that, and a lot of teams will fall apart after they get that far behind."

Research indicates that the older a person is, the higher the risk of driver accident or fatality.

AGING CAN IMPAIR DRIVING ABILITY

The number of drivers 70 and older is predicted to triple in North America during the next 20 years. Research indicates that the older a person is, the higher the risk of driver accident or fatality. The risk posed by older drivers and the inevitable increase in older drivers on the road in the next two decades have sparked debate as to whether or not such drivers should be re-examined to ensure safety on the road.

In 2003, an 86-year-old man unintentionally killed 10 people and injured more than 70 when he drove his car through a crowded farmer's market in Santa Monica, Calif. In 2010, a 72-year-old Connecticut man faced vehicular manslaughter charges for allegedly striking and killing a motorcyclist. In 2012, an elderly man in Buffalo, N.Y. caused an accident resulting in three fatalities when he traveled in the wrong direction on the New York State Thruway. Very frequently, the local news is peppered with reports of elderly drivers causing serious accidents. Some wonder if more stringent requirements for elderly drivers would help the situation.

Thirty-three states presently have legislation in place to ensure drivers can retain driving privileges once they reach a certain age. It's important to note that, according to the National Safety Council, drivers over the age of 75 account for only 3.3 percent of accidents in the United States. Drivers age 25 to 34 account for the largest number of accidents, at nearly 20 percent. Some argue that these findings do not paint an accurate picture because senior drivers spend far less time behind the wheel and log fewer miles than younger drivers, reducing the chance for accidents.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration notes that aging can affect drivers in a number of ways. The physical and mental changes that accompany aging can have a profound impact on a person's ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. Reaction times may be slower, hearing and vision loss may affect driver awareness, loss of muscle strength and flexibility can make steering more difficult, and medication can impair focus or concentration.

Many senior centers and organizations offer programs that allow elderly drivers to brush up on their skills behind the wheel. Drivers also can contact their insurance companies to see if there are any sponsored classes they can take to reassess their skills and possibly lower their insurance premiums. AAA offers a driver improvement course and suggests seniors find a car they can safely and comfortably operate. It also offers Roadwise Rx, a free online tool that provides confidential, individualized feedback about medication side effects and how these drugs may impact drivers on the road. AARP also offers a driver safety course.

It also is important that senior drivers and their families familiarize themselves with local legislation to determine if driver refresher courses or retesting are necessary for older drivers to remain behind the wheel.

What you know about Medicare rehab can get you great care

BY JOANNA R. LEEFER

Medicare offers several wonderful health benefits free of charge, but, unfortunately, many people do not benefit from these services because they do not know about them. This is particularly true of Medicare-covered rehabilitation services. Here are some facts to know:

- Medicare Part B can pay for up to $3,700 of physical, occupational, and speech therapy in your home.

- Medicare Part A pays for up to 100 days for rehabilitation in a skilled nursing facility.

- Rehab through Medicare A and B can be extended to maximize your recovery — if you understand the proper procedures.

Medicare pays for rehabilitation services for the elderly and disabled. This includes physical, occupational, and speech therapy. Physical therapists work on the lower half of the body, and work on balance, walking, and transferring from one surface to another. Occupational therapy works on the upper body and tasks such as buttoning clothes, bathing, combing hair, cooking, etc. Speech therapy focuses on swallowing and some talking issues.

Rehabilitation can be conducted in a skilled care facility (usually a nursing home), an outpatient clinic or medical office, or in the patient's home. Medicare Part A pays for nursing home rehab while Medicare Part B covers outpatient and in-home treatment. Each Medicare has different requirements for continued coverage.

Medicare Part A pays for up to 100 days of skilled nursing home rehab. It pays 100 percent of the cost for the first 20 days of therapy, and 80 percent for the remaining 80 days. The other 20 percent payment comes out-of-pocket or through a secondary health insurance plan. Once the time cap is reached, Medicare stops all payment and any additional therapy must be paid privately or through a secondary healthcare plan.

This does not mean a person is guaranteed 100 days of rehab. The rehab staff is required to periodically assess each recipient and determine whether he is still eligible for treatment under Medicare guidelines. If the therapist determines the patient is no longer benefiting, treatment will cease and the patient is discharged.

Medicare Part B pays for outpatient and in-home therapy and has a financial cap for its services. After paying a yearly deductible, Medicare pays 80 percent of cost, and a secondary health insurance plan pays the remaining 20 percent. A therapist must periodically assess the client's progress and can continue services until the client reaches a monetary cap of $1,900 for physical and speech therapy (combined) and another $1,900 for occupational therapy. If more therapy is needed, this cap can be raised to $3,700.

On Jan. 24, the U.S. District Court for Vermont approved a settlement agreement that declares that nowhere in Medicare's policy is there a written statement that requires a person to stop therapy once he ceases making progress. In fact, therapy should continue as long as the recipient continues to maintain his current status or if it shows deterioration.

This new ruling has come as great news for individuals who are faced with chronic disabilities such as multiple sclerosis, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases. Now, as long as a person can prove that the therapy is maintaining his current level of function, or that it is preventing deterioration, he has grounds to continue.

Exercises for seniors with limited mobility

Exercise is important for all people, including the elderly. Yet seniors who have limited mobility or are confined to a wheelchair may think they couldn't possibly exercise. However, there are many things such individuals can do to stay in shape — all while sitting down.

Doctors recommend at least 30 minutes of daily exercise for most people. Exercise is beneficial for seniors because it keeps muscles from atrophying, improves mental alertness, strengthens bones, and leads to a healthier metabolism, among other things.

For seniors who think they won't be able to handle traditional exercise, chair exercises or modified pilates can be effective, even for those with trouble walking or standing for extended periods of time.

To get started, all you

Exercising in a chair is an effective way for seniors to stay in shape.

need is some loose-fitting clothing and a chair. Begin by doing some stretch-

circles to stretch the neck and back muscles. Lift arms over the head and slowly drop down to the sides of the body to stretch arms and back muscles. Lift and lower the legs a few times to warm them up.

To begin exercises, start slowly, and gradually build up repetitions. Try exercises that include boxing or punching into the air, arm circles, and arm curls. For the legs, work the back and front of the legs. Kick the legs out in front of the body several times. Hold legs parallel to the floor (as much as possible) and do leg crosses. Put feet flat on the floor and lift up the heels. Keep feet on the floor and push down to work the buttocks and the top of the thighs.

Those who have mastered these exercises and have been told by a doctor that it is OK to do something a bit more strenuous may want to add very light weights to the equation for more resistance. Two- or five-pound weights are all that's needed to give muscles even more of a workout.

Those looking to change things up from day to day can think about doing yoga in a chair, or even tai chi exercises. Deep breathing and meditation after workouts can be part of a cool down and stress-relief program.

If swimming is possible, or even simply entering a pool, water provides gentle resistance and could be a good way to work the body in a gradual manner. Buoyancy from the water will be easy on joints and this type of exercise is very low-impact.

Remember to always consult a doctor before beginning any type of exercise regimen, be it with a personal trainer or on your own. The doctor can discuss which type of exercises may be safe.

Physical therapy a vital part of treatment and recovery

Illnesses of the musculoskeletal system can result in temporary loss of mobility. But physical therapy can help to prevent those temporary problems from becoming permanent.

The American Physical Therapy Association says physical therapists diagnose and treat individuals of all ages who have conditions that limit their abilities to perform functional activities. Limitations in mobility may result from injury or illness or be present at birth. Many physical therapists develop a plan to reduce pain and restore function through various treatment techniques with the ultimate goal of restoring a patient's functional independence.

Physical therapists are licensed healthcare professionals who must receive a degree from an accredited physical therapist program before taking national licensure exams that enable them to open a practice or work in a facility. The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts a 30 percent growth in physical therapy careers through 2018, which is a rate better than all other occupations. Unemployment rates for physical therapists are very low, and they are in high demand.

Physical therapists employ various physical modalities to help with certain conditions. For example, a patient may be asked to perform various range-of-motion exercises to restore function to an injured part of the body. Physical therapists also may use heat, cold and electrical impulses to reduce pain and stimulate muscle function. Physical therapy sessions frequently include some form of massage as well.

While athletes frequently rely on physical therapy as they recover from injuries, others can benefit from physical therapy as well. For example, physical therapy may work in conjunction with other treatments for cardiopulmonary disease. The cardiopulmonary system delivers oxygen to active tissues, which plays an important part in movement. When the cardiopulmonary system is compromised, muscles and other tissues may not function as they should, and certain exercises and mobility therapies may be needed. Physical therapists also aid in improving physical ailments related to neurological diseases, such as cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, spinal cord injuries, Parkinson's disease, and Alzheimer's disease. Physical therapists may also help treat poor vision, poor balance and paralysis.

The length of physical therapy will depend on the condition and the recommendation of the therapist and doctors overseeing the treatments.

Children who have learning disabilities related to a neurological or physical condition may benefit from certain forms of physical therapy. For example, vision problems can compromise academic performance, so physical therapy that aims to enhance visual tracking skills and strengthen the eyes in conjunction with corrective lenses may help youngsters, or even adult students, perform better in the classroom.

Very often physical therapy will be recommended by a general doctor or an orthopedic surgeon as part of recovery from a surgery or a condition. The therapist may work in conjunction with another doctor to provide a program that helps foster a faster and safe recovery. Physical therapy tends to begin gradually and resistance is slowly built up as the body strengthens. The length of physical therapy will depend on the condition and the recommendation of the therapist and doctors overseeing the treatments.

Ongoing Success in Lung Cancer Screening at New York Methodist Hospital

NEW YORK METHODIST HOSPITAL

It's never too late for lifelong smokers to reduce their risk for developing lung cancer—the deadliest cancer killer. In fact, the National Cancer Institute recommends lung cancer screenings for current smokers between the ages of 55 and 74 who have smoked at least a pack a day for 30 years or more, or heavy smokers who quit within the last 15 years.

Since its inception less than 12 months ago, New York Methodist Hospital's Fred L. Mazzilli Lung Cancer Screening Program has drawn hundreds of men and women who have chosen to have a thorough diagnostic evaluation for lung cancer and monitor their risk for developing the disease.

“What comes next for a patient who undergoes a lung cancer screening is based on a thorough medical evaluation and low dose computed tomography (CT) scan of the lungs,” said Samim Jafri, M.D., lung cancer research coordinator at NYM. “In particular, we are looking for nodules (spots) that have formed on the lungs over time, and how large they are. The bigger the spots, the higher the risk for developing lung cancer.”

For those who undergo a lung cancer screening and display spots on the lungs that are at least five millimeters in diameter, follow-up testing is recommended. This may include a full CT scan, a positron emission tomography (PET) scan that produces a three-dimensional image of the lungs, or a biopsy of the nodule.

“Many of the patients we have screened have exhibited some degree of lung damage due to many years of smoking,” said Suhail Raof, M.D., chief of pulmonary and critical care medicine. “At NYM, our patients can count on the collaboration and diagnostic expertise of lung cancer experts, including radiation and medical oncologists, thoracic surgeons, pulmonologists, interventional pulmonologists and interventional radiologists, to carefully assess each individual's case. However, that expertise is only available to those who have taken the crucial first step:

Suhail Raof, MD

deciding to be screened.

“So for the patients who have already taken advantage of the Lung Cancer Screening Program, particularly those who were unaware that they were already at high-risk for lung cancer, the Program has been an outstanding success so far,” concluded Dr. Raof. “The battle against lung cancer is ongoing, and we are proud to be in the thick of the fight.”

To arrange for a lung cancer screening at NYM, call 718.780.LUNG. Lung cancer screenings alone are not a substitute for quitting smoking, or never smoking in the first place. To find a physician who specializes in smoking cessation, call NYM's Institute for Asthma and Other Lung Diseases at 866.ASK.LUNG (866.275.5864).

BRIGHTON EYE

Will I need glasses after cataract surgery?

