

BOARDS WALK TO ITALY

Boardwalk remade in Milan

BY MAX JAEGER

Planks a lot!

Wood from the Riegelmann Boardwalk that was supposedly damaged during Superstorm Sandy is being reused in Italy — as a boardwalk.

In a classic case of one city's trash being another's tesaro, architects who designed the U.S.A. Pavilion at Milan's Expo 2015 used lumber from Brooklyn's Boardwalk to build an indoor boardwalk at the Italian World's Fair. The city has for years been trying to convince residents that concrete and synthetic boards are better suited for beachfront walkways — and has routinely replaced portions of the wooden Boardwalk, which stretches from Coney Island to the edge of Manhattan Beach, with non-wood options — upsetting old-school Boardwalk advocates who say it is the wood that makes it good.

And to them, the ironic move to repurpose Boardwalk wood to make a boardwalk could be the last straw.

“What a travesty — shipping our Boardwalk's wood off to another country to be re-purposed and enjoyed there, while we have plastic and concrete shoved down our throats,” wrote Coney-Brignton Boardwalk Alliance president Rob Burstein in a letter to us when he heard of the Italian job.

Biber Architects designed the Milan boardwalk and purchased the timber from salvagers Sawkill Lumber, who harvested the historic planks for the city after Sandy “wrecked” the wooden walkway in 2012, a Biber spokeswoman said.

But reports dating back to the Storm of the Century indicate that wooden portions of the Boardwalk actually fared better than its concrete counterpart, prompting local politicians to demand the city end its plans to go synthetic.

But, the Parks Department, which is responsible for the Boardwalk's maintenance, is insistent on replacing all but four blocks of the walkway with concrete, claiming

Diversity in dance in B'Beach

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

The contagious rhythms of Michael Jackson will meet the delicate grace of the Russian ballet to tell a story of diversity and friendship at a special program in this year's “The World of Dance” festival hosted by the Brighton Ballet Theater.

The theater itself is a testament to cultural diversity and the immigrant story that characterizes Brooklyn — founded 28 years ago by a dancer from Lvov, Ukraine, who has since opened her studio doors to a wide breadth of cultures and dance traditions.

“When I came to the U.S., I had a dream to have a school and to teach dance in this country, so this is my dream come true,” said Irina Roizin. “I also had a dream to have an international school, not just for the Russian community, but the community of Brooklyn.”

Roizin's dream comes to life with the premiere of “Black and White,” a contemporary dance production that infuses Russian ballet with a mixture of hip-hop, jazz and African and Indian folk tradition. The iconic Michael Jackson song of the same name is the inspiration of the production, and the choreographer said his work reflects the king of pop's message of inclusion.

“It doesn't matter what color you are or where you come from — everyone can relate to dance,” said James Huggins. “Every culture has their own style of dance, so we're bringing that all together with this Michael Jackson song that typically

Forest City Ratner

SPORTING GOODS

Ratner pal's art-smarts a slam dunk for Barclays, Downtown

BY SHAVANA ABRUZZO

Workers at Forest City are fond of saying, "We stand on the shoulders of giants," to hail the working men and women who built the national company into a multi-billion-dollar urban real estate enterprise with dozens of properties across the Big Apple and metropolitan area, including Barclays Center — one of the most high-tech sports arenas on earth. Now, modern-day Goliaths are breaking new ground.

David Berliner — chief operating officer at Forest City Ratner Companies, the firm's New York subsidiary based Downtown — is the corporate marvel behind every strategic decision about acquisitions, pipeline projects, and existing properties. But he is also an avid art enthusiast who has helped to bring public art to several of the company's holdings in an effort to champion local talent. Thanks to Berliner, the home of the Brooklyn Nets features commissioned exhibits, digital collaborations, sculptures, and murals as big as blue whales that are almost as spectacular as its five-star sports and entertainment.

"Public art animates a public space and makes people see their world in a different way," he said. "We have so much great art occurring in our backyard that for us to showcase it is a gift to Brooklyn."

Arts organization Bric Arts Media singled out Berliner, who is also a board treasurer at the Brooklyn Museum of Art, for top honors at the June 3 launch of its Celebrate Brooklyn! Performing Arts Festival, where the affable power broker, whose words tumble out like a waterfall, shared the night with a performance by iconic funk goddess Chaka Khan.

Berliner helped to secure free gallery space for Bric at One Pierrepont Plaza — another of the company's Brooklyn developments — more than 20 years ago, and the president of the organization is still singing his praises.

"David is a pioneer who has invested in the resurgence of art and culture in New York City," said Leslie G. Schultz. "His commitment to the arts is unparalleled."

Permanent installations

Passers-by at Barclays Center can enjoy eye-popping works by borough-based artists without setting foot inside the venue.

German-born artist Ursula VonRydingsvard's massive meteor-like sculpture "Ona" graces the plaza in gritty tribute to Brooklyn's bold personality. Jose Parla's "Diary of Brooklyn," a giant composition of squiggles, scrawls, and inscriptions on a fading blue backdrop connoting time and experience greets visitors to the arena. And a pair of haunting video pieces by OpenEndedGroup — featuring a bodiless dancer depicted as a moving hand-drawn sketch and a celebration of Brooklyn stoops and playgrounds — are projected onto the marquee and on five interior screens, offering viewers a surreal look at the brough, Berliner says. "It's as if you're flying through the neighborhood in your dreams," he said of the dazzling digitals.

Other permanent installations include a first-floor exhibit of historic, six-foot-tall photographs of early-20th century African-American basketball players the Black Fives, including Brooklyn hoopsters from the Smart Set Athletic Club, nicknamed

Whale washes up on Brighton Beach

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

An adult female Minke whale was found dead on Brighton Beach near Ocean Parkway on Monday.

A strike from a ship's propeller likely killed the animal, which had severe injuries to its head, according to biologists from the Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation who performed a necropsy on the body.

In addition to the head wounds, biologists found internal bruising, propeller slices and mechanical laceration. They believe the death occurred within the last two days. The whale's dissected carcass was transported to a Parks Department facility where it will be disposed of safely, while samples of the remains were transported to the Riverhead facility for further testing.

This isn't the first cetacean to meet its end in Brooklyn. A 30-foot Sei whale beached itself near the Brooklyn Army Terminal in May last year, and in 2007 a 12-foot Minke whale — dubbed "Sludgie" — swam up the Gowanus Canal and died before rescuers could move it back out to sea.

Minke whales are abundant off the coast of Brooklyn, said a Riverhead representative, and ship strikes are a leading cause of death for whales in these waters.

"It is a common cause of death for whales because there are boats coming in and out," said Rachel Bosworth. "If it's a large vessel, they might not even be aware they hit it."

As of now, authorities know nothing about the boat that killed the whale.

Sunset Park Puerto Rican Day Parade gets permit for first time in decades

BY MAX JAEGER

Viva los Boricuas!

For the first time in 20 years, Sunset Parkers will have the city's blessing when they take to Fifth Avenue on Puerto Rican Day on June 14.

The avenue has long been the de facto gathering place for neighborhood revellers returning from the annual parade held in Manhattan, but the lack of a parade permit and a history of tensions between residents and police made the unsanctioned marches a powder keg that routinely burst into brawls between locals and law enforcement, according to this year's organizers. By formalizing the fete with a parade permit, organizers hope to keep tensions well below the boiling point, an official said.

"I believe that there has to be some sort of change," said Dennis Flores, parade organizer and head of police watchdog group El Grito de Sunset Park. "We have to create something new to prevent the same thing from happening every year."

Residents have flooded Fifth Avenue following the Manhattan parade for decades, Flores said. It became so routine that he said police would close the avenue to traffic. The street closures prompted more people to leave the sidewalk — though they technically weren't allowed to, Flores said. Police would then tell people to get out of the street and conflicts would erupt.

The dynamic created more harm than good, according to this year's parade marshal.

"People mingling with traffic is serious and dangerous, but what ended up happening is that police closing the street became a source of fights breaking out," said Javier Nieves, who organized city-sanctioned Puerto Rican Day Parades in the 1980s and also served as an assemblyman in the 1990s.

Blood hit the pavement during last year's parade, when police battered and arrested a 17-year-old kid they accused of attacking cops. Police later dropped the charges, admitting in a letter to the boy's attorney that the officer who claimed in a criminal complaint to have witnessed the attack was actually nowhere nearby when the alleged attack occurred.

The official parade and festival starts at 5 pm, but a long-time festival organizer suggested folks are likely to hit the streets early.

"I'm glad that the parade going to come back to Sunset Park, and I pray that both the people and the police will work together, because it's going to be a full-day celebration," said Pat Ruiz, who organized the now-defunct Boricua Festival in Prospect Park and later the Sunset Park waterfront.

Sunset Park Puerto Rican Day Parade on Fifth Avenue from 59th Street to 43rd Street at 5 pm. Festival in Sunset Park (43rd Street and Fifth Avenue) at 7:30 pm. Flores is asking for financial support for the parade via a crowd-funding website at www.gofundme.com/SPPRParade2015.

Experts answer questions about Alzheimer's from patients and caregivers

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

Alzheimer's patients and caregivers got expert information on the disease as well as resources and long-term care options at an elderly care center in Brownsville on June 4.

CenterLight Healthcare's Program for All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly hosted a speaker from the Alzheimer's Resource Center who took the opportunity to bring the center's expertise to families and caregivers in need of assistance.

"It was exciting for us to be out there," said the center's chief executive Mary Ann Malack-Ragona. "I jumped at the opportunity, knowing I could reach families who are not getting the kind of information they need."

Malack-Ragona spoke about the lesser-known psychiatric and behavioral symptoms of Alzheimer's that may help someone recognize signs of the disease in a loved one, as well as dispelling misconceptions that could lead to a misdiagnosis.

Caregivers were able to seek guidance on treatment options and ask questions about managing the disease.

"That's where the real work comes in," said Malack-Ragona. "We're interacting with families and what they're dealing with and how we address that."

June is Alzheimer's Awareness month, and CenterLight will provide more lectures in partnership with the resource center at locations throughout the borough. Each event will feature a guest speaker and opportunities to receive expert guidance over refreshments.

CenterLight's elderly care center offers medical and diagnostic services as well as recreational activities and transportation options for patients.

"It's a one-stop service area," said direct sales manager Leslie Willhoft.

POT LUCK!

Weed dispensary eyes Fulton Mall

BY NOAH HUROWITZ

Weed all about it!

Brooklyn could be home to one of New York's first pot dispensaries, after one of the companies vying for a license to grow and distribute medical marijuana in the state signed a lease on a Downtown building last week, and Borough President Adams says the company couldn't have picked a better location.

"Brooklyn would be a great anchor in the city," he said.

Long Island medical marijuana company Palliatech, which operates legal dispensaries across the country, says it inked a deal on June 4 for a second-floor space at 425 Fulton St., between Pearl and Jay streets — just two blocks from Borough Hall. The company hopes to build a sleek, state-of-the-art distribution facility with nary a tie-dyed shirt or Grateful Dead album in sight, said a spokesman.

"It will be very secure, but also clean, modern, and open," said executive vice-president Andrei Bogolubov. "Think Apple-Store-meets-pharmacy."

But an organic pharmacy on Fulton Mall is still far from a sure thing. Albany is issuing only five licenses to grow and distribute medical marijuana in the state, and Palliatech is just one of dozens of hopefuls that have applied for one of the coveted pot permits.

And if the company does nab a license, New York's medical marijuana law — considered one of the most restrictive in the country — will only allow Palliatech to create and dispense products derived from cannabis extracts, such as oils and capsules, rather than giving patients sticky buds to smoke or edible products like weed brownies. Only people with a medical marijuana card will be allowed inside the premises.

Adams said any dispensary in Brooklyn would not be a "neighborhood pot shop."

"This is medical treatment for those in need," he said.

The Beep, an ex-cop, has been a proponent of medical Mary Jane since his days as a state senator, a position he said he came to after watching a cancer-stricken friend successfully use pot to combat nausea caused by chemotherapy. Without a legal option, the man's younger brother had to go to a neighborhood drug dealer to buy the ganja, Adams said. The risks of that illicit transaction made him think — really think, man — about how lawmakers could help patients like his friend get the medicine they need, he said.

"Imagine having to break the law in order to alleviate your pain or a loved one's pain," he said. "His younger brother put himself in harm's way, and he could have been arrested or the victim of a crime. We should not put that barrier in the way of people trying to overcome illness."

The state okayed the medical marijuana program in July last year, and accepted applications from businesses looking to grow and distribute the dope from late April through last Friday. Hopefuls had to cough up a $10,000 application fee, plus another $200,000 that will be refunded to the rejects, and will have to meet strict manufacturing, quality, and operating guidelines. Each licensee will be allowed to open up to four dispensaries, though they must be dispersed around the state.

Bogolubov said his company, which has been slinging hash since 2009, is prepared to jump through all the necessary hoops.

"We're old-timers by industry standards," he said.

The state will announce the five successful applicants some time this summer, and the companies will be able to start manufacturing and distributing in January 2016.

Dancers dazzle the Boardwalk

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

Brighton Beach experienced a wave of culture on Saturday as traditional Georgian and Ukrainian folk dancers took to the Boardwalk.

Crowds gathered to witness the strength and grace of professional dancers clad in colorful costumes who reveled in the opportunity to share their culture with an enraptured audience at a June 6 event sponsored by the Brooklyn Arts Council.

"For the performers, it was a pleasure because you feel a direct response from the audience," said Victor Sirelson, artistic director of the Dancing Crane Company, which specializes in Georgian folk dance. "It's very different from performing in a theater."

Dancers felt welcomed by a warm and receptive audience who enjoyed learning from the pros in a dance workshop after the main performances.

"We had some crowd participation," said Molly Gamble, a Ukrainian folk dancer who has been with the Karpaty Folk Song and Dance Ensemble for three years. "A lot of young kids tried their best at some Ukrainian folk steps and they did a great job."

Sirelson was thrilled by the reception of audience members from a variety of backgrounds and cultures.

"This is significant for the Georgian community," he said. "It's significant to have an expression of their arts in the public area."

Ridge civic parties down

BY MAX JAEGER

More than 160 Ridge movers and shakers supped and stepped the night away at the Bay Ridge Community Council's first annual dinner dance at Dyker Heights catering hall Sirico's on June 4.

The group had caroused at El Caribe in Mill Basin for the last 63 years, but nobody was complaining about the bash in Bay Ridge's backyard, an organizer said.

"Everybody likes it because it's close to home," said Irene Hanvey. "Nobody has to get on the Belt [Parkway] after happy hour."

The council honored two outstanding women for their contributions to the Ridge — Nordic cultural maven Arlene Rutuelo and Greek-American community powerhouse Zoe Koutsoupakis.

"These are two women who have given everything to make Bay Ridge a better place," said freshly sworn-in council president Vincent Bocchino.

The recognition was a capstone, said Koutsoupakis, a Greek-American banker who moved to the U.S. at 14 and has since guided — and raised piles of cash cash for — neighborhood Greek organizations.

"It's the reward of 38 years of community service," she said. "This award belongs to all of you, because you made me what I am."

68TH PRECINCT

BAY RIDGE-DYKER HEIGHTS

Hoax-ial cable

A phony utility worker stole cash and jewelry from an elderly Fort Hamilton Parkway woman on June 2.

The thief showed up at the woman's house between 88th and 89th streets in Bay Ridge at 11:30 am, police said. He told the 81-year-old victim he worked for the cable company and coaxed her into letting him in so he could check the coaxial cable, a police report states.

While inside, the guy grabbed $25 cash and two bracelets worth a combined $529, officials said.

Finders keepers

An opportunistic thief took a guy's wallet after it fell off the man's car on the corner of Poly Place and 13th Avenue in Dyker Heights on May 31.

The absent-minded victim left his phone and wallet atop his car and drove away at 1:30 pm, police said. He realized his error and went back to collect his stuff, but he could only find his phone, a police report states.

Rim ripoff

A flashy fiend took two tires and rims from a parked car on 81st Street sometime between May 31 and June 1.

The victim parked his ride between 11th and 12th avenues in Dyker Heights at 9:55 am, but when he returned the next day at 1 pm, the tires and two chrome rims were gone, police said. The wheels were worth $1,400, a police report states.

Lousy homecoming

A sneak stole $10,000 and jewelry from a 64th Street home while the residents were out of town between May 26 and June 4.

The crook took the goods from a bedroom cabinet in the home between 10th and 11th avenues in Dyker Heights, police said. The victim's mother may have left the front door open, a police report states.