Millie R. Fell, MD

Clinical Associate Professor of Ophthalmology at NYU

By the year 2030, there will be 70 million Americans over the age of 65. At least one out of every three Americans will have some sort of eye problem. Cataracts are one of the most common problems facing Americans, but fortunately surgery can usually restore vision. With modern-day cataract surgery many patients can experience improved vision almost immediately. Today, patients don't only want improved vision, but also less dependency on glasses for driving, computer work and reading. There are new implants which for the right patient can lessen the necessity for glasses and can also correct astigmatism.

Every patient planning to undergo cataract surgery should have the following discussion with their ophthalmologist:

1) How strongly do they want to not use glasses.

2) What are their hobbies? Patients who need crisp distance glasses for example in order to play tennis are not necessarily good candidates for the new multifocal implants. If the patient is still working, what kind of job do they hold and what vision requirements do they have?

3) Do they drive?

4) Do they use glasses for reading now?

The new multifocal implants which make patients less dependent on glasses are not necessarily the best option for every patient. A thorough discussion with your ophthalmologist is a must so that patients have realistic expectations about their vision after cataract surgery

How to make a home handicap-accessible

Oct. 4-10, 2013, COURIER LIFE

Many homeowners have found themselves scrambling to make their homes handicap-accessible after a sudden injury or illness. In addition, some homeowners have found themselves looking to make adjustments to their homes in anticipation of welcoming elderly, less-mobile relatives into their homes.

Converting a home into a handicap-accessible space can seem like a daunting task that requires adjustments to nearly every part of the house. While the extent of those adjustments depends on the individual who needs to be accommodated, some of the areas homeowners must address when making their homes handicap-accessible are universal regardless of the individual's condition.

Entryways

A home's entryways often must be addressed when making the home

Making a home more handicap-accessible can be a significant undertaking, but many of the adjustments homeowners must make are small in scale and won't take long to complete.

more handicap-accessible. Portable ramps can be an affordable option and are often ideal for those who only need to make temporary adjustments, such as when a resident suffers an injury that requires he or she spend some time in a wheelchair. When the adjustments will just be temporary, a folding wheelchair might be necessary, as the doorways might not be able to fit a standard wheelchair that doesn't fold.

When adjustments appear to be permanent, homeowners might need to expand the doorways in their homes. Contractors typically recommend expanding doorways to at least 32 inches, which provides some maneuverability when wheelchairs, which are typically between 24 and 27 inches wide, are entering the home. Doorways at the most commonly used entryways, including front doors and doors to the bathrooms as well as the individual's bedroom, will likely need to be widened.

Bathroom

The bathroom might be the area of the home that needs the most attention. Slippery conditions common to bathrooms can make things especially difficult for people in wheelchairs or with disabilities. Grab bars should be installed in bath tubs and shower stalls and next to toilets.

But grab bars aren't the only adjustment homeowners should make in the bathroom as they attempt to make a home more handicap-accessible. Safety treads, which can provide a secure, slip-free surface on the floors of showers and tubs, can be installed. Add a hand-held shower head to the shower stall to make it easier for those with a disability to shower. Portable transfer seats, which enable wheelchair-bound men and women to transition from their chairs to showers and bathtubs, can be purchased and kept in or near the bathroom.

Water fixtures

An often overlooked adjustment homeowners must make when transforming their homes into handicap-accessible spaces concerns the sinks throughout the home. Disabled persons may find it difficult to access faucets on sinks throughout the home, especially when there are vanity cabinets beneath the sinks. Replacing such sinks with pedestal sinks can improve maneuverability, but make sure such sinks are lower to the ground than standard pedestal sinks. A sink that's just a few inches lower than a standard sink is considerably more accessible to people in wheelchairs.

Closets

Closets are rarely handicap-accessible. Homeowners can address this issue by creating multi-level closet spaces so individuals can place their clothes at accessible heights. Closet shelves can be lowered and doors can be widened so disabled persons can easily manage their wardrobes. In addition, consider installing a light inside the closet and make sure the light switch can be easily reached from a wheelchair.

Making a home more handicap-accessible can be a significant undertaking, but many of the adjustments homeowners must make are small in scale and won't take long to complete.

Scary lawsuit could spook future civic events

To the editor,

A lawsuit has quashed the 30th annual Marine Park Halloween Walk ("Marine Park Halloween Walk canceled!" online Sept. 20).

This seems to be the trend as of late. Our society is too litigation-happy. The battle cry is always, "Sue!" Many times it's over the smallest thing that has nothing to do with an actual injury, but everything to do with embarrassment or pride.

I handled insurance claims and litigation for 12 years. I am not a lawyer, but I worked with them. I got tired of the ridiculous lawsuits and reasons people gave for suing everyone in sight. Here are some winners. Plaintiff ran into the company's car, while looking behind them. The contractor barricaded the area where he was concreting. Signs placed everywhere warned all to walk around. Plaintiff was annoyed that it blocked his direct access to the elevators. I could have written a book, but would have run out of aliases for the various characters and clowns.

The Halloween walk is held in the daytime. Yes, there are scary characters, but they are easily seen. Young children are escorted by parents and there is a police presence. The walk is held in Marine Park, not in the woods and bushes bordering Gerritsen Creek. Though civic association staff are keeping mum on the suit, if this case concerns bodily injury, I hope it is of a legitimate nature. If not, the litigant best beware. There are laws against fraud, and such cases should be prosecuted to the fullest extent.

Hopefully, it doesn't permanently curtail this or other future civic events. Otherwise, we best just give up living life because someone will find a way to spoil it for all of us.

Muslim-mad Shav

To the editor,

Shavana Abruzzo is back to her old ways of hate and bigotry ("Focusing on Islam," A Britisher's View, Sept. 27).

She seems intent on writing the modern-day version of "Mein Kampf," with the entire Muslim community as her targeted victims and this newspaper as her vehicle. This is pathetic and totally un-American.

Members of the Brooklyn and American Islamic community deserve to be treated with dignity and respect, just like all our citizens. No one should be attacked in such a prejudicial manner because of their race, creed, religion or country of origin.

Cherry-picked examples of a group don't stigmatize or represent the entire community. Unfortunately, Shavana Abruzzo has proven she will never change, and that she has only one real topic to share with your readers. How truly sad.

Do-nothing pols

To the editor,

Councilman Lew Fidler (D-Canarsie-Flatlands) and Assemblyman Alan Maisel (D-Canarsie) have done nothing to ease our traffic problems. E. 66th Street, from Avenues T to U, is the worst, where the speed is close to triple digits almost every day.

Where are the surveillance cameras and speed bumps? This is a perfect example of why we need term limits on public officials.

I saw in a school in Park Slope with signs that say what the speed limit should be in the school zone. I guess in that area they have real politicians who care. What is the community board doing here? I have dealt with them, and they are always nasty. These beauties from the Carl Kruger regime are insensitive.

We must take back our streets. If these elected officials can't do it, then it's time for them to resign.

Perry November
Mill Basin

To the editor,

Witness Michael Yuryev, who recorded the terrible accident on E. 66th Street on camera, said he appealed to Community Board 15, Assemblyman Alan Maisel (D-Canarsie), and Councilman Lew Fidler (D-Canarsie-Flatlands) for a traffic survey ("Lambchopped! Lamborghini cut in half in Mill Basin accident," online, Sept. 26).

Save your breath, Michael. In January, I sent Councilman Fidler a list of hot shots in our community, where we have lived for 53 years, listing their plate numbers, auto descriptions, and their traffic offenses. He said he sent it to the police, and advised that I do likewise.

The police do not issue a summons unless they observe the violation.

Singing the blues

To the editor,

I don't recall reading a discussion of the bigger picture about what will happen to the concert series after Borough President Markowitz leaves office ("Board spans Marty's Childs play?" online Sept. 26).

I don't believe that the local papers covered the final Martin Luther King, Jr., concert, when Marty became emotional on stage and had to be comforted by, I believe, his wife. He said he didn't know how it would be continued, but made it clear he would not be spearheading these shows as he has for these past decades.

Is the entity doing these concerts a private corporation, a non-profit, or merely an arm of a politician's office? How much funding came from the government and how much from corporations? This last question is relevant because if someone takes over for Marty, there may not be the same relationships to ensure similar amounts of corporate contributions in the future. The focus on Childs, one of two locations, missed the more important questions.

Joanna's fans

To the editor,

I read Joanna DelBuono's column, "A hate crime is a hate crime no matter what" (Not for Nuthin,' Sept. 13). I think the guy behind this was probably mentally deranged. With hate crimes it is always a combination of what and how you do it, whether it is vocalized or not. And with any crime, if you are you mentally stable or not plays into it.

I understand that blacks are very angry at whites in general, and some blame us for their unfair shake in life. I suppose many blacks see all whites as the devil, as the cause of all their problems, and this makes it easy for them to feel justified in hurting white people when they are angry. There are a lot of bad white people and a lot of bad black ones because bad people come in all shades. But why do the good ones have to pay for it?

I feel sorry for those who are economically disadvantaged, but they think that whites had a lot to do with that, even though a lot of the slaves were initially kidnapped and sold by blacks in Africa to the traders. Ironically, Africa is the capital of slavery today. It is like the Middle East — sad all around. Tribal and ethnic "eye for an eye" spirals everything downward into hell. What disturbs me is the complete disregard for the lives and properties of others around the world by so many. Some people are devoid of a human conscience. Underneath is a great deal of hate, even if it isn't ethnic, or racial, it is hate, an evil form of anger gone wrong.

You have to understand exactly what you hate, and avoid hating a person or group of people. As a member of a community of free people, it is the individual's responsibility to never allow that emotion to lead him or her into criminal activity toward innocent people. Hate is not an excuse to commit crimes. Just the opposite, it should lead to change for the better, an improvement or a correction in the community environment, and this should be done non-violently.

Aldous Huxley once said, "The nature of the means determines the nature of the end."

Jonathan Kasso
Jersey City, N.J.

To the editor,

Joanna DelBuono's column, "A hate crime is a hate crime no matter what" (Not for Nuthin,' Sept. 13) had a ring to it that I have to agree with. I get the feeling that most of the news we hear nowadays is more Hollywood glamor, while celebrity news reporters put on their best smiles for the camera instead of pursuing actual facts.

Have you ever viewed Dr. Drew on CNN, where his guest panelists gather on camera in their Sunday best to jaw about their take on the latest headline? Last night they were considering George Zimmerman, and whether or not he was released on his own recognizance, if the jury had decided his case based on the "Stand Your Ground" law, or whether it was a racially biased crime or not. They were not only quite impressively for or with Zimmerman, as they opined on whether or not the jury decided if he was the victim or the perpetrator, but they said it with emotionally explicit expletives!

This latest round of discussion came about as a result of an altercation between Zimmerman and his wife. The drift of this Dr. Drew pointed out in gossip, rumor-bin style.

Stan finds more stuff in his pockets

Here some more interesting tidbits I found on the scraps of paper in my pockets:

The headline read — “Congress to exempt itself from Obamacare.” If the Affordable Care Act is good enough for 300 million people, why is it not good enough for our elected representatives? What they are really saying is “We could make laws that you must accept, but we don’t have to.” Hey, Chuck — that’s not very nice.

Have you noticed that whenever your physician misses your appointment, it is because “the doctor had an emergency and is running late.”

Yeah, right! He always has an emergency on the day that I am supposed to be there. So we pass the time by reading those year-old magazines sitting in the pile. Then we notice that everyone else is also reading them, including the sick people who cough and sneeze all over the open periodicals. A word of advice — bring your own reading material and keep a container of Purell with you at all times, especially when visiting your physician.

I was looking at the calendar to check my schedule and I just realized that this year Thanksgiving and Hanukkah fall on the same day. Instead of yams and stuffing, many of us will be enjoying a side dish of potato latkes with our turkey.