Dyker heist

A crook hit the jackpot when he lifted $18,600 from an Eighth Avenue apartment between May 26 and June 3.

The resident was out of town for the span, and when he returned to his house between 67th and 68th streets in Dyker Heights, he found that someone had broken into his apartment and taken the cash and an iPhone 6 from his bedroom dresser, police said.

Lobby lunge

A good-for-nothing lout choked a woman in the lobby of her Batchelder Street apartment building on June 1 — before scampering away with her purse.

The victim told police said she noticed the ruffian following her as she entered the lobby of the building near Avenue V at 9:12 am. The brute grabbed her in a chokehold from behind while she waited for the elevator, then pushed her to the elevator floor and yanked the purse from her hands, cops stated. Authorities say the perp fled on foot.

Hack with a hacksaw

Cops cuffed a man who they said attempted to hack his way into an E. 16th Street home using a hacksaw and a baseball bat on June 4.

Police say the suspect was seen attempting to saw open the lock of the front door of the home near Avenue X with a hacksaw at 7:20 pm, before resorting to bashing it with a baseball bat.

When the cops arrived, the red-handed perp was caught holding the hacksaw with the bat nearby and was arrested, officials stated.

Pen is mightier

A man was arrested for robbing a bank at Avenue U on June 3 by claiming in a written note to a teller to have a gun, police said.

Authorities say the pen-wielding baddie tried to open a savings account at the bank near W. Eighth Street at 3:20 pm, only to be told that his New Jersey ID was no good and that he would need a New York one to open an account.

The wordsmith returned five minutes later with a folded letter for the teller, which stated, "Don't repeat anything, I have a gun, I will shoot, give me all the money," according to the police report.

The teller handed over $910, but cops were notified and an arrest was made.

Shanked

A knuckle-dragger knifed a guy over a phone on Highlawn Avenue on June 6.

The victim told cops he was near W. Eighth Street in Gravesend at 4:25 am when the punk pulled a blade on the guy and demanded his wallet and phone, police said. The victim said he refused, and the goon attacked him, cutting his right arm, a police report states.

The fiend fled, and emergency responders took the victim to Coney Island Hospital, officials said.

Surprise guest

A good-for-nothing crook ransacked a man's 84th Street home on June 3 — and left him with a black eye.

The guy got to his apartment between 19th and 20th avenues in Bensonhurst at 7:45 am, but when he opened the door, a bandit ran out, punched the victim in the face, and fled, police said.

The invader wrecked the home and put toothpicks in the locks, but he didn't appear to have taken anything, a police report states.

Phony alibi

A crook conned a guy out of his cellphone on W. Eighth Street on June 2 — and then beat up the mark when he got wise to the ruse.

The victim was waiting on an N train at the Bay Parkway station at 7:15 am when the con artist asked to borrow his phone to make a call, police said.

The guy said he had no service, so the thief talked him into letting him take the phone to a nearby doughnut shop with wifi.

When they got there, the huckster said there was better wifi at a place around the corner on W. Eighth Street, police said. The pair got halfway down the block when the con man came clean and told the mark to empty his pockets, cops said.

The victim tried to run, but the shyster shoved him to the ground and took his wallet before fleeing the scene, a police report states.

Take a seat

The owner parked his 2000 gray Plymouth Voyager between 20th and 21st avenues in Bath Beach at 6 pm, police said.

When he came back, he found the back seat on the sidewalk, but his newly minted coupe was gone, a police report states. — Max Jaeger

Happy Brooklyn Day!

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

Brooklynites gathered in Canarsie Park last Thursday to celebrate their borough with sports and games.

Borough President Adams welcomed revelers to the 115th anniversary of Brooklyn Day on June 4, where he jumped right in and joined the outdoorsy fun.

chairs and took advantage of free sports and fitness clinics, trying their hand at a variety of activities, such as skateboarding lessons and obstacle courses.

Athletes who ran and jumped over a colorful obstacle course provided by NY Run for Life had a great time.

"She loved the colors," said Teshawna Foulks, whose 4-year-old daughter Rylenzia won a ribbon for participating. "They excited her. She's very athletic anyway, so it was right in her field."

Foulks had so much fun that she hopes to rally more attendees for the next Brooklyn Day celebration.

"I loved it," she said. "I'm looking forward to the next event. I'm going to tell more people about it."

'Relay for Life' a runaway success

Cancer fund-raiser, with events across the borough, brings in $115,000

BY ALLEGRA HOBBS

The cancer warriors in Southern Brooklyn have done it again!

Fighters flocked to the fourth-annual Relay for Life in Bergen Beach on June 6 to walk, play and celebrate survivors, all in the name of beating cancer. And their tireless work paid off. The event's organizer says donations were through the roof, totalling around $115,000 — and still climbing.

"It was a very successful day," said Joe Gillette. "The numbers show that it went beyond our expectations. It's a mind-boggling and wonderful feeling at the same time."

The event, hosted by the Southern Brooklyn branch of the American Cancer Society, encouraged fighters of the illness to keep spirits high as they walked alongside survivors who are now cancer-free.

"It was really inspiring," said Samantha Joseph, who battles colon cancer and cites the opening speech from survivor Anthony Cusumano as a highlight. "It gives you the hope to go on and hope that you can one day be cancer-free like they are."

Fun activities filled the field to draw in a flood of generous donations — a pie-in-the-face booth earned more than $1,000 for the cause — while the luminaria ceremony provided moments of reflection and remembrance for those whom the disease had taken.

"It is a disease we really would like to find a cure for," said cancer-fighter Elfreda Chaplin. "This is a chance to get together and talk about it and keep hope alive."

'Tis the season for free summer concerts.

Singer-songwriter Tony Travis performed a free concert at the Shore Road Park gazebo on June 7, thanks to Shore Road Park Conservancy and Sing For Hope, a group that installs custom-painted pianos in parks across the city. Anyone is free to play the instruments, but the conservancy has organized a series of free concerts to let people know the piano is there.

"It's a pleasure to get out and play for the people and announce to them that [the piano] is there for them," said Travis. "It's a mix of who's terrific and who's just having fun," he said.

Alex Rud, who was on a date with his girlfriend, stopped to watch Travis that night. "It had a nice community environment, which was exciting," he said. "It was a great place, near the ocean, and the weather was nice."

The concert was completely free, and is just one of six shows sponsored by the Shore Road Park Conservancy.

How to maintain a healthy, headache-free summer

BY ALEXANDRA NEUMAN

In the summertime heat, fatigue and chronic headaches are common symptoms of distress. While these manifestations can be an assumed result of increased sun exposure and dehydration, they are often due to treatable underlying causes such as seasonal allergies or vitamin deficiencies. At her private practice in Kensington, internist Dr. Zhanna Tsukerman conducts comprehensive diagnostics to determine both the precise causes and appropriate treatments for her patients' symptoms.

"In my office, we do laboratory tests to identify what vitamin deficiency a patient has. After that we can start treatment either via oral supplements or through multivitamin intravenous treatment."

Dr. Tsukerman explains that IV treatment has shown better results throughout her patients because of the complete and direct absorption into the blood stream.

"Vitamin B and vitamin D deficiency is very common right now," Dr. Tsukerman explains, and a cycle of intravenous treatment allows for their efficient and sustained replacement.

Some patients' seasonal headaches are alternatively due to pollen and plant allergies, a reaction that starts in the spring and can continue into the summer. In these cases, Dr. Tsukerman conducts a skin test, after which she creates a customized serum to encourage the development of the antibodies. Patients need to fight these allergic reactions. The shots are administered weekly until the antibodies are developed, an approach with a success rate of 80% amongst her patients.

Dr. Tsukerman is also one of the few practitioners in her area that is trained to administer Botox injections for the treatment of chronic migraines and hyperacusis, which she often uses when more traditional treatments have been unsuccessful.

One of the guiding principles of Dr. Tsukerman's approach is that of holistic treatment. After identifying a patient's immediate symptoms, she strives to detect the underlying causes in order to provide lasting and comprehensive relief. The other healthcare professionals in her facility mirror this approach, including the on-site podiatrist and physiotherapist, both of whom are equally attentive to the individual needs and symptoms of their patients.

Although some of the treatments listed above require multiple visits, Dr. Tsukerman emphasizes her concern for her patients' time and overall experience. Her commitment to convenience is demonstrated by the amount of languages spoken amongst her staff, including Russian, Spanish, Ukrainian, Georgian, Uzbek, all in an effort to accommodate the diversity of the neighborhood that surrounds her practice.

Heroes of reading

BY NOAH HUROWITZ

Holy literacy promotion, Batman!

The Brooklyn Public Library kicked off its annual summer reading program on June 4 with an superhero-themed celebration at its central branch, where legions of daring youngsters played action-packed games, made masks, danced to live music, and, of course, super-powered their brains through reading.

The Library's reading program encourages kids to keep their noses firmly planted in books while school is out through rewards, contests, and in-library events. The scheme aims to fight the so-called "summer slide," in which young people who don't consume books over the summer break lose their super reading powers — much like 1960s-era Thor when he let go of his hammer for more than a minute, or Captain Marvel Junior when he said his own name.

Last year, around 138,000 kids enrolled in the summer reading program, and the library system's mighty leader said she hopes even more young Brooklynites make local libraries their not-so-secret headquarters this summer.

"With school out of session, we encourage Brooklyn students and families to visit their local libraries and enjoy the many pleasures and benefits of summertime reading," said Library president and chief executive officer Linda E. Johnson.

Credit Unions Boost Lending

"Credit Unions are continuing to make the loans needed to grow local economies," Federal Regulator NCUA Board Chairman Debbie Matz said. "As a result, credit unions members are buying houses and cars, and they're paying for college to give young people a better start in life." Credit unions are also making more loans for auto lending which was a major factor in the overall loan growth during the first quarter of 2015. Credit Union membership, assets, deposits and net worth all continued to rise. NCUA released the new figures based on data compiled by the U.S. government agency for the quarter ending March 31, 2015.

Loan Balances Rise Nearly 11 Percent from First Quarter 2014

Total loans at federally insured credit unions reached $721.9 billion in the first quarter of 2015, an increase of 10.6 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

Over the year ending in the first quarter of 2015, loans grew in every major category, including:

- Personal loans at federal credit unions are up 29.9 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- New auto loans grew 21.5 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- Used auto loans are up 13.2 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- Total first mortgage loans are up 8.9 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- Home Equity loans were up 2.5 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- Member business loans grew 11.6 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

- Non-federally guaranteed student loans are up 15.2 percent from the first quarter of 2014.

Delinquencies, Charge-Offs at Lowest Levels Since 2007

Delinquency and charge-offs for federally insured credit unions declined to their lowest levels in eight years.

The percentage of loan charge-offs due to bankruptcy at the end of the first quarter of 2015 was significantly below the end of the first quarter of 2014.

Credit Union Membership Nears 100 Million as Consolidation Trend Continues

Membership in federally insured credit unions grew to 99,969,794 at the end of the first quarter of 2015, an increase of more than 2.8 million from the end of the first quarter of 2014. The number of federal insured credit unions fell to 6,206 at the end of the first quarter, 285 fewer than at the end of the first quarter of 2014, a decline of 4.4 percent. The decline is consistent with longstanding trends in the financial services industry.

Credit Unions Post 21 Consecutive Quarters of Positive Net Income

Year-to-date net income for federally insured credit unions in the first quarter of 2015 increased 5.7 percent from the first quarter of 2014. As a whole, federally insured credit unions have recorded positive net income for 21 straight quarters.

Credit Unions Remain

Well-Capitalized

The vast majority of federally insured credit unions remain well-capitalized, with 97.5 percent reporting a net worth ratio at or above the statutorily required 7.0 percent.

Assets and Shares Grow for the Quarter

Total assets in federally insured credit unions grew to $1.16 trillion at the end of the first quarter of 2015, an increase of $60.6 billion, or 5.5 percent, from the end of the first quarter of 2014. Overall, share and deposit accounts at federally insured credit unions rose $41.3 billion from the end of the first quarter of 2014 to $984.4 billion. For more information about the performance of federally insured credit unions, NCUA provides the complete details of the March 2015 Call Report online. A summary of first-quarter performance is available, as well as financial trends data for all federally insured credit unions.

NCUA is the federal agency created by the U.S. Congress to regulate, charter and supervise federal credit unions. NCUA operates and manages the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, insuring the deposits of nearly 100 million account holders in all federal credit union and the overwhelming majority of the state chartered credit unions. Savings are insured to at least $250,000 per account with the backing of the full faith and credit of the United States.

"We are proud to be Brooklyn's first federal credit union, chartered in 1934, operating successfully for over 80 years, and still growing" said Bay Ridge Federal Credit Union Executive Vice President, Anthony Grigos. This local credit union offers Home Mortgages, Home Equity Lines of Credit, Commercial Real Estate Mortgages, and a full range of Personal Loans.

Bay Ridge Federal Credit Union is located at 1750 86th Street, Brooklyn, NY 11214, and 1609 Avenue Z, Brooklyn, NY 11235. For more information about them, visit their website at www.brfcu.org.

the move will better support emergency vehicles, increase Boardwalk resiliency, and prevent deforestation — claims wood proponents say is hog-wash.

“There are a variety of alternative woods, including sustainably grown and sourced Forestry Stewardship Council-certified rainforest wood, the use of which is both ecologically sound and beneficial to the local communities producing it,” Burstein wrote, also pointing out that “no emergency vehicles ever come on to the Boardwalk.”

These days, the only thing not made out of Boardwalk wood is the Boardwalk itself.

Lumber reclaimed from the storied walkway wound up in Manhattan pizzeria Rossopomodoro and in benches on the newly opened section of the Manhattan’s High Line, according to Sawkill’s website. A Williamsburg workshop fabricates knife handles from Boardwalk wood. And you can literally eat off the Boardwalk — or a table made thereof.

The special performance will take place on June 18, followed by the theater’s regular programming, which will also incorporate a variety of dance styles. Classical performances will include music from Chopin, Minkus, Tchaikovsky and Saint-Saens.

“This year we tried to focus on friendship, diversity, and citizens of the world,” said Roizin. “We decided the whole performance is going to be specially focused on friendship and diversity.”

City officials have recognized the theater as a local bastion of culture and arts education, with awards and grants that have gone on to fund programs such as “Black and White,” as well as an after-school dance program for public school children.

“Brighton Ballet Theater is a shining gem in Brooklyn’s brilliant and diverse cultural landscape,” said Borough President Adams. “It is a great open window into the rich culture of our Russian-American community, one that uses dance as a tool to educate, enrich, and empower our students.”

The theater will also use the funds to publish a book filled with stories and paintings from ballet students about their unique immigrant experiences.

The book, called “Coming to America,” will be presented at the performance on June 18, and copies will be given to the theater students. For Roizin, its publication is the fulfillment of yet another immigrant dream.

“I always had a dream about doing a book, and this year my dream came true,” she said. “Again, we’re talking about coming to America and dreams coming true. We’re telling our stories about our students and our diversity.”

The Pointing Finger 50 Million Climate Scientists Can't Be Wrong

by Dr. Stephen Finger

Try casually mentioning that you think 'climate change' or 'global warming', as it was called before Al Gore was making The Speech one day and it started snowing on his head, is no big deal and you will be informed that 97% of climate scientists think it's a very big deal, is dangerous, and is going to destroy the planet if we don't do something about it right away and that you are a fool and should just go away and stick your head in the troposphere.

Whew! Scary stuff but is that really what all those scientists believe? Really?

Well, climate scientists do overwhelmingly agree that the planet has been in a warming trend for about the last 150 years but, so what? The Little Ice Age was a time of unusually cold temperatures which ended in 1850. Since then, the planet has been warming. Warm, cold, warm, cold... It's the way climate has naturally fluctuated since the Earth was formed billions of years ago. (By the way, since 1850 Earth's temperature has gone up approximately one degree and the seas have risen...8 inches.)

The important question is whether this warming is dangerous and there is nowhere near 97% agreement on that, with scientific opinions being all over the map, unless, of course, you survey only the 'scientists' in Hollywood, "Now, when you hear the loud crack, let's see those brows furrow. A glacier is coming apart because of global warming and climate change. We're talking the end of the world here, people. Furrow, furrow!"

"You mean like they taught us in Actor's Studio?"

"Exactly!"

Remember, movies are make believe. Playing a brilliant scientist isn't the same as actually being one.