From the Commerce Department: last month housing starts only rose .9 percent to an annual rate of 891,000 units, missing by a mile the expected of 917,000 units. Housing permits fell 3.8 percent to an annual rate of 918,000 units, missing estimates of 950,000. Why do the mouths in Washington tell us that the economy is getting better?

I can’t believe I’ve gone my whole life without hearing the word “polyandry.” Before you run to the internet dictionary, ask the person at the next desk if she knows what it is. Chances are that she isn’t familiar with it either. Okay, here’s the big hint: you do know what “polygamy” is, don’t you? So what is “polyandry?”

I was shopping on a busy avenue and couldn’t help but notice so many people walking by talking on their cellphones. What did we do before there were cellphones? We used telephone booths. Today, with no need for them, most of those booths are gone. That brings me to another very important question — where does Clark Kent go to change his clothes?

We began to hear more and more about gun control within minutes after the tragedy in the Washington Naval Yard. # Focusing on Islam, part 3

The world’s Muslim population will increase from 1.6 billion to 2.2 billion by 2030, overtaking non-Muslim growth, projects the Pew Research Center.

Britain’s Muslim community is expected to double to 5.5 million people, meaning it will have more Muslims than Kuwait in less than 20 years.

That raises disturbing questions for western democracies grappling with geopolitical tensions.

Will jihadists cease their holy war? Are Muslims up for a religious reformation? Can Judeo-Christian ideals survive? When will we wean ourselves off Opec, a Muslim petroleum dictatorship that predicts our crude oil demand will soar to 113 million barrels a day in 20 years?

industrially, financially, and militarily by the United States, that give virtually no allegiance in return.

Pakistan, the nuclear nation Pew predicts will become the world’s most populous Muslim country in the next two decades, is one of the top recipients of American foreign aid. It is also where people chant “Death to America” in public.

The U.S. has pledged the “Land of the Pure” more than $30 billion in assistance since 1948 to promote democracy and root out radicals. Pakistan has pocketed the cash, but not fixed its cruel human rights record or cooperated fully in the war on terror.

Pakistan’s government dillydallied when the Taliban shot Malala Yousafzai, 15, in the head last year for advocating education for girls. And Pakistani officials professed ignorance of Osama bin Laden’s lair near a military compound, prompting the State Department to brand Pakistan’s intelligence agency a terrorist organization.

The Muslim mindset is key to our future world relations. But not for any flattering reason, note introspective believers.

“Muslims outwardly show obedience to Islam, but the truth is many of them don’t give a s---.” says a former Pakistani-American living in Denmark.

The man, who didn’t want his name used, tells of checking out what a high-ranking morality cop in Islamabad had been perusing on the Internet during a visit to his home.

“I was alone in the room where his computer was, I looked at the ‘history’ and found that the dude had been on about four or five porno sites the day before,” he says.

Shariah-based intrusions in America are already clear and present, thanks to cavalier Americans.

Al Gore made a reported $100 million profit when he hawked Current TV to the sheik of oil-drenched Qatar, a refuge for Al Qaeda terrorists, stated the 9-11 Commission. Qatar also put up $620 million for the $700 million CityCenterDC a multi-use project six blocks away from the White House, in exchange for stipulations, such as no bars in the vicinity.

Mankind’s successful civil systems have endured because they have championed commerce, science, and human rights — a time-honored triumvirate that has historically evaded many Muslims.

Islam’s expanding footprint raises important red flags for hard-won democracies that won’t matter much without freedom.

Wooden spoon for the kids — and parents!

Brian Holloway’s home was trashed by over-indulged, spoiled, entitled little brats, and now the parents want to sue Brian Holloway. Can you believe the nerve?

The ex-football player whose upstate country home in Stephentown was vandalized over a booze-filled “Project X”-like Labor Day weekend trash party is now being sued by the parents of the little darlings because he dared to find out which teens perpetrated the crime and then proceeded to post their names on Facebook. Mind you, he found out who they were by discovering the students’ Facebook pages and the pictures they posted of the event. Destructive and stupid.

The parents of the entitled vandals feel that this is going to ruin their little darlings’ chances of getting into a good college.

NOT FOR NUTHIN'

Joanna DelBuono

Are these parents kidding?

These brats urinated on the carpets, burned holes in the table tops and counters, trashed windows, floors, and turned his house into a dump — then posted the pictures of their destruction online. Mr. Holloway estimates the damage to his home is approximately $20,000.

Ruining their chances. Really? What they posted will ruin their chances. Better yet, a little time in jail might prevent these wilding teens from growing up to be criminals.

Mr. Holloway even offered a way for these brats to redeem themselves. Come and help clean up your mess. Only four out of the 400-plus students showed up. The rest were sniveling behind mommy’s skirt folds.

And now the former offensive lineman is fighting back. When he heard that he was going to be sued by these indulging, enabling, litigious parents, Holloway authorized the Rensselaer sheriff’s office to press charges. He stated in an article, “Everyone that broke the law, I’m pressing charges against.” He added, “The parents had a chance and students had a chance to come forward, and only four did.”

“I tried to be as accommodating as I could, but they took their stand by not showing up,” Holloway said.

So far, according to the report, six have been arrested, four teens and two men in their 20s. One of the men, as a teen, lived with the Holloway family and was helped by Holloway only to return the favor with this drunken debauchery.

Not for Nuthin™, but if I were the parent of one these snot-nosed brats I wouldn’t be initiating a lawsuit against Mr. Holloway, I’d be initiating a wooden spoon over my child’s head.

Carmine can't believe the road on this sidewalk

I'm madder than the kid at the end of the line in the telephone game who gets the completely wrong message and is then chided for it — when it wasn't at all his fault that everyone else screwed it up — over the fact that too often in this world when somebody sees something they don't say nothing, and the world would be a much better place if they did!

Look, you all know the ol'Screecher has made a living yelling and screaming about things that other people should have noticed in the first place, like the time I demanded the Transit Authority oil the screeching wheels on the trains on the West End line, or the time I demanded the Transit Authority oil the screeching wheels on the trains on the Sea Beach line, or the time I demanded the Transit Authority oil the screeching wheels on the trains on the Culver line, but I wouldn't have had to do none of that screechin' if someone beat me to the punch.

BIG SCREECHER

Carmine Santa Maria

And I also know my audience like the back of my hand, and you don't have to tell me that your favorite columns written by yours truly are the ones that feature me and my trusty steed Tornado riding off into the sunset after some hoots and hi-jinks that take place somewhere in the borough of kings.

So this week's column is a no-brainer (careful, commentators), because it features both!

That's right! I was atop Tornado making my rounds around the neighborhood to make sure that everything was hunky-dory when I came upon the sidewalk behind Dyker Beach Golf Course. Folks, millions of people, including joggers who repeatedly told me to move my ashes, used this sidewalk everyday to take in the beautiful views of the VA hospital and Dyker Beach Golf Course.

Problem was, I couldn't figure out what was actually happening around me because I was bouncing around like a little kid in one of those bouncy house things because the sidewalk was so uneven! I couldn't see in front of me, to the left of me, or to the right, either! How it got that way, I don't know. But I do know that if somebody complained about it before me, it would have been fixed already, and I wouldn't have to screech about it now!

Now is the point in the column where I go off on the type of tangent that drives my editor crazy.

Do you guys know about the White Cliffs of Dover? You don't? Wanna hear about them? No? Then turn the channel, because I'm going to tell you anyway. Now stand back as the Screecher learns you something!

"There'll be bluebirds over, The White Cliffs of Dover, Tomorrow, just you wait and see" were the words to a song of hope that the World War Deuce generation used to sing when they were feeling down. Well I'll tell you this, I sincerely hope that the White Cliffs of Dover on Seventh Avenue near 92 Street get leveled before smart ambulance chasing suites start posting their phone numbers on the fences promoting injury suits that will cost the city hundreds of thousands in damages, thus raising the taxes on we poor homeowners who have to fix our sidewalks or face hefty astronomical fines.

Now back to my "If you see something, say something," monologue.

It is amazing to me how many joggers, pedestrians, and neighborhood people use that horrible sidewalk and do not report its dangers. Call Community Board 10, or the 311 like I did, and give the location of the hazardous raised sidewalks, which everyone is now calling the White Cliffs of Dover.

And Mayor DiBlasio frequently referenced the "Tale of Two Cities" in his campaign, which now he can relate to the gorgeous Dyker Beach Golf Course and its surrounding sidewalks — or should I say obstacle course — where the idle poor never meet the idle rich.

I even saw one small dog looked down from his cliff and was so scared of the height that he pooped!

They really gotta do something about it, and pronto!

Screech at you next week!

5TH ANNUAL T.E.A.L. WALK/RUN FOR OVARIAN CANCER

Supporters and Volunteers Joined Forces against Ovarian Cancer to Make this year's T.E.A.L. Walk and 5kRun the Largest Yet

Every year on a Saturday during September, the official month of Ovarian Cancer Awareness, thousands of participants, supporters, and volunteers gather at the Prospect Park Bandshell in Brooklyn to take a stand against Ovarian Cancer and celebrate those who have survived this devastating disease at the annual Tell Every Amazing Lady About Ovarian Cancer Walk/Run. This year, the 5th Annual T.E.A.L. Walk/Run, taking place on the clear and sunny morning of September 7th, was the largest to date. Thousands of enthusiastic participants from around the country showed their support the cause, and celebrate the very first T.E.A.L. 5K Run.

The day kicked off at 9am when over 250 participants took part in an exciting timed 5K race organized with the help of NYC RUNS. Following the Run, singer Linda Haviv sang the National Anthem, and Ovarian Cancer Survivors were honored at the Survivor's Ceremony taking place on stage at the Park Bandshell. Close to 100 Ovarian Cancer survivors were invited on stage to accept a single white rose from the parents of Louisa M. McGregor and Pamela Esposito-Amery, the founders of the organization, as a symbol of their unceasing hope and courage in the face of struggle. American Idol Semi-finalist Brielle Von Hugel provided musical accompaniment as the survivors walked across the stage and accepted their rose. Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz and WABC News reporter Stacey Sager helped kick off the Walk, and participants proudly walked the 2.5 course with family and friends, dressed head to toe in their teal garb. After the Walk, walkers and runners congregated at the Bandshell for a live performance from Brooklyn-based artist Alyson Greenfield, as well as stage interviews with Ovarian Cancer Survivors conducted by WABC News reporter and Ovarian Cancer Survivor Stacey Sager.

The T.E.A.L. Walk/Run is currently the largest Ovarian Cancer Walk/Run in New York City, and has raised over a quarter of a million dollars to date which directly benefits Ovarian Cancer research and awareness programs. T.E.A.L. is a grassroots foundation started by two Brooklyn sisters when the late Louisa M. McGregor was diagnosed with Ovarian Cancer. Because there is no accurate screening for Ovarian Cancer, T.E.A.L. works to educate and inform women about the signs and symptoms of the disease in order to help facilitate early detection, and save lives. T.E.A.L. also works to help fund screening research with the hope that women will have a reliable Ovarian Cancer screening test in the foreseeable future.

Mayor Bill will change direction of education

There are only three months left in the Bloomberg era, and the folks at the Tweed Building who work for the Department of Education are probably dusting off their resumes and thinking about their next gig.

The conventional wisdom is that Bill DeBlasio will be New York's next mayor and he will put his own stamp on the future of public education. (All bets are off if Lhota wins, because he is likely to continue a lot of Bloomberg's policies, but that's a topic for another column).

Looking at DeBlasio's campaign promises, it is easy to glean that his administration will make a very sharp break from the Bloomberg-Klein-Walcott era, and we should expect to see a steep reversal of course in 2014.

First of all, DeBlasio's main emphasis during the campaign was on the importance of universal pre-K, and he said we should fund that through a tax on those making more than $500,000 annually.

He is absolutely correct in pushing for universal pre-K; the achievement gap in our city be-

MAYORAL SPIN CYCLE

tween minority and non-minority kids is at one grade level by kindergarten, and universal pre-K should help alleviate most of that disparity.