And in 2012 Hurricane Sandy had barely gone off to hurricane heaven when the usual suspects, the ones who should know better, started going on about how it was all because of climate change.

Anyone remember the Galveston Flood of 1900? Category 4 hurricane, winds of 145 miles per hour, 15 foot storm surge flooding the city, over 8,000 dead. What was that all about? Maybe it was pre-global warming or pre-climate change. Pre-Al Gore are you listening?!

BERLINER

the Grave Diggers for frequently burying their opponents. And Mickalene Thomas's vinyl mural of Brooklyn's cityscape on the second floor concourse takes viewers on a journey of the Brooklyn Museum, Grand Army Plaza, and other borough institutions.

Executive works of art

Berliner's corporate successes are as much of a masterstroke.

The great-grandson of European immigrants who moved to East Flatbush, he began working at the company in 1989 as a real estate lawyer, four years after developer Bruce Ratner formed the firm as an off-shoot of the construction-materials-turned-real-estate empire Ratner's ancestors founded in 1920. Berliner, 52, worked his way up to senior management with a reputation for hammering deals, launching projects, smoothing wrinkles, and rallying the troops.

"I think of myself as a servant manager," he said. "I want to make sure that people are okay and that things get done."

His operational oversight has helped to accomplish such high-profile projects as the New York Times Building in Manhattan, and MetroTech Center in Downtown, a corporate anchor of Brooklyn's finance, technology and healthcare industries.

Berliner was a key player in acquiring the Brooklyn Nets — and the New York Islanders coming in the fall — and in developing the billion-dollar Barclays Center, a magnum opus that took nine years and 35 court battles to build, bringing with it 2,000 new jobs and a new age of economic hope and development.

The arena is the showpiece of a controversial megaproject formerly called Atlantic Yards, now rebranded as Pacific Park, whose first residential tower — a 32-story skyscraper that Berliner says will be the world's tallest modular building — will open next year.

"It's a really innovative, construction methodology akin to stacking pieces of Lego to create a beautiful and functional structure," he said.

Promised land

Brooklyn is the new global crossroads, and Berliner's efforts have helped to unlock the potential of its skyline, solidify its cultural cachet, and boost its bank account, but they stem from a humble belief in the place that gave his forefathers — and other immigrants, past and present — their jumpstart in the new world.

"Brooklyn is the promised land," he said. "It's where people come for a better life."

performance. "It was spectacular," she said, "one of the best concerts we've had, it was a riot."

Something that both Travis and Rud noticed was that it was a predominantly older crowd Sunday evening.

In contrast, the lineup for the June 11 concert featured young pianists, where the oldest performer was just 15 years old.

But part of Sing For Hope's mission is to spread music and bring together community members of all ages.

"It brings art to the community," said Stephanie Martinez, director of youth arts at Sing For Hope. "Art is for everyone, regardless of background, finances, and age," she said.

Allegretti agreed, saying, "It's just to bring the community together in a lovely way." The conservancy has four more concerts planned at the gazebo:

• June 12 at 7 pm — Maru Carosino, playing the American Song Book.

• June 13 at 5 pm — Vincent Merola, a popular songwriter.

• June 14 at 6 pm — Gregory Post, a classical musician and composer.

• June 20 at 6:30 pm — Fumiyo Narita, a classical musician.

REDUCE FAT... REMOVE INCHES...

"What if I told you this cutting-edge device could melt inches off your waist and keep them off for good."

— Doctor Oz talking about the ZERONA® LipoLaser

Introducing ZERONA® LipoLaser — removes fat without surgery, pain or wounds. ZERONA® is a new body-sculpting procedure designed to remove fat and contour the body without invasive surgery. ZERONA® allows you to continue your daily activities without interruptions from surgery, pain or wounds. ZERONA® works by utilizing the Low Level Laser (FDA cleared for laser body contouring to emulsify fat which then releases into the interstitial space. The excess fat is passed through the body during its normal course of detoxification. The ZERONA® procedure was proven through a double-blind, randomized, multi-site, and placebo controlled study in which patients average loss of 3.64 inches, and some lost as much as 9 inches compared to the placebo group that lost only half an inch.

What you can expect: Our patients lose an average of 8–9 inches from the waist, hips and thighs and reduction in clothes size in 2 weeks. This is not a quick weight loss program — we are targeting adipose tissue and not taking off excess water weight. Results vary individually.

Community vs. career colleges: How to choose one

What's the difference between a career college and community college? While both types of learning institutions share the goal of enriching students' lives through education, the experience they provide to students can vary greatly.

Community colleges are designed to serve a diverse group of students, from recent high school graduates to those looking for educational and social enrichment. To meet the needs of this varied student body, community colleges tend to offer numerous programs and classes, but don't necessarily focus on hands-on job skills.

Community colleges typically offer non-degree classes and two-year associate degree programs for those looking to later transfer to a traditional college or university. With the recent national push encouraging high school students to further their education, many community colleges are struggling to cope with the surge in new students, which has resulted in large class sizes and waiting lists for many popular programs.

At career colleges, the main focus is to prepare students for the workforce once they graduate. These career-focused schools want their students to have the necessary skills to hit the ground running their first day on the job. This intensive approach is made possible with classes of smaller sizes that are taught by experts who are working in their field.

Some may know career colleges as vocational schools, tech schools or trade schools, and more recently they have expanded to include many more in-demand career programs. In addition to the traditional trades, career colleges now also focus on graphic design, information technology, business, criminal justice and health care professions.

For those who are thinking about enrolling in college, have a specific career in mind and excel in a hands-on learning environment, a career college might be a good option. Most students at career colleges have already tried community or even traditional colleges and are looking for programs that train them for the workforce, not post-graduate education.

The Association of Private Sector Colleges and Universities provides a wealth of information about career colleges. Notably, there are a few key distinctions found at career colleges.

- Career colleges' curriculums are designed to meet specific needs of employers. They focus on specific tasks students will need to accomplish in their field of training.

- Much of the curriculum at a career college will be spent focusing on actual tasks that will need to be completed on the job.

- Career-focused training is most appropriate for jobs that require technical training. For example, students in graphic design get a lot of hands-on training with design programs like Adobe InDesign and Photoshop so they become proficient and are ready to work once they finish their degree.

- Many staff members of career colleges are also working in the fields they teach and can help students gain a better understanding of what might be expected of them once they get a job.

- Career colleges have a team of career services representatives who can help students prepare resumes, practice interview skills and locate job search resources.

- Career colleges are typically accredited by national accreditation agencies that measure faculty experience and outcomes such as graduation and employment rates. Conversely, community colleges and traditional colleges are most often regionally accredited and are measured on areas such as student learning, teacher effectiveness, and resources available.

Building the Young Women of Tomorrow

There is something different about Visitation Academy. You'll notice it the moment you walk through the doors. There is a vitality and richness of spirit as the girls and faculty greet the new day. The fundamental principle of a Visitation Academy education is to "Live Jesus" by reflecting Christ's gentle strength in their daily lives. Through its mission to "Educate the Mind and Heart," the girls participate in an enriching spiritual life during their Visitation education. The school's mission mirrors Mary's visitation to her cousin Elizabeth, her acceptance of Jesus in her own life and her commitment to carry Him to others.

A Visitation girl models confidence, self-reliance and resilience. Their joyful optimism is reflected in the words of its founder, St Francis de Sales, who said, "Be who you are, and be it well." Throughout her daily interactions, she is a confident and an articulate communicator who learns to solve problems, logically and creatively through independent, critical thinking.

The Sisters of the Visitation knew nearly 180 years ago what research is finding today about single-sex education. These visionary women instinctively knew that educating girls in a strong academic setting would instill greater confidence and success. Rooted in this strong tradition of academic excellence, Visitation provides a challenging, exploratory, integrative and relevant curriculum.

With an average class size of 15 students, the whole-child approach to learning focuses on the academic, social, physical and spiritual needs of the girls. It creates an environment that values curiosity, knowledge and leadership. Students are not only taught to analyze and apply knowledge but also to manage time, apply effective study strategies and work collaboratively. At Visitation, the opportunity to work with stem project-based learning teaches the use of science, technology, engineering and math (stem) as a mean of enhancing student understanding of major physical science concepts. All classrooms are equipped with Smart Board technology and the students use their Ipads collaboratively in ways that uniquely enhance their curriculum. One of the most successful and important attributes of any top-rated school is their ability to also cultivate the arts. All students attend comprehensive art and music classes. An Academy British Brass Band, a Cabaret Troupe and Chapel Choir are available to help students reinforce and enjoy both the physical and theoretical aspects of their music experience. Visitation Academy has the philosophy, the will, the tools and the design needed to fulfill their goal of "Building the Young Women of Tomorrow."

CONGRATULATIONS & GOOD LUCK TO OUR ENTIRE CLASS OF 2015!

BAY RIDGE PREP

AN INDEPENDENT K-12 COLLEGE PREPARATORY SCHOOL

Bay Ridge Prep Celebrates Class of '15 at Commencement

Bay Ridge Prep bid farewell to its Class of 2015 at the school's 17th Annual Commencement, held Friday, May 29, at the Brooklyn Museum. Keeping with tradition, Commencement featured student speakers and performers who each filled the museum's Cantor Auditorium with cheers, tears, laughs and, most of all, a deep sense of how valuable the Bay Ridge Prep experience has been to the graduates and their families.

Receiving the honors of salutatorian were Vincent Defonte, Nadia Hobbs, Rose-Emma Lambridis, Eleni Spyrou and Jamie Vento. The honors of valedictorian were shared by Solomiya Bavlovych, Monica Fainshtein and Hussna Javed.

Parents and teachers were the focus of Co-Head of School Dr. Michael Dealy's parting words to graduates as they stood on stage moments after receiving their diplomas.

"Look into the audience at your teachers and let us all give them thanks for the tireless and selfless commitment they give to you and to our school every day," Dr. Dealy said. "Now, find your parents, your family, your loved ones. They have been by your side, they have worked hard and made sacrifices to give you the gift of a Bay Ridge Prep education. Thank them today and then thank them again in four years when you stand proudly at your college commencement."

This year's class, comprised of 56 young men and women, will have many opportunities to find themselves over the next four years as they have collectively been offered acceptance and over $6 million in merit scholarship to institutions such as Bates College, Goucher College, New York University, Sarah Lawrence College, Savannah College of Art & Design and the University of Scranton. The college acceptance list shows the diverse paths that Bay Ridge Prep's newest alumni will take as they continue their studies at schools that are the best fit for each individual, whether that is a top tier art school, a highly ranked liberal arts college or a big name selective school.

No matter where they go or what challenges they face, Co-Head of School Dr. Charles Fasano advised graduates that perseverance will lead to success.

"Many times, you look at very successful people and think they're so lucky to be where they are in life," Dr. Fasano said. "What we often don't realize is that luck usually has nothing to do with it. Those people got past so many obstacles and overcame many failures before being very successful. When we started the school, there were a lot of hurdles we had to overcome and there were times we were unsure if it was going to work out. Yet, we're here today, 17 years later, celebrating another graduating class that has achieved so much at Bay Ridge Prep and will accomplish even more great things in college and in life."

Developing the whole student since 1998, Bay Ridge Prep is an independent, K-12 college preparatory school offering a strong academic program in a student-centered community that values the unique talents and the learning styles of each person.

Five Xaverian Seniors Accepted to Cornell University

With the hard work of the past four years at Xaverian now behind them, the members of the class of 2015 had much to celebrate as they walked across the stage at Brooklyn College's Walt Whitman Auditorium for the school's 55th Commencement Exercises on June 6th.

The past several years, Xaverian's graduates have earned acceptances to top colleges and universities, including Boston College, Boston University, Brown University, College of the Holy Cross, Fordham University, CUNY-Macaulay Honors, Johns Hopkins University, Lehigh University, New York University, Princeton University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute U.S. Coast Guard Academy, U.S. Military Academy at West Point, U.S. Naval Academy, University of Notre Dame, and University of Pennsylvania, and this year proved to be no different.

A record number of five members of the class of 2015 have earned acceptance to Cornell University. Ritvik Taneja, who is the class of 2015's valedictorian, Harrison Jamin, Oliver Sarzynski, Suet Cho, and Joseph Martorana were all thrilled upon hearing they got into the prestigious Ivy League institution, and they credit their accomplishments to the college application preparation they received through Xaverian's College Coordinator's Office.

Ritvik Taneja is looking forward to attending Cornell as a McMullen Scholar, which is a scholarship reserved for students with potential for exceptional success at Cornell in the field of engineering. He plans to major in Computer Science/Applied Mathematics, and credits Xaverian for preparing him for this next challenge, saying, "I am proud to say that I can move on to college knowing that Xaverian has prepared me for my future. Academically, I have been challenged inside and outside of the classroom. From studying for AP classes to working in an engineering internship at the World Trade Center, I have been exposed to all Xaverian has to offer to enrich the educational experience of the students. I've also learned the importance of faith in daily life. This faith can be in a higher power or in yourself, but it will nevertheless motivate you to strive for greatness."

Congratulations to all the members of Xaverian's class of 2015!

Fontbonne grads honor tradition & embrace the future

This year, graduation ceremonies at Fontbonne Hall Academy will reflect the true nature of a Fontbonne education -- filled with tradition yet academically progressive. The 129 members of the Class of 2015 will wear traditional white gowns and carry red roses at their Commencement Exercises at the Basilica of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. This year, however, they will also don navy blue caps and gowns at a Graduation Liturgy held at Saint Patrick's Church.

Fontbonne Hall Academy opened its doors in 1937. Sponsored by the Sisters of St. Joseph of Brentwood, New York, the academy has flourished for the past 78 years and has offered young women excellent academic preparation for admission to top-tier colleges and universities.

Fontbonne graduates in graduation dresses and a cap and gown

Today, Fontbonne offers a high level of college preparatory education that ensures its graduates are more confident and more qualified than ever. The school offers a rigorous college preparatory experience with AP classes that students may take as early as ninth grade. It has established a true STEM curriculum with emphasis on project-based learning and an introductory course in the physical sciences for all ninth-grade students. The STEM curriculum also includes a Science Research Program, a three-year sequence of classes that begins in the tenth grade, along with several AP science classes and electives such as a pre-college engineering program with Brown University.

Fontbonne has a unique blend of tradition and progressive academics is serving its students well. The Class of 2015 has earned over $17 million in scholarships. Class Valedictorian Michel Fallah will be attending the Macaulay Honors College at Brooklyn College in the fall, and Class Salutatorian Andrea Arcadipane will be attending Northeastern University. Congratulations to all of the graduates!

Congratulations to Poly's Class of 2015!

Many of you will attend the nation's top colleges next fall, including Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth & Brown.

Poly Congratulates Duke-Bound Michael McAloon '15, 1 of 8 NYC Winners of Milken Foundation Scholarship

Poly congratulates Michael McAloon '15, who has been selected as one of eight New York City winners of a prestigious Milken Foundation scholarship of $10,000. The Milken Foundation also offers scholarships to high school seniors in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

McAloon also received Poly's New England Award from the history department at an Academic Awards Chapel on May 15. He will attend Duke University, where he plans to major in economics and public policy.

According to the Milken Foundation website, "Milken Scholars was founded in 1989 by Lori and Michael Milken to honor exceptional young men and women based on their academic performance, community service, leadership activities and triumphs over obstacles."

McAloon told the Pulse, the school newsletter, "I found out about the Milken Scholars program after doing a lot of research online looking for college scholarships. Paying for college would have been a huge burden for my family and me... The Milken Program stood out to me specifically because it meant so much more than just money. It would provide me with a supporting community of staff and other scholars for my four years of college and beyond.

I would have the opportunity to engage in numerous community service projects, participate in numerous internship programs, and eventually even begin to pay for graduate school. On top of all of this, program staff conduct annual visits to each of the scholars when he/she is in college."

"Poly has also changed my life by providing me with so many amazing opportunities," McAloon said. "If I went anywhere else but Poly, I would never be where I am today and I'm sure I would have never received an award such as the Milken Scholarship. Over the past four years, I have had the opportunity to travel to Argentina, Spain, and Cambodia, and all of these trips have allowed me to develop a unique perspective of the world and of my own life in general. My trip to Cambodia and my involvement in the Cambodia club have had a significant effect on my life, as I have become very passionate about Cambodia and NGO work. While interning at Global Children Cambodia this past summer, I helped to develop their social media program and began work on numerous fundraising initiatives."