What DeBlasio will not likely get is the tax increase because it requires the approval of the state legislature and 2014 is an election year in Albany. It is highly unlikely that Gov. Cuomo and the legislature will push a tax increase on anyone as they prepare to face the voters in November.

Another flashpoint in a DeBlasio administration will be the future of charter schools. DeBlasio has said in the past that charter schools should be charged rent, and he does not seem to be a fan of former Councilwoman Eva Moskowitz, the head of the fastest-growing chain of charter schools in the city, the Success Charter Network.

Moskowitz, a very controversial figure when she was in office, has decided to close her schools on Oct. 8 and call for a march of her students and their parents across the Brooklyn Bridge to send DeBlasio and his team a message that charter schools have widespread support, particularly among minority parents.

It will be very interesting to see how this plays out; there are more than 100 charter schools in the city and they have become a growing part of the fabric of our education ecosystem. It will be hard for DeBlasio to dismantle them, but he is likely to halt their growth in his first term.

Another area DeBlasio is likely to reverse course on is the use of high-stakes testing in determining student progress and curriculums. So much of public school learning is now geared to drive up test scores that it will be challenging for DeBlasio and his new chancellor to undo this. This will certainly take time, and it is not clear that he will be able to do this seamlessly in a first term.

During the campaign, DeBlasio often spoke about the need to bring parents back into the education system and in decision-making and to stop the top-down management by the department leaders at Tweed. This is one of those "mom and apple pie" ideas, hard to argue with, but also hard to envision how it will be executed. In principle, DeBlasio is correct; the only way education succeeds is when there is a three-way partnership between student, parent, and teacher working together to ensure children succeed.

There is also the question of how DeBlasio will handle the teachers in this city, a group like all other public sector unions that has gone without a raise for almost four years. It is very likely that DeBlasio will be fair, and perhaps even generous, with the teachers and their union; as a progressive leader who has strong ties to the labor movement, it is safe to predict that he will work hard to give city workers as much as the city budget allows.

Let's hope that in addition to pay increases, DeBlasio focuses on intense teacher training, both before they get into the classroom and then relentlessly when they are full-fledged teachers. Professional development and mentoring of our teachers is the single greatest way we will improve our city's education system in the short term. Everything else is a very distant second to this incredibly urgent need.

Innovative treatment in vascular medicine at Vascular Institute of New York

By Camille Sperrazza

Brooklyn's first specialist in vascular medicine is joining the Vascular Institute of New York, says Dr. Enrico Ascher, the institute's founder.

She is Dr. Natalie Marks, and, "She will bring a new dimension in the care of patients with vascular diseases," he says. "She will highlight the importance of medical management to avoid surgery whenever possible."

Dr. Marks is skilled in all the latest techniques in dealing with stroke prevention, aneurysms, and in caring for patients with conditions that cause leg pain, swelling, and wounds that do not heal, he says. She has lectured extensively about these topics, and is expected to join the practice Aug. 1, says Dr. Ascher.

Dr. Ascher has earned a few acclaims himself. He is the only vascular surgeon who has been featured on New York Magazine's list of "Best Doctors in New York City" for 10 consecutive years.

He is chief of vascular surgery at Lutheran Medical Center; an attending physician at Maimonides Medical Center; and a professor of surgery at Mount Sinai Medical School.

The doctor is a pioneer when it comes to creating new, noninvasive medical techniques, and he has introduced these methods to medical organizations all over the globe.

Dr. Ascher has published more than 250 scientific articles in medical journals, and has authored more than 65 textbook chapters. He has written a book, and it is "one of two best sellers on vascular surgery," he says.

His innovative developments include creating a new, less invasive balloon angioplasty that reduces side effects, and exposes patients to no radiation at all, he says. In addition, the procedure does not inject patients with "contrasting material, which can cause allergic reactions and harm the kidneys," he says. "We have done close to 1,400 procedures, and have a success rate of 99.9 percent."

He has also developed a less invasive technique for operations that involve the carotid arteries.

"We make a one-inch incision, and put a Band-Aid on it," he says. "The patient goes home without a big cut."

This groundbreaking procedure has been adapted in France, England, and throughout the United States, he says.

"People learn from us, and we are visited by surgeons from more than 30 countries."

Limb salvage is yet another field in which Dr. As-cher has earned acclaim.

"We have developed an operation that saves the legs of patients deemed unsalvageable," he says. It's possible because of a technique appropriately named the "Ascher Technique," in which the arteries are saved.

Research, studying, and learning are Dr. Ascher's passions. He has published extensively on the subject of varicose veins.

"We are trying to understand why they develop," he says. "We are investigating."

The doctor has observed that, in Brooklyn, "A lot of people have leg swelling. It's a big problem." Why is this the case? "Swelling means there's water in the legs, and that the veins are not working properly."

People who have these issues should visit the center to get treatment that can help.

The Vascular Institute of New York opened its state-of-the-art facility in Sunset Park more than a year ago.

"It is the most attractive office in New York City," says Dr. Ascher. The highlights include marble floors, an operating room, and a state-of-the-art wound care center.

"I take a lot of interest in the care of wounds," says Dr. Ascher. "Wounds can heal when they are taken care of. You have to find the conditions that cause ulcers, and they can be treated."

Of course, this, in turn, leads to saving limbs.

"One of the problems is that people do not take care of their wounds as well as they should," says the doctor, and this center addresses that need.

Dr. Anil Hingoorani, associate professor at Mount Sinai, and attend-

residents following the turmoil created by the super-storm.

"Last fall I was able to overcome my psychological stress caused by Hurricane Sandy only thanks to Sheepshead Bay Library," a local resident wrote in a letter to the foundation nominating the branch for the competitive grant. "Those workshops helped me to come back to myself and get back to my daily routines and reality as a human being."

The Sheepshead Bay branch was inundated in the storm surge, and lost the majority of the non-fiction selection in the flooding, but it reopened soon after the storm passed, offering workshops aimed at psychological healing.

"The workshop was to express your emotions through poetry, writing, and arts and craft," said branch manager Svetlana Negrimonvskaya. "I knew that we wouldn't only be an information, recreation, and cultural center, but we had a more important mission to become a lifeboat for the community in times of distress."

More than 4,300 nominations were received by the foundation, a Manhattan-based fund created by the late founder of Revlon that aids exceptional libraries through its Urban Affairs program. The Sheepshead Bay branch was selected as one of 10 finalists, which were then whittled down by a panel of judges including famed "Goosebumps" author R.L. Stine, which selected the E. 14th Street book lender as one of five grant recipients.

The winners were selected based on qualities typically sought in libraries, including the attitude of librarians and the noise levels inside, with points going to those branches with the most subdued ambience. But in the case of the Sheepshead Bay branch, the foundation gave special consideration to the workshops created there to help Sandy victims after the storm.

Negrimonvskaya, a resident of Sheepshead Bay, suffered losses of her own from Sandy — both property damage and devastation of a more sentimental nature.

"I lost many old pictures of my children when they were young," said Negrimonvskaya. "I went through this pain and disaster, so when we reopened, I knew what kind of help and service I had to provide for the community."

Negrimonvskaya created workshops for children and adults aimed at easing the psychological trauma of seeing entire neighborhoods turned upside down. The branch manager recalled that much of her own healing came through her work with local kids.

"It helped me to see the children laugh," she said.

The $10,000 grant will help restock shelves laid bare by the storm, but Negrimonvskaya said locals should also plan on penciling in a concert on their calendars sometime soon.

"We are so glad to have the money, and we have big plans," she said. "This money will help us to hire professional entertainers and musicians to perform for the community."

Seth Low

her to tend to dozens more children daily — which she said would lead to delays in care.

"Your child will have to wait, and they will have to wait a very long time," said Rosemary McCormick.

And acclaimed Courier Life columnist and Seth Low ballroom dance instructor Carmine Santa Maria also pointed to the possibility of unanticipated construction costs from having to accommodate younger children.

"Do you realize how much money you save if you don't bring the K-through-Four school here and you don't have to lower the urinals?" the Big Screecher demanded.

Bensonhurst's Community Board 11 voted unanimously to condemn the charter school plan, on the grounds that — with PS 177 11 blocks down Avenue P — children would flood the streets in the mornings and afternoons. The neighborhood panel said this was disconcerting because city statistics show that 92 percent of motorists in the area speed.

The city's representatives responded that its estimates show that the Seth Low building can accommodate 1,341 students — far more than the 743 kids it currently serves. The Department of Education also estimated that registration at the school would fall — a prediction Seth Low leaders disputed, given the overcrowding in nearby grade schools. A spokesman for the agency also claimed that the charter schools are far superior to the public schools they are replacing.

"A once-broken system has been transformed with new, high performing schools — and those additional options have delivered extraordinary outcomes for children. Our strategy has worked, and with this new school, that progress will continue," said spokesman Harry Hartfield.

The Success Academy chain sued to block a state investigation into the financing of one of its schools in July, arguing that it was outside its power. A Success spokeswoman claimed that neighborhood families actually supported the charter school, despite the overwhelming opposition of those who turned up.

"Local parents are demanding more high-quality options to educate their children and Success Academy, which runs some of the city's highest performing public schools, looks forward to the opportunity to try to meet some of this demand," said Kerri Lyons.

Move the fun from pool to pool hall

BY CAMILLE SPERRAZZA

Playing pool is affordable recreation the entire family can enjoy.

Gone are the rundown pool halls of yesteryear. Instead, there's Gotham City Billiard Club, a clean, safe facility, with a homey feel. This family-owned pool club celebrates its grand re-opening on Saturday, Oct. 5. There will be specials rates, and at 7 pm, patrons will enjoy a complimentary buffet, says Isabel Buckley, who co-owns the facility with her husband Kevin.

Renovations include new state-of-the-art Diamond Pro-Am pool tables, says Buckley.

"These are the tables used in professional tournaments."

Hone your skills on them by joining the facility's leagues. On Monday nights, there's an Eight-Ball League, that begins at the end of October, says Buckley. A Nine-Ball League, run by Megabucks, a popular amateur pool club, meets on Wednesday nights. In addition, Gotham City Billiard Club hosts Tri-State Tour, one of the oldest and most established pool organizations in the greater metropolitan area. There are monthly competitions for cash prizes, she says.

Or, come with friends and play on your own. The facility offers daily and nightly rates. Emergency medical technicians, fire fighters, police officers, members of the military, and MTA personnel receive 25 percent off on Sunday nights after 8 pm, says Buckley.

If you're just learning the game, don't hesitate to get started. Gotham City Billiard Club offers instructional DVDs.

"We have the largest library in the tri-state area [on the subject]," she says. You can pick up additional pointers by renting from their collection of professional matches.

When you get hungry, snacks, beverages, and homemade food abound. Buckley says she does the cooking, in a kitchen on the premises, offering baked ziti, meatballs, meatloaf, burritos, and quesadillas. Cold beverages are served as well as coffee, tea, hot chocolate, and cappuccino. Beer and wine are also available.

Don't think this club is a men's only establishment. Women are welcome, as are children. Thursday nights after 8 pm ladies play free. Also, Gotham City Billiard Club supports local schools, and hosts school functions.

If you're looking for a unique way to celebrate a special occasion, bring the party to the pool club, where the décor includes model cars and sports memorabilia. There are packages for kids, adults, and for corporate functions.

"We're the reasonable ticket in town," says Buckley.

Corporations supported by the pool hall include Lutheran Hospital and the Detectives Endowment Association.

The Buckleys opened Gotham City Billiards about a decade ago, taking over the old Pockets pool hall, which had seen better days. Their vision was to create an environment in which families could feel comfortable.

"We wanted to bring affordable entertainment to Avenue U," says Buckley.

That goal was realized, and the grand re-opening means the place is even better and brighter.

Sometimes, being behind the eight ball isn't such a bad thing.

fought Mayor Bloomberg's term limit extension, and campaigned against racial profiling by police. But not all of her initiatives have been so political. In 2010 James sued a day laborer after she cut her shin walking into the trailer hitch on his parked truck.

The public advocate is supposed to serve as ombudsman for the city, though what duties that entails is somewhat undefined. The office has been in the spotlight over the past year as current public advocate Bill DeBlasio has used his position as a launching pad for his mayoral campaign and clinched the Democratic nomination going into November's general election. And though the public advocate's powers have been steadily limited over the past two decades, the officer still appoints city planning and budget officials and is the second in command if something takes the mayor out of commission.

The low turnout runoff election cost the city $13-million to facilitate, prompting some politicians to call for instant runoff voting, in which voters rank their candidates in order of preference.

Gop war

"We would have walked out of here united, if the election was not stolen."

But some felt that the chairmanship battle was a self-inflicted wound to the relatively small Brooklyn GOP — and that the party of Lincoln cannot stand with its house divided against itself.

"The party faces enough challenges at this point, and this could have been settled other ways," said one member, who asked not to be named.

Golden and Eaton have feuded several times in recent months. In April, Golden called for the resignation of the unnamed "County Chairman #1" mentioned in the federal indictment of state Sen. Malcolm Smith (D-Queens) and Councilman Dan Halloran (R-Queens) — who stand accused of attempting to bribe GOP borough leaders into letting Smith run for mayor as a Republican. Golden's statement was widely viewed as an attack and accusation against Eaton. The two also endorsed rival mayoral candidates, with Golden backing former Metropolitan Transportation Authority head Joe Lhota, and Eaton supporting supermarket mogul John Catsimatidis. Lhota ultimately triumphed, and became the Republican nominee.

ATTENTION: Mag. Gen. James McConville presents Cpl. Jered Dominey with the Bronze Star Medal. Sgt. Mark A. Moore

Heroes come in all shapes, sizes

HARBOR WATCH

What actions or characteristics describe a hero? Would you recognize a hero if he or she were standing next to you or speaking with you?

Many have witnessed accounts of heroism reported through a variety of media sources, but what drives a person to perform heroic acts? Is it in his bloodline? Curious questions that may never provoke a similar response, however, one fact will remain true: heroes come in all shapes and sizes.

Sgt. Zachary R. Berline stands just over six-foot-tall, squared shoulders and jaw. A college-educated man who speaks moderately slow, his words are direct and their meaning rarely misunderstood. Older than most of his fellow infantry team leaders assigned to 2nd Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment, 2/10 Security Forces Assistance Brigade, Forward Operating Base Orgun-E, Berline enlisted after completing his bachelor's degree.

"My recruiter was kind of surprised that I wanted to join the infantry," said Berline. "He said they saw it all the time though, guys who scored high on their entry exams, could pick any job in the Army, but insist on joining combat arms."

Berline continued to say not joining the infantry might be a decision he would live to regret.

Standing beside Berline in front of the 9-11 memorial located in the main courtyard of the Regional Command-East Joint Operations Center on Bagram Airfield was Cpl. Jered R. Dominey.

Dominey is a soft-spoken soldier who is of average size and works as an intelligence collector assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2/10 SFAB, at Forward Operating Base Sharana, and describes himself as just another intelligence nerd.

Physically, these men are very different, but they share common traits.

Twice the enlistment power

Queens twins born minutes apart serve as one in the Army

DOUBLE THE SERVICE: Twins Edward and Jacob Maldonado share everything from weight loss to enlisting.

Tina Beller

HARBOR WATCH

They were born just three minutes apart in Queens, and for nearly every minute since then, the 19-year-old Maldonado twins — Edward and Jacob — have been nearly inseparable.

Young Hispanic Americans, they share an apartment, cook and share meals, play sports, take road trips together, and watch movies and New York Mets games together. They even complete each other's sentences.

So it wasn't out of the ordinary when the duo enlisted in the Army together on July 25 at the Military Entrance Processing Station located at Fort Hamilton, after nearly seven months of motivating each other to exercise and lose a combined 65 pounds — completing turning around their lives — together.

"After the Navy wouldn't accept us because we were overweight, I called Edward about the idea of joining the Army together," said Jacob. "I was surprised. I didn't think he would want to explore it because he just thought the Army was all about the infantry."

Enter Staff Sgt. Matthew Johnson of the Army Career Center Flushing in Queens, who was honest with the pair about the challenge they faced losing a large amount of weight in order to enlist.

"We incorporated them into our future soldier physical training program to help them safely lose weight and stay motivated," Johnson said. "Through their own hard work, they lost about 65 pounds. They enlisted as human resources specialists, and get this — they will be going to the same basic combat training, same advanced individual training, and the same Airborne School together this fall."

Johnson mentored the brothers to lose the weight leveraging the Army future soldier physical fitness program, so the pair could realize their dreams, their potential, and avoid being an obesity statistic. Moreover, Johnson was convinced the Army could help them with finding purpose and direction — a life plan.

"It is hard for a young man [living] in Queens at 19 because you aren't in high school anymore," said Jacob. "And college may not be an option. So young men here find a different path to take, which isn't always the best choice."

"Now they've become a part of something bigger and much more positive," said Johnson. "I am very happy for these guys, and I am excited to do this every day for these young men and women because they just need an opportunity to excel. Who knows, they might be the next sergeant major of the Army down the road."

Hispanics have a long history of service to the Army and its mission around the world. These two, selfless young Hispanic-American twins continue that legacy of service and strengthen the strong relationship between the U.S. Army and the Hispanic community.

ASSIST, PROTECT, AND DEFEND

Military police are honored for their dedication to the corps and to the armed forces

HARBOR WATCH

The soldiers whose regimental crest bears the words “assist, protect, and defend,” celebrated the 72nd anniversary of the Military Police Corps at Fort Belvoir, Va. on Sept. 26.

Gathering at the officer’s club for a formal but low-key remembrance of fallen military police and to reaffirm their oath to the corps, about 150 MPs, their spouses, veterans, and wounded warriors toasted the president, the country, the Army, the regiment and their lost comrades.

Following the toast and oath reaffirmation, the Army’s provost marshal general, Maj. Gen. David E. Quantock, opened the evening praising the military police of today for their professionalism and readiness in providing police transition team training, detainee operations and conducting missions with special operations forces.

“This is not the military police of old and although we stand on their shoulders, we’re about looking forward, forging the future,” said Quantock, who also oversees the Criminal Investigation Command and Army Corrections Command. “We know where the Army is going, and we want to be there to enable our commanders, because as small as we are, we have a huge part to play in making them successful.

“At the end of the day, it’s about assisting, protecting and defending by being an enabler for our combat forces, our combat support forces and our combat service support forces,” he added, before welcoming guest speaker Army Vice Chief of Staff Gen. John F. Campbell.

Campbell began his remarks saying that whenever he gets a chance to speak before groups, he always talks about the current fight, and that there are still 50,000 service members and civilians in harm’s way, and the nation continues to be at war in an era of fiscal uncertainty which will continue for some time.

He also reminded the MPs to never forget the nation’s wounded warriors or those who paid the ultimate sacrifice — 287 military police have lost their lives in combat and 2,610 have been wounded in action over the last 12 years, he said.

Campbell recognized four MPs in the audience who, on an early morning in August, had been running on the Capitol Mall when a jogger was hit by a city bus. The runner was losing blood rapidly from one of his femoral arteries, but two of the soldiers stopped the bleeding by fashioning a tourniquet from their shirts while the other two directed traffic. Campbell said that thanks to the MPs’ quick, decisive actions, the man survived and continues toward a full recovery.

The vice chief also talked about the transition the Army is presently moving through — which could take until 2020 to accomplish. Readiness will have to be balanced along with end strength and modernization to keep the Army from hollowing out.

As the Army downsizes its end strength, so too will a variety of family programs, he noted.

“Believe me, the chief and the secretary of the Army are committed to maintaining all of those critical family programs that we have out there — and I said critical family programs,” Campbell said. “We cannot afford all the programs. We have to get out there and talk about expectation management and let you know and be transparent with you.

“We can’t be redundant because we can’t afford that, but we absolutely have to make sure that the programs which mean the most to our families and our soldiers are held on to because we’re about people and taking care of our people,” he said.

The values the Army has instilled in these two soldiers allowed them to execute their mission flawlessly. Their actions saved the lives of those around them, distinguishing them from their peers.

On May 27, 2013, Berline’s infantry team came under heavy rocket fire, resulting in multiple Afghan National Army, or ANA, soldiers being wounded and structures dangerously close to an ammo supply point being set ablaze.

“It wasn’t until the fifth day of our mission that things really hit home,” said Berline. “We saw the incoming rockets hit the ANA side of the base, and that’s when we saw the fire.”

With disregard for his own safety, Berline rushed to the aid of the ANA soldiers already attempting to put out the fire while his team followed closely behind.

“We gathered up our soldiers and rushed to help,” said Berline. “We divided into teams, some set security, some tended to the injured, and others went to where the structures were burning.”

On that day, the bonds between U.S. soldiers and Afghan National Security Forces grew stronger.

“It really didn’t matter if Americans or Afghans were in the bunkers, they needed help and we were going to provide that help,” said Berline. “The success of the day was in the training; everyone helped that day, everyone wanted to be a part of this.”

Berline received the Bronze Star Medal with “V” device for his valorous actions that day as an infantry team leader, directing his team through combat operations while simultaneously performing life saving measures.

Keeping with military tradition and following in his grandfather’s footsteps, Dominey also received the Bronze Star Medal with “V” device for saving the lives of multiple coalition force soldiers during a direct and decisive engagement with an insider threat on Super Forward Operating Base.

On June 8, 2013, Dominey stepped outside the wire for the first time, attending a meeting on the ANA side of Super Forward Operating Base, when he noticed something was not quite right.

“I noticed an Afghan soldier who was acting odd but, this was my first time out and I didn’t really know what to do,” said Dominey. “It wasn’t until he fired at us that I truly understood the gravity of the situation.”

Engaging the enemy first was Dominey, who shot at the assailant multiple times, but the fight was not over.

“I linked up with Staff Sergeant Hart and we went to see if the threat was neutralized,” said Dominey.

The threat was not neutralized and he continuously attempted to engage U.S. soldiers.

“We ended up re-engaging the enemy two more times before he stopped fighting back,” said Dominey.

What a drag: , Kristen Sieh left, and Libby King channel two iconic Americans — Theodore Roosevelt and Elvis Presley, respectively — in “Roosevelvis.”

THE PELVIS IS A LONELY HUNTER

Teddy Roosevelt and Elvis collide in ‘Roosevelvis’

By Meredith Deliso

What do you get when you put two female actors on stage and have them play Teddy Roosevelt and Elvis Presley?

The answer is “Roosevelvis,” a surreal, humorous, and thoughtful play that touches on themes of gender identity, power, and masculinity.

Starting Oct. 11 at the Bushwick Starr, the show by the New York company The Team brings the two iconic American figures together at last.

The original production was born out of actresses Kristen Sieh’s and Libby King’s obsessions with the big game hunter and the jailhouse rocker who loved him.

“In The Team’s work, we love taking elements from history or mythology and placing them alongside contemporary stories,” director Rachel Chavkin said.

“Roosevelvis” tells the story of Ann, a lonely meat-processing plant worker in modern-day Rapid City, So. Dakota who, after a series of unsuccessful dates with women she meets on the internet, embarks on that cliché of self-discovery, a road trip. But what follows this is anything but typical. Ann follows the pop culture traces of her hero Elvis across the Great Plains to Graceland, where the spirits of the Pelvis and his personal hero, Theodore Roosevelt, haunt her.

In bringing the icons to life, Chavkin was at first tempted by the obvious visual humor of having the actresses perform in fat suits, but she dropped the idea as the piece developed and King, who fittingly portrays the King, was more inspired by impersonators of Elvis than the man himself. Sieh, meanwhile, wanted to embody the indomitable spirit of a younger — and slimmer — Roosevelt. The pair makes for a study in contrasts.