"Finally, Poly was always a place that was like home to me," McAloon told the Pulse. "No matter how much homework I had or how stressed or tired I was, I always looked forward to sitting in Chapel and hearing Mr. Cox go on tangents about the deep philosophical intricacies of life. To me, Mr. Cox's message, even if it wasn't always so clear, was that he loved each and every one of us immensely and wanted us to enjoy our lives as much as possible. Having such a supporting community and amazing leader was always so comforting to me. Coming to Poly every day provided me with an escape, a place where I knew I was cared about and where I knew I could be myself."

Coney's up the creek – with a paddle

To the editor,

It's wonderful to hear that we will be bringing more fish to the creek by planting oysters and utilizing other filter feeders to clean the water ("Up the creek: Volunteers count sea life, clean Coney estuary," online June 3).

I love the idea that our local students and educators are taking ownership of Coney Island Creek, which has been neglected for so many years.

As an educator and community educational advocate in Coney Island, I see My Estuary Day as just the beginning of bringing life to our neighborhood waterways. I envision a "marine science educational learning barge" coming to Coney Island to help support our students and create awareness about our local waterways.

On the barge I would like to see an ecology classroom to support water monitoring, population inventories, coastal ecology, and marine science school and community-based programming; a career training tech lab to help students gain underwater welding certification, laboratory skills, aquaponics, and marina operations; a wet lab facility with fish tanks and science laboratory equipment (scales, microscopes etc.); recreational kayaking and summer youth employment opportunities; and an office for a part-time coordinator for class trips, group visits, and to supervise research projects.

We can also reach out to environmental agencies, which could donate equipment and lend staff to train on select occasions if we ask them to partner with us in this proposed field site.

We want our students to experience Coney Island. Can you think of a better way?

Popular vote counts

To the editor,

I too would like to see more political parties and uncorrupted politicians have a chance of winning elections ("Corrupt pols" by Jerry Sattler," Sound Off to the Editor, June 5).

For this to happen, we need stringent campaign finance control. Unfortunately people and organizations with the most money usually control our elections, our politicians, and our two major political parties. Smaller parties with less money cannot compete. Therefore we need strong limits on how much money any candidate or party should be allowed to spend on an election.

I believe we should eliminate the electoral college and elect our next and future presidents by popular vote. Had we done this in 2000, the messed up ballots in Florida might not have mattered. I believe Al Gore had the popular vote. Had he won, we might now have a lot less environmental pollution, and we might all be able to breathe better.

I am opposed to the suggestion of term limits in national elections because we would lose some valuable congresspeople like our own senators, Charles Schumer and Kirsten Gillibrand. Not every politician is corrupt! There is no guarantee, with term limits, that we would not get corrupt politicians taking their places. Many newly-elected politicians have been found to be as corrupt as their predecessors.

What we really need is campaign finance control so that honest, but not wealthy, politicians would have a chance of being elected.

Speed trap

To the editor,

I was driving westbound on Shore Parkway between Knapp Street and Nostrand Ave. in Sheepshead Bay, at around 5:20 pm, when I was pulled over by two uniformed cops, along with several other passenger cars.

We were all given speeding tickets, which were technically justified. However, the dubious circumstances under which the tickets were issued are as follows: both policemen were on foot, there was no police car to be seen, a civilian passenger car was driving in the right lane at 10 mph below the 25 mph speed limit for two blocks and gave no indication of turning, thus inviting the vehicles behind to go into the left lane at increased speed to pass, which we all did. That's when the policemen appeared and waived us over.

I obviously have no proof, but the slow-moving vehicle in the right lane seemed to me to be acting as a Judas goat, inducing cars behind to change lanes and pass it. Very suspicious.

I have lived in Sheepshead Bay all my life and have been driving since 1975. I pass that location once or twice every week and have never seen anything like this before. One might expect to see something like this in some little town in the hinterlands whose finances depend on scamming out-of-towners into traffic tickets.

Perhaps Mayor DeBlasio's progressive "social justice" agenda requires additional funding and his Vision Zero campaign provides the means. I don't blame the policemen, as I'm sure they were only following orders.

Safety first

To the editor,

I was waiting for the Q train at West Eighth Street when I heard a fire truck with its horn blasting.

I noticed the truck had to wait for pedestrians to cross Surf Avenue with the light. I wondered how it would get to its emergency within seconds. I have the same concern about those stupid islands at Brighton Beach and Coney Island avenues.

As the summer season begins more seniors and families will flock Coney Island attempting to cross Surf Avenue. What I would like to see is for someone with a brain to decide that a new modern bridge between the W. Eighth Street subway and the Boardwalk past the aquarium must be rebuilt and maintained on an ongoing basis. I don't want to hear it's no one's responsibility to maintain the bridge, which will make it easier to cross in safety.

Going west on Brighton Beach Avenue is a two-lane road, but going east is a one-lane road. Where are the fire trucks, police cars, and ambulances going to turn? I've noticed many cars don't pull over upon hearing emergency sirens. They feel it's easier to beat these emergency vehicles, as if they are just waiting for an accident to happen. When people hear any emergency vehicle, they need to pull over and let them pass.

Driver's ed

To the editor,

Elderly people's reflexes and vision are not as sharp as younger people's, and a fair solution to protect society as a whole would be for state legislature to enact laws that drivers of any age to retain their licenses should be given a neurological examination every two years to determine whether mental impairment has developed.

It is now known that President Woodrow Wilson had a stroke that left him blind in his left eye at 42 years old, when he was a professor of political science and government. This was not revealed for more than 70 years after his death. I understand too that Albert Einstein never drove a car.

My late father's first home attendant told me that in Trinidad when people turn 60 they are required to surrender their drivers licenses. I do not think America has to be that arbitrary, but it would be beneficial for society as a well as individuals to be required to have a neurological examination every two years to see if any development might occur.

School's down-n-out

To the editor,

What's all the fuss about extending mayoral control of public schools? Since we have had it, I do not see improvements in class size or student attendance.

Test scores remain stagnant and far too many schools remain chaotic with discipline out of hand. Supplies are still hard to come by, and the control has weakened the ability to suspend unruly youngsters and fire some outrages principals, especially from the Leadership Academy. Parents for the most part are shut out of the decision-making process.

With Hillary in lead, Mike needs to step in

I'm a Democrat and I am very concerned about the upcoming presidential election. Our country's ability to tackle all kinds of inequality — racial, gender, economic, and the list goes on — largely hinges on the outcome of the 2016 election, and if Democrats prevail.

I want to make clear that I don't think all Republicans are completely misguided, just many of them such as union-bashing Gov. Scott Walker of Wisconsin and polarizing Texas Sen. Ted Cruz and thug-gish New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie. Moderates like Jeb Bush and Marco Rubio — although too far to the right on many issues for me — at least offer new ideas on education and immigration.

But we saw what eight years of George Bush–Dick Cheney did to our country — a near economic collapse, a rush headlong into a calamitous war, and a rightward tilt of our Supreme Court.

So the stakes are high in 2016. It is easy to find fault with some of President Obama's policies and methods — particularly in Middle Eastern foreign policy and his ability to negotiate with an intransigent Congress — but history will almost certainly be very kind him. His landmark health care plan will one day be hailed as revolutionary as Social Security. Obama rarely gets enough credit for bringing America back from the brink of economic collapse early in his presidency with his steady stimulus plan and strong monetary policy.

POLITICAL SPIN CYCLE

Ironically, the first president of African-American descent hasn't done enough to help the underclass in this country and the huge gap of economic inequality has widened. There has been a surge of activity around the country around the minimum wage, but this is not nearly enough.

There has been no attempt to address America's unfair tax code, no attempt to make higher education less expensive for middle class and low-income families or reform the predatory college loan program.

There also is the proverbial elephant in the room: the presumptive — and seemingly only — Democratic nominee for president, Hillary Clinton.

I am a fan of Hillary's because she is progressive without being dogmatic and polarizing; she is extremely competent and has invaluable experience on foreign and domestic issues; and she is battle-scarred and has been tested in public life for three decades.

But.

For all her experience and intelligence, I worry that Hillary is not a great candidate or campaigner. I worry there is much Clinton fatigue in this country. I worry the media and the public will focus on the wrong things and damage her electability. I worry she will stumble late in the campaign. I worry there is no Democratic back-up plan.

So I will join the small but growing chorus of those who are saying, "Run, Mike. Run!"