“Teddy is this towering figure of moral objectivity, while Elvis is this much more slippery creature,” Chavkin said.

Elvis is known as much for his iconic moves as his groundbreaking music, and the black-box production will include dances inspired by the entertainer jarringly coupled with ballet. To realize the road trip, a projected video will show the pilgrimage from South Dakota to Graceland, and rowing machines will fill in for the car.

The play is a poetic, surreal production that Chavkin hopes entertains and challenges people’s notions of gender.

“Upsetting common assumptions about binary ideas of gender is definitely a big theme for us,” the director said. “Throughout the piece you see the actresses transform in a whole bunch of ways. Some are obvious, in terms of drag, and some are much subtler.”

“Roosevelvis” at the Bushwick Starr (207 Starr St. between Wyckoff and Irving avenues in Bushwick, www.thebushwickstarr.org), Oct. 11-Nov 3, $25 ($20 previews).

BIG FROM JAPAN

Art punks Ultra Bide are headed for Williamsburg

By Danielle Furfaro

You may not have heard of them, but Ultra Bide is not just big in Japan. The art-punk band from the Land of the Rising Sun, fronted by punk guru Hide Ultra Bide, has spent the past four decades incessantly touring, unleashing its unique brand of weird chaos on audiences around the globe. The band channels avant garde stalwarts like The Boredoms and Mr. Bungle but manages to incorporate some love into the cacophony it showers on its rabid fans.

Hide Ultra Bide talked to this reporter from the Osaka airport, where he was waiting to get on a plane and aurally assault North America on a cross-continent tour, beginning with a show on Wednesday night in Williamsburg.

Danielle Furfaro: What is your philosophy in your songwriting? What are you trying to get across to the fans?

Hide Ultra Bide: My philosophy is that art is war! To make music is to fight. All without weapons. Just make sound waves in massive phase art attack through space straight to the audience brains. Distortion bass to distortion bass attack!

Ultra weird: Hide Ultra Bide is a punk-rock rebel who speaks and plays in the abstract.

DF: Do you go for the most entertaining or the most shocking or the most culturally relevant?

HUB: I started independently with rock noise tape experiments when I was a teenager in 1975. I was bad technically but I loved sound and words. When someone told me how to play and I hated the idea, I just said, “No!” That independence and freedom kept my music underground entertaining, underground shocking, underground culturally relevant, all at the same moment.

DF: How have you managed to keep the band together for so long?

HUB: I don’t have a lot of money to share with my band mates. I have my own recording studio and rehearsal studio and find cheap ways to go to the venue. If money is made, it is evenly shared with my band mates. When making the sound it is tense, but managing is easy and fun.

DF: What is a typical Ultra Bide show like? Is there a combination of spoken word and music or are they usually done in separate shows?

HUB: All sound is music. When we got out from our mom’s body, we start making noise. We are all making those three segments whether we are on the stage, eating or talking to friends. It’s all just sound.

DF: Who are your favorite bands? What are your favorite shows that you played?

HUB: I am the local band live show maniac. I love recording and composing my music, so it is hard say who is good. I love all, I miss all, we can play with them all again. I’m not kissing ass, I am just a local bands maniac!

Live version of New Yorker caption contest lets you put words in the pros mouths

By Jaime Lutz

The New Yorker’s caption contest garners lots of entries each week, but it’s only once a year that the highfalutin’ magazine’s cartoonists and their citizen-writer counterparts walk into a bar together.

That is the draw of the New Yorker Festival’s live caption contest, which pits boozy teams of would-be jokesters against one another for a secret grand prize.

“There is apparently out there an enormous desire to be, if not a cartoonist, part of the process making the cartoons,” said Rhonda Sherman, the founding director of The New Yorker Festival, now in its 14th year.

For the contest, which will take place in Gowanus this year, 11 or 12 groups of 10 will be shown cartoons and asked to come up with as many captions as possible in the allotted time.

You think you can write a better caption than us? Prove it, in the comments.

Community Newspaper Group / Jaime Lutz

Expect dogs, cats, therapists’ offices, rounds of golf, and other New Yorker staples.

The brainstorming session will climax with resident cartoonists Matthew Diffee, Carolita Johnson, and Liam Francis Walsh judging the results to music. But be warned: contestants at the amusing event may raise their voices.

“The contest is a sort of rock-licking affair,” Sherman said.

Tickets for the contest have sold out online, but do not despair, last minute tickets will be available Friday at the MasterCard Stage at the School of Visual Arts Theatre in Manhattan from noon to 4 pm.

And if you are unable to make it, leave the contest feeling unfulfilled, or just plain cannot get enough of writing the gags to other people’s art, we encourage you to enter this newspaper’s own caption contest. The Bacon Takedown will turn Gowanus into a pig-sty

By Colin Mixson

When you've got 15-pounds of bacon, anything is possible.

The Bacon Takedown is coming home to Brooklyn, and more than 20 borough chefs will march on the Bell House in Gowanus armed with 15-pounds of Hormel Black Label Bacon each for a prime-cut pork showdown of near-epic proportions that is sure to stretch the limits of what you thought your favorite breakfast meat was capable of.

"It's never going to jump the shark," Takedown organizer Matt Timms said. "There is no shark — it's bacon!"

Timms is a Bushwick man who organizes culinary battles that thrust amateur chefs into the arena of public opinion, forcing them to cook, bake, and brew for the adoration of urban food lovers. For the Bacon Takedown, competitors are given two days — longer if they plan to infuse booze — to turn the giant sides of bacon into strange concoctions that they serve at the main event to a hungry crowd.

Five years ago, Timms was enjoying modest success with a variety of other takedown events, including a jerky and a cookie takedown, when his first Bacon Takedown debuted in a Williamsburg watering hole,

Mr. Takedown: Matt Timms has made a career out of his Takedown food competitions, of which the Bacon Takedown is amongst the most popular. The event returns to the Bell House on Oct. 19.

Bar Matchless. The rest, as they say, is history.

"Suddenly I did bacon and I had a line wrapping around the block," he said.

It was as if bacon had been relegated to a mere omelette garnish and Timms had rediscovered its hidden potential.

The show went national and, as Timms's bacon contest traveled as far west as San Francisco and as far southwest as Austin, bacon dishes of all shapes, sizes, and degrees of liquidity emerged from ovens and blenders across America.

New and fantastic bacon dishes were invented and hordes of pork lovers descended on bars across America to taste strange porcine treats such as sarsaparilla-and-bacon gelato, bacon risotto, and even liquor drinks including almond-and-bacon-infused whisky. There is something about the flesh of pigs that fuels creativity, according to the contest's organizer.

"Bacon drives innovation and, these contestants, they're tasting blood," Timms said.

Every contest is officiated by a panel of minor-celebrity judges, but the true contest is for the love of the paying public, who will fork out $15 for a chance to taste and render judgement on the cooks' bacon offerings.

UrbanGlass reopens as a 'treehouse'

Artist asked for donations to craft her drinking glass forest

By Samantha Lim

This forest is more at risk of breaking than burning.

For her latest exhibition at UrbanGlass, artist Katherine Gray collected thousands of drinking glasses to recreate the trees that grow in abundance throughout Brooklyn including the Norwegian maple, the London plane, and the mulberry. Titled "A Tree Grows" after the iconic novel by Betty Smith, the exhibition opens in conjunction with the grand unveiling of the new UrbanGlass arts center.

UrbanGlass, the first and largest artists glass studio in the United States and the only glass-blowing facility in the New York metropolitan area, was temporarily relocated to Gowanus for renovations earlier this year. The newly opened, three-story space that also houses Bric Arts in the historic Strand Theater building features more than three basketball courts worth of state-of-the-art work space for the glass hub, and puts the crushed-sand sculptors at sidewalk level.

"One of the incredible parts of our renovation project has been the establishment of a space for the organization at street level," Executive Director Cybele Maylone said.

The new Agnes Varis Art Center will present changing exhibitions of glass art and design and will also feature a store stocked with artwork from resident glass-manipulators, according to Maylone.

"A Tree Grows" is the inaugural show at the center and is meant to symbolize the life cycle of glass, the artist says. In making it, Gray says she pondered the process of creating glass, which once involved burning trees to generate heat. Therefore, like ashes to ashes, the glass trees practically come from trees.

The artwork also pays homage to UrbanGlass's supportive community.

The artist sent out a public request for drinking glasses two months prior to the opening of the exhibition. Friends and strangers mailed her glasses of all shapes and sizes from countries as far away as Australia. Some donations were unlabeled while others included short, encouraging notes.

"People were generally excited about getting involved," she said. "I was a little scared and a little thrilled at the same time, because I am used to fabricating most everything myself and making all aesthetic decisions."

Gray asked for drinking glasses as opposed to other glassware because she fancied the idea of using an overlooked object.

"They are so ubiquitous that people don't really 'see' them," Gray said. "It's kind of like not seeing the forest for the trees."

Under Gray's deft fingers, the everyday vessels have been transformed into a thing of wonder. Brooklyn's only glass forest will be on view through January 4, 2014.

The best reads — handpicked by local bookstore employees

WORD's pick: "MaddAddam"

by Margaret Atwood

Like all truly good series books, this newest installment will make you want to read Atwood's The Flood novels over again from start to finish. MaddAddam follows the surviving God's Gardeners, revealing the history of Adam One and Zeb and the surprising ways they influenced Crake in his early years. Happily for fans like yours truly, we also get lots of the Crakers and of Toby, who is the scrappiest scrapper that ever scrapped. And if you have not read these yet, I cannot recommend them highly enough. "MaddAddam" is the grand conclusion of one of the best-written, most frighteningly plausible post-apocalypse series I've ever read.

— Jenn Northington, WORD 126 Franklin St. at Milton Street in Greenpoint, (718) 383-0096, [www.wordbrooklyn.com].

The BookMark Shoppe's pick: "The American Heiress"

by Daisy Goodwin

"The American Heiress" by debut novelist Daisy Goodwin tells the story of poor little rich girl Cora Cash at the turn of the 20th century. An only child and heiress to a flour empire, Cora has everything money can buy — exquisite jewels, clothing straight from Paris, and dozens of admirers. For Cora's social climber mother, the only thing money cannot buy is a royal title, so the family heads to England and soon enough Cora catches the eye of a very noble yet destitute duke. A marriage would help both families but all is not what it seems. Cora is thrown headfirst into English society and soon learns that money cannot buy friendship, trust, or family. Colorfully detailed and a great read for fans of historical fiction.

Greenlight Bookstore's pick: "BABAYAGA" by Toby Barlow

"BABAYAGA" is an absolute delight. Paris, witches, sex, and a detective who has turned into a flea make it bizarre, witty and completely engrossing. Pick a comfy chair, open a bottle of French Bordeaux and enjoy!

WUNDERBAR!

Where to take the final sips of Oktoberfest

By Mollie Grewe

This weekend is the chance to party like a German — Oktoberfest style! Between sausage tastings and stein-holding contests, it can be hard to pick which party is right for you. That's where we come in, helping you decide which pretzel-and-bier spot to head to and break out your favorite lederhosen.

On Friday, Oct. 4 and Saturday, Oct. 5 go to Park Slope for Die Koelner Bierhalle's annual party. The week-long festival started in late September and this weekend will close out the festivities with German bands, dancers, and stein-holding contests, which test the strength of beer fans by having them hold a one-liter beer stein at shoulder level for as long as they can. Choose this celebration if you fancy a loud, fun time. And slap dancing. Not familiar? Picture grown men playing a complex, full-body version of Miss Mary Mack, but hitting each other.

Two-day Oktoberfest celebration at the Die Koelner Bierhalle [84 St. Marks Pl., between Bergen Street and Prospect Place in Park Slope, (347) 227-7238, [www.thekbh.com]. Oct. 4, 5:30 pm and Oct. 5, 7 pm, Free. Live band and contests.

If you are in Williamsburg on Saturday, Oct. 5, be sure to check out Radegast Hall & Biergarten. The party starts early at 1 pm with the Johnny Koenig Band and the Bad Buka Acoustic band will rock late into the night. The shindig will boast a pig roast, keg tapping, and, you guessed it, a mug-holding contest. Choose this celebration if you're in the mood for polka and pork.

Oktoberfest celebration at the Radegast Hall & Biergarten [113 North Third St., between Berry Street and Wythe Avenue in Williamsburg, (718) 963-3973, [www.radegasthall.com]. Oct. 5, 1 pm, free. Live band and contests.

If come Sunday, Oct. 6, you are still in the mood to celebrate, Frankie's Spuntino in Carroll Gardens is throwing a daytime bash from noon to 6 pm. Here you can enjoy Prime-Meats-made bratwurst and burgers as you sit in the crisp autumn air of the backyard beer garden. Choose this celebration if you are more excited about Oktoberfest for the food and drink than the dancing and competitions.

And for the stein-tipper who just cannot accept the formal end of the German holiday, there is Buschenschank in Cobble Hill, which is hosting Oktoberfest every Saturday all month long! From boot-drinking and mug-holding contests, to live bands and Oktoberfest cookies, Buschenschank guarantees a good time. Costumes are encouraged.

Get a taste of Spain at Casa Pepe in Bay Ridge

BY CAMILLE SPERRAZZA

Dig out your sombrero from the back of the closet.

It's "Fiesta Friday" at Casa Pepe Mexican and Spanish Restaurant — and you're invited to the party.

Every Friday, from 4 to 7 pm, enjoy half price appetizers such as guacamole, nachos, chicken wings, and mussels.

Watch as the guacamole is prepared before your eyes: the soft avocado is scooped from its skin and placed inside the traditional, Mexican footed-bowl called a molcajete. Chopped tomato is sprinkled into the bowl, as is fresh cilantro, tomatoes, onions, jalapenos, and fresh-squeezed lime, the server adding or subtracting ingredients as you desire. Scoop up the dip with Casa Pepe's colorful green, black, yellow, and red tortilla chips. Order a margarita from the bar, and you're off to the start of a great weekend.

Try one of the organic margaritas—fresh-squeezed limes and oranges are added to tequila and triple sec, just as is in Mexico. Casa Pepe knows how to make a margarita that's muy bien, as it has been doing so since 1980. Likewise, you can enjoy a tall glass of sensational sangria, swimming with bite-sized bits of oranges and apples.

Opt to dine in the main area, where stucco walls are decorated with Spanish artifacts and paintings, reminiscent of Spain itself. Here, lighting is subtle, providing for a more intimate dining experience. Towards the back of the restaurant, in the garden room, it's brighter. A glass wall overlooks an outdoor garden, and guests can dine in this natural setting when the weather is warm.

Casa Pepe's menu is comprised of Spanish and Mexican favorites, so bring all of your amigos because there's something everyone can enjoy. Start with tapas like gambas al ajillo — shrimp sauteed with garlic, virgin olive oil and white wine, served still sizzling.

Nibble on chorizo Espanol — tasty, grilled Spanish sausage. Also enjoy mejillones veracruzanos — Prince Island mussels, cooked with parsley, garlic, tomatoes, olives, and capers.

One of the outstanding main courses is zarzuela de mariscos. With this dish, you get to feast on all of the treasures of the sea — Maine lobster, little neck clams, mussels, shrimp, calamari, and salmon, cooked in a tasty broth. It's a generous portion, presented on a festive orange plate, and served with a side of yellow rice that's sprinkled with green peas and red peppers.

Another favorite is the pollo mar y monte — a tender breast of rolled chicken that has been stuffed with Chihuahua cheese and gulf shrimp. It's brought to the table inside a small black pan, steaming with juices, a wonderful blend of flavors. This, too, is served with a side of rice.

Perhaps paella is the most classic of all Spanish meals. It's a rice dish, whose origins are traced to Valencia, Spain. Traditionally, paella was cooked outdoors, over an open flame, and whatever was on hand — seafood, chicken, rabbit, and vegetables — would be added to the rice, simmering it over a low heat, creating a one-pot meal. At Casa Pepe, paella Valenciana is prepared with little neck clams, shrimp, mussels, chicken and Spanish chorizo, simmered with saffron rice. There's also paella marinera, which contains seafood only.

For dessert, enjoy flan al caramelo, a Spanish custard, chocolate mousse, or Spanish creme brulee. A customer favorite is helado frito Casa Pepe — tri-flavored ice cream, stuffed with almonds and cherries, then flash-fried with caramel. It's the Spanish version of the tartufo.

Mexican coffee, cappuccino, and special coffee drinks with liquor, are wonderful ways to cap a fine meal.

The bar area is a great place to linger. Join the fun on Saturdays, from 10 pm to midnight when Happy Hour means toasting the weekend with $4 beer and $5 margaritas, sangrias, and daiquiris.

A Sunday brunch is served from noon to 4 pm, and starts with a cocktail. It's all a very reasonable $12.50.

Should wish you to have your own private fiesta, Casa Pepe welcomes bridal showers, intimate weddings, rehearsal dinners, christenings, and corporate functions. Up to 125 guests can be accommodated.

Breaking the bank, Brooklyn-style

SHEEPSHEAD BAY

Yippee! Investors Bank cuts the ribbon and cracks the vault on Oct. 5. The bank with the slogan, "Banking in Your Interest," is celebrating the grand opening of its latest branch with a $5,000 scratch-off lottery. But don't despair, there will be other smaller rewards for first, second, or third prizes.

Investors is one of the fastest growing community banks in the city — and one with a heart. It will donate $25 for every new customer to the Kings Bay Y, the Asian Community United Society, or the American Brotherhood for the Russian Disabled.

Manager Gene Svetnikof, a previous Standing O recipient, will be on hand to emcee the fun, including face painting, balloon artists, games, refreshments, and a performance of the Chinese Lion Dance.

Grand opening of Investors Bank [2560 Ocean Ave. at Avenue U in Sheepshead Bay, (718) 648-2096] on Oct. 5 at 9 am.

Wedding bells will ring

Congratulations and a shower of rose petals to altar-bound sweethearts Eugene Volkin of Sheepshead Bay and Amanda Ann Clarkin of Staten Island. Eugene popped the question last month to his surprised bride-to-be — who also happens to be Standing O's niece — at the happiest place on earth, the castle at Disney World's Magic Kingdom in Florida.

The newly minted fiancée says she is ready to embrace her new life.

"Eugene stole my heart, so I'm taking his name," she said.

Standing O is spiffing up her little yellow shoes for the big wedding day next September, and sending out a time-honored toast: "May your engagement be short and your marriage be long."

BAY RIDGE

Run like the wind

The race is on for borough son Shelton Hollers to raise funds for Parkinson's research on Oct. 12. Shelton will put his best foot forward for the 10K run in Prospect Park, featuring plenty of live music along

STRIKE THE BATONS: The Madison Marching Band performed at the Tunnel to Towers Run on Sept. 29.

76 trombones for 'Tunnel' 5K run

MARINE PARK

Break out the batons for the Madison Marching Band. The group from James Madison High School performed at the Tunnel to Towers 5K Run and Walk in Battery Park (in that other borough) on Sept. 29 — after cheering participants from atop the World Financial Center. The annual event raises money for rescue workers and soldiers injured in the line of duty, and supports children who have lost a parent.

The band, led by co-directors Rebecca Ellis and George Vilson, stepped up the beat with great oldie but goodie hits, including "Dance to the Music" by Sly and the Family Stone, and "September" by Earth, Wind, and Fire.

the route to keep those 10K-ers moving.

Our pal Shelton, a passionate runner, says he added a charity component to make his latest trek more meaningful.

"I enjoy being able to contribute to a cause I believe in," he said. "I know Parkinson's is a serious disease that needs more research."

Standing O says, "Run like the wind, Shelton, and raise lots of bucks." We'll be cheering you on.

WILLIAMSBURG

Marathon woman

Just 26.5 more miles to go for veteran runner Bonnie Ann Miller, who will compete in the New York City Marathon next month. The grueling course begins on Staten Island, wends its way through the five boroughs, and ends up in Central Park.

Bonnie, 25, will be running to raise funds for the American Lung Association, a cause that is near and dear to her heart. She was born nine weeks premature, with under-developed lungs, and later developed asthma. But the avid runner hasn't let that stop her from leading her life in the fast lane — or from doling out sound advice to health-challenged athletes aspiring to the world's most famous race.

"You find what works for you," said Bonnie. "If you are athletic and are struggling with lung disease, work with your doctors to control your symptoms and figure out a game plan that works."

Standing O fast-tracks this marathon woman good wishes for a great run.

Frame those honors

Cheers to Xaverian High School seniors Patrick Coen and Michael Darby for being named semi-finalists in the 59th annual National Merit Scholarship program.

The budding brainiacs were so excited to hear the great news that they couldn't wait to share it with Standing O.

"It's a really big accomplishment," said Patrick, who is flying high on cloud nine since being elected vice president of Xaverian's Student Coordinating Council. He plans on studying engineering in college.

Michael is so busy working on his Eagle Scout project and deciding what his major will be, that he was completely floored when the news came down.

"I'm torn between business, engineering, and math, but I am applying to Harvard," said the honoree, also a member of the Dramatic Society and the Young Democratic Club.

Way to go, guys! Standing O wishes the pair good luck, and can't wait to dispatch shout outs when they move their tassels over to the right on graduation day next year.

- Build an emergency supply kit — water, nonperishable foods, first-aid materials, prescriptions, flashlight, battery-powered radio, and a fully stocked toolkit.

- Plan for locations — emergencies don't come with warnings, so plan ahead for a safe meeting place for your family should you be displaced. Make sure everyone knows where to meet and how to keep in touch.

- Plan for risks — know where you live and identify the hazards that have happened or could happen in your area. Snow storms usually occur near mountains, and hurricanes near the coast. Check evacuation routes, and be mindful of knowing when to stay and when to go.

- Know your community's plan — find out from your local government offices how it communicates with residents in case of emergency, such as by TV, radio, telephone, or door-to-door.

- Stay connected to National Grid — add www.nationalgrid.com to your mobile device or follow nationalgridus on Twitter.

Parker leads Poly Prep to homecoming win

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Not even a banged up shoulder and a mishandled punt could spoil Chris Parker's day.

The Poly Prep quarterback followed up a five-touchdown performance last week with four more scores in a comfortable 35-12 win over the visiting Hun School during a homecoming football game last Saturday afternoon.

The junior, who was hit hard in the shoulder in the third quarter, ran for 147 yards and two scores on 16 carries. Parker also completed three of six passes for 81 yards and two more scores. The success has his confidence rising.

"I think I got my touch back," Parker said. "I'm starting to get a feeling."

There was nothing but good plays for the majority of the first half as Poly (5-0) built a 21-0 lead with 4:16 left in the second quarter.

Parker forced the Raiders to respect the pass early by connected with Ray Marten for a 54-yard touchdown on the game's open drive. It was just his second this season.

After a poor Hun punt, he hooked up with Torres Brown for a 24-yard score midway through the second quarter.

Later in the frame, three juke moves helped Parker race pass defenders to the outside for a 21-yard touchdown run to make it 21-0. It's the type of performance Poly coach Dino Mangiero is beginning to expect from his quarterback.

"The last two or three games he's been phenomenal," he said of Parker. "Chris has a great ability to a make people miss."

Parker did help Hun (0-2) get back into the game when he mishandled a punt that was recovered by the Raiders' Kyle Drayton at the Poly 47-yard line late in the second quarter. It was Poly's first turnover this season. Eight plays later Christopher Sharp scored from five yards out to help get the Raiders to 21-6 with 39 seconds left in the half.

"I just took my eyes off the ball," Parker said of the punt. "I misjudged it."

Hun kept its momentum going coming out of the break. It drove 87 yards to the Poly five-yard line only to be stopped on fourth and goal.

Notre Dame-bound lineman Jay Hayes stuffed Colton Jumper at the three-yard line on the fourth down.

"That's what our defense does," Hayes said of the goal-line stand. "We are good when it comes down to that."

The Blue Devils proceeded to put together a 13-play, 97-yard drive that Parker capped with a two-yard touchdown run to put the game away at 28-6 early in the fourth quarter.

Gregory Charles added a four-yard touchdown run late and an interception. Freshman Tegha Egbiri also had a pick.

It was all part of another dominant performance by the Blue Devils team, which has out-scored opponents 202-59 this season.

It halted a two-game losing streak to the Hun School and kept Poly perfect on the year.

"We are very explosive," Parker said. "We have a lot of athletes. I feel like we can beat everyone."

Fort Hamilton still undefeated

BY JOHN TOLIS

It's safe to say the Fort Hamilton football program has officially put last season behind it.

The Tigers squad has completely turned things around after only winning two games last year during an injury-plagued campaign. Fort Hamilton remained undefeated last Saturday, pushing its winning streak to four by topping visiting Sheepshead Bay 26-20 in Public School Athletic League city conference play.

Everything seems to be going right for the Tigers, and senior running back Isaiah Washington had a lot to do with the win against the Sharks as he ran for 87 yards and three touchdowns.

"Isaiah played great," Fort Hamilton coach Danny Perez said. "He's our team captain, he's a two-way starter for us, and a two-year player for us. He really broke the game open."

Washington put the Tigers on the scoreboard first. He broke away from the defense and ran into the end zone from 22 yards out to give the Tigers a 6-0 lead with 3:00 left in the first quarter. Fort Hamilton got the ball right back two minutes later thanks to an interception by junior Michael Brooks. Washington got loose again thanks to stellar blocking from the offensive line and ran for a 60-yard touchdown that made the score 12-0 late in the first quarter.

Fort Hamilton's offense continued its assault on the Sheepshead defense in the second quarter as Brooks ran for a touchdown from two yards out to help give the Tigers a 20-0 lead. Washington answered an Imani Vincent rushing touchdown by scoring from five yards out on the ground to help Fort Hamilton take comfortable 26-6 lead into halftime.

Things got a little shaky for the Tigers after that, as Sheepshead Bay tried for a fourth-quarter rally. In the first minute of the frame, Sharks' Continued on page 57

Grand Street get tied

Wolves' 3-0 lead slips away in Telecom match

BY JOHN TOLIS

A dominant first-half performance turned into a disappointing tie for Grand Street.

The Wolves saw a three-goal, first-half lead quickly slip into a 3-3 draw against visiting Telecom communications in a battle of unbeaten teams in Brooklyn AAA girls soccer last Thursday afternoon. Grand Street coach Andre Lamy felt his team let its guard down after racking up such a big lead.

"We got comfortable and relaxed in the second half," he said. "We beat ourselves by making errant mistakes."

The Wolves had total control of the game in the first half, as Jocelyn Aguilar twice put the ball in the back of the net. Jazmin Gonzalez scored the third goal to give her team a commanding 3-0 lead.

Grand Street's advantage started slimming down when its defense got

fense and scored her first of three goals. Not too long after that, a miscommunication on defense hurt the Wolves and they paid for it when Gonzalez scored the second goal to make it 3-2.

Late in the second half, Grand Street made a crucial mistake. Telecom was given a penalty kick because of a handball in the box by Grand Street. Gonzalez didn't miss the opportunity and put the ball in the back of the net to tie the score at 3-3.

Even though Grand Street didn't lose the game, the tie hurt the team's confidence, the coach said. The Wolves were playing with just 14 available players because of injuries and leading scorer Natalie Salazar, who was sick all week, was held out of the contest. Lamy feels things will get better when she returns.

"The only thing we need for the next match up is to have my full team healthy and Natalie Salazar present," Lamy said. "We should win the game."

Femiano shines at Poly Prep

Brenden Femiano is establishing himself as one of the city's top football players, and one of the biggest reasons for Poly Prep's perfect start.

The transfer from St. Anthony's provides the Blue Devils with the power running back they needed to complement shifty quarterback Chris Parker and senior speedster Gregory Charles.

Femiano excelled as the featured back with Charles injured during the Blue Devils' first three games. That includes the first four-touchdown game of the junior's career in a win over Xaverian on Sept. 7. One of those scores was an interception return for a touchdown. Two weeks ago against Niagara Academy, he broke an 80-yard touchdown run to highlight a two-score day.

Femiano has been exactly what Poly hoped for and maybe more.

"He's been a tremendous addition to this team," Blue Devils coach Dino Mangiero said. "He's been a Godsend."

Femiano, who moved to Marine Park, was looking for change after his sophomore season at the Long Island Catholic High School Football's league power. There he was the third running back, behind star back Jordan Gowins and Anthony Anderson, and just playing offense. He figured to be No. 2 this season with Anderson graduating and Gowins only a junior. He felt he needed a fresh start.

"Better opportunity, better team," Femiano said of Poly. "A family-oriented place that fit me the best. St. Anthony's is a great program. They treated me well. They were good to me. It just wasn't for me anymore."

St. Anthony's loss has been Poly Prep's gain.

The 5-foot-11, 200-pound Femiano is a power runner and a big change up from Charles and Parker, who are much speedier and shifter. Together, they give the Blue Devils a hard-to-defend offense that can run over, around and through opposition, and defenses don't know which one of the trio is getting the ball.

Poly is 5-0, and outscoring opponents 202-59 this season.

"Brenden is that hard tough guy that is running up the middle, getting us extra yards" said Notre Dame-bound lineman Jay Hayes.

Femiano, who is also a linebacker, believes he has gotten all that he could ask for so far since transferring to Poly. He has transitioned well to playing both ways, and is just fine with not having a title to chase like they did at St. Anthony's, because the Blue Devils play an independent schedule.

Femiano said he doesn't have a college actively recruiting him yet, but feels that he's exactly where he needs to be to start getting the area's fans' and college coaches' attention.

"Truly, things have been amazing," Femiano said of the season so far. "I came on the campus first day, they took me in as one of their own. It felt like I was right at home."

Fontbonne's rally falls short

Archbishop Molloy tops the Bonnies in five-set thriller

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

A dramatic comeback attempt wasn't enough to please Fontbonne Hall volleyball coach Linda Strong.

The Bonnies lost the first two sets to visiting Archbishop Molloy, even after leading big in the second frame. They rallied to tie things up, but couldn't finish the job and eventual fell, 15-25, 24-26, 25-21, 25-22, 15-25 in Catholic High School Athletic Association Brooklyn-Queens volleyball on Monday night. Strong felt it shouldn't have even come to that in Fontbonne's second five-set loss to Molloy this season.

"I thought they played horrible," she said. "They didn't want to hit the ball. The other team hit everything that went up in the air. They were waiting for the perfect set all the time."

When the Bonnies (4-

3) did feed their hitters in the third and fourth sets, they thrived. Senior Kristen Sullivan and sophomores Francesca Castellano and Emily Greenstein consistently finished their chances. They were strong, though they should have been even more aggressive in attacking the Stanners defense and not just settling for getting the ball over the net, and Castellano agreed.

"We could have been a lot better than we played," Castellano said.

Still, she and her teammates never gave up — even after Molloy (5-1) rallied from 18-13 down to win the second set. Fontbonne adjusted and handled the Stanners' serves better going forward, especially libero Caroline Kane. The junior made numerous diving digs to keep points alive.

"During the end of the second set we were like, 'we have to get our heads in the game,'" Greenstein said.

The Bonnie's fended off Molloy rallies in the third and fourth sets. Greenstein and Castellano each put down kills to secure the win in the third. A Molloy hitting error and a Sullivan kill, plus Sullivan and Deirdre McCool combining to put a ball down right at the net, closed out the fourth and forced a deciding fifth.

Fontbonne was down just 14-13 before Molloy took control of the final frame. The Stanners' Ally Kalesin, who had struggled to finish most of the match, recorded three straight kills during a 7-0 service run from Emily Rabot. By the time the Bonnie's got back on the board, they trailed 22-13 and couldn't manage another rally.

Fontbonne still believes with some fine-tuning it can get over the hump against Molloy next time the rivals meet.

"It's not impossible to beat them," Greenstein said. "I feel like we are at the same level as them. We beat ourselves there a little bit."

Tigers

junior running back Jim Campbell powered through the defense for a three-yard touchdown to cut the Tiger's lead to 26-12. Fort Hamilton was able to run down the clock, but with just 30 seconds left in the game, Vincent found Campbell in the end zone for an 11-yard touchdown pass and the two-point conversion to make it 26-20. The Sharks couldn't complete the comeback after it failed to recover the onside kick.

Tigers sophomore quarterback Sharif Legree had a remarkable game, looking poised, calm, and collected in the pocket. He found his receivers and scrambled around when he was in trouble. Legree is following in the footsteps of his older brother Jeff, a former star quarterback at Fort Hamilton. He and his pedigree have been a big reason for the turnaround.

"They taught him very well," Washington said. "He's been stepping up each week and every day in practice."

Perez is quite happy with his team's performance this season and believes that last year was a good learning experience for them. It served as motivation.

"The guys had a real great off season thinking about last season, and didn't want to repeat last season," Perez said.

So far they've done the exact opposite.

BY JOEDY MCCREARY
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mason Plumlee felt right at home during his first practice with the Brooklyn Nets.

The workout took place on Tuesday on the same practice court at Duke where the former Blue Devil developed into a first-round NBA draft pick.

"It's been a lot of learning," Plumlee said. "The game is a lot different but we have the people that you want to learn from, and that's really how I've taken it."

Brooklyn had a busy off-season, acquiring Paul Pierce, Kevin Garnett, and Jason Terry from Boston and signing free-agents Shaun Livingston, Alan Anderson, and Andrei Kirilenko.

And 40-year-old Jason Kidd took over as coach, hired by the Nets less than two weeks after he ended a 19-year career as a point guard that included an NBA title and Olympic gold medals in 2000 and 2008.

Kidd — and his team — was happy to be back on the court, claiming his players will be tough to score against.

"Guys were a little bit excited and the ball was turned over a little bit, but today we didn't really work on offense," Kidd said after running his first practice as a coach. "We worked on defense, which is going to be the identity of this team. Their minds were in it and their bodies, which is good."

The Nets fired Avery Johnson during last season, then rallied to make the playoffs under interim coach P.J. "Peep" Carlesimo, and took the Chicago Bulls to Game 7 in the first round before being eliminated.

Returning players say with Kidd at the helm, practice has changed.

"I don't want to say night and day from last year, but it's a different feeling," point guard Deron Williams said. "A lot of teaching today, a lot of drilling, things we needed to do — starting with defense and working our way from there."

Pierce said he hadn't been this "anxious" since the Celtics brought in Ray Allen and Garnett before the 2007-08 season.

"We worked out together this summer, and being in the gym the last couple of weeks, but to actually get out here and start the journey, start the preparation for the season, definitely it was a lot of excitement," Pierce said. "It was fun just to get the feet wet on the first day."

The Nets dealt with a few injuries on Day 1: Williams (ankle) and Terry (knee) were limited, with Williams saying his work consisted mostly of some drills, shooting, riding the stationary bike and lifting weights.

The team began working toward a championship of its own on a court beneath four banners that commemorate Duke's NCAA tournament titles.

There are plenty of other connections between the Nets and Blue Devils beyond Plumlee.

Duke and U.S. national team coach Mike Krzyzewski watched the workout from a bench along with assistants Nate James and Jon Scheyer — a teammate of Plumlee's on the Blue Devils' most recent national title team in 2010.

Krzyzewski, who Kidd said spoke to the team before practice, also coached Williams and Kidd to gold medals during the 2008 and 2012 Olympics.

DeBlasio Warns Consumers About Classified Ads

Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble. Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."