Former New York City Mayor Mike Bloomberg is perhaps the only other supremely qualified moderate in public life who could lead this country. He has the intelligence, the independence, the wealth, the team, and — most importantly — he was great when holding the second hardest job in America for 12 years.

I'm debating whether it would be better for Bloomberg to jump into the Democratic primary soon, so Hillary has a real challenger to sharpen her campaign and message, or whether he should wait until early 2016 to see if Hillary flounders.

An advantage of being a multi-billionaire is he doesn't have to do fund-raising and can snap his fingers and have the finest minds in our country help him deliver his centrist, no-nonsense message. His business skills will surely help in the increasingly competitive global economy. His crime-fighting record will help ensure America stays safe. His blunt and honest way of governing will help us on the world stage, as America's hegemonic powers begin to recede.

So, even though there has been no official word from Bloomberg, I would bet many Americans would love to have another choice in the Democratic primary. Bernie Sanders is a smart, outspoken lefty who speaks truth to power, but he has no chance of being the next president. Martin O'Malley and Lincoln Chafee have impressive records and may be rising stars, but it is doubtful either is ready for prime time.

Run, Mike, run!

Flag Day gives Stan a case of the Mondays

My flag has been waving in the breeze from my terrace since Memorial Day.

I take it in at night and on rainy days, but there is a strong possibility that it will remain there, weather permitting, until July 5. This Sunday is Flag Day.

Come on. Go to the back of your closet, pull out the colors and proudly display them from your balcony, your living room window or your car. In spite of the complaints, this is still a great nation and flag-waving is not such a terrible thing to do.

Who I believe are terrible are those non-thinking fools who don't appreciate what we have here and protest by trampling on the flag. I really wish the media would not reward them by publicizing their hatred. There are several things that I see on the tube that make me angry, and one of the worst is watching ungrateful scrofas desecrating a piece of cloth that they should be saluting is one of them.

Let me see, by a show of hands, how many of you are familiar with the name Rick Monday?

Google him and learn about a baseball player who became a patriotic hero in our nation's bicentennial year when a disgruntled fool and his son ran onto the field at Dodgers Stadium and attempted to gain attention by setting fire to Old Glory. Monday, representing those of us who love our flag, rescued it and prevented the protesters from accomplishing their goal.

A former U.S. Marine, Monday instantly became the darling of the United States. That was about 40 years ago. One cannot do that today. Try to rescue a flag and the cops will force you to return it. The only thing the boys in blue can do today is issue a summons to the protestors for starting a fire without a permit. In the case of that 1976 Chicago Cubs vs. the L.A. Dodgers baseball game, the protestors were arrested for running out on the playing field.

At this very moment, there is one reader who is ready to criticize me — as he usually does — by telling me things that I already know. He will create a nasty letter telling me all about flag burning being legal because of our freedom of speech laws. He will throw in Supreme Court rulings that we have all read about. To him — and to all of you who are ready to sound off — I say, don't bother. Just enjoy the day and take a minute out to salute the banner that is the emblem of this nation — and freedom of speech. Then offer your thanks to God, if you still believe in him, that you reside in this wonderful country.

IT'S ONLY MY OPINION

Stanley P. Gershbein

I can never understand why people come here from countries they don't like but then complain about and try to change the U.S. to become like the country they came from. Why don't they just roll with the punches and enjoy the freedoms that our military men and women lived and died for? Yes, this IS a great country. My roommate's passion, since the day we were married, has always been to travel. We have visited 43 states, some twice, some three and even four times. Before we leave this earth we intend to visit all 50. We have almost three hundred thousand frequent-flyer miles and just this morning we used some of those miles to order tickets to Idaho and Montana. That will make it 45 down and five to go.

I am StanGershbein@Bellsouth.net saying it again, again and again: God Bless America!

Mayor DeBlasio's crime and punishment

Mayor DeBlasio strode into office a year and a half ago, a knight in the shining armor of progressive change, but these days he is an emperor without clothes — no fig leaf in sight — getting dumped on from all sides.

First the Finest turned its back on him for cozying up to anti-police protestors calling for "dead cops."

Now blacks, who make up most of his voting base, are angry at him for ignoring the mounting bloodshed — 82 people were slain in the city in the first three months of 2015, up 11 from the same period a year ago — and stalling on his promised criminal justice reforms.

Black demonstrators wielded a coffin and body bags as props outside City Hall and accused the man inside of "blood on his hands," demanding he create new crime-fighting tactics to stop the violence plaguing their communities.

A BRITISHER'S VIEW

DeBlasio is snagged like political moss between the rock of his crime-friendly policies and the hard place of his grievance-minded voters. He helped to cut back stop-and-frisk, which benefited black strongholds now crying foul the most, and the policing tool's decline and the increase in crime is no coincidence: Murders and shootings in East New York and Brownsville rose after cops decreased stop-and-frisks by 99 percent in those areas.

In a case of political schizophrenia the mayor claims crime is at an all-time low, but then launched a summer anti-crime campaign to pour hundreds of cops into gritty blocks.

It takes only a few key acts of lawlessness — an unstoppable force if left unchecked — to shatter the calm that took decades to restore. The rash of gunpoint robberies and brazen muggings in Central Park — including three assaults in less than 24 hours — and the brutal rape of a woman in Chinatown by three teenage boys are enough to transport us to the ugly 1980s and early 1990s when marauders claimed the city and few felt safe in public places.

City Hall is understating the violence, but the victim toll and the smell of fear in the air are proof of a downward spiral happening on the mayor's watch.

Jo wishes for a pill to cure reality TV

We are no longer the great United States of America, defender of truth, justice and the American way.

No.

Thanks to our bright, talented, and resourceful minds, we will go down in the history books as the nation that has wiped out sexual dysfunction and given the world reality television and its stars. Yes, America, we can all rest easy and go to bed knowing that if we wake up and don't desire sex every hour of every day, we just have to pop a pink or blue pill to be ready, willing, and able to fornicate like a rabbit every which way we can. And if we can't get sex — or the lack thereof — out of our minds, we can turn on the parade of freaks on reality television to keep us amused.

I offer a very heartfelt "thank you" to the pharmaceutical companies Pfizer (makers of Viagra) and Sprout (Flibanserin, the so-called "Viagra for women") — who will be even more filthy rich — for providing these miracle cures to our medicine cabinets. And to The Learning Channel for its enlightened programming.

I, for one, will sleep better knowing that my libido is in good hands. And if not, I can tune into TLC for a dose of familial dysfunction to gently put me under.

Let us not forget our advertising brethren — with this new pink pill, there will be a feeding frenzy out there in advertising land. Who will be the first to come up with the catchiest tune to tout this new wonder drug? How many times a day will the left side of our brains (the part most susceptible to subliminal messaging), be hit with visions of beautiful young women and gray-haired men who want to copulate and can't because of impotence and hypoactive sexual desire?

No longer concerned about cancer, diabetes, heart disease, baldness, or gastrointestinal reflux disease. No siree bob — our libidos are in the pink (and blue).

Jeez Louise, I have never seen a culture more consumed with sex than ours. Which presents the other matter to the right side of my brain — the circus of reality television.

Not only consumed by sex, but we are number one for dancing on the stick of reality television — of which TLC is the master puppeteer. I ask you, does the research team purposefully go out and choose families with huge skeletons in their closets? First "Kate Plus Eight," then "Honey BooBoo," and now the "Duggars."

Who is next? Is there a scandal in the closet of the Little Couple just waiting for a slump in the ratings?

Not for Nuthin',™ but I am really tired of having the left side of my brain hit with all this minutiae. Please, Pfizer and Sprout, make a pill — make it stop!

Now, that's what I call old New York!

To me, “old New York” is the city I moved to in 1981. Back then, the subway cars were so covered with graffiti, you couldn’t see out the windows. You always added a 20-minute cushion to your commute, just in case. And Times Square...

Well, I’m getting off track. My point is, everyone’s got an “old New York.” The one Edith Wharton was referring to when she was writing a hundred years ago was the “old New York” before the Civil War, already a quaint and distant memory in the Gilded Age.

Old New Yorks are always being demolished, or updated beyond recognition, so it is astonishing to learn that one slice of the old old New York not only still exists, it stands virtually intact, right down to its original furnishings from 1832. It is the Merchant’s House Museum at 29 E. Fourth St., and last week I went to hear at lecture about it at another amazing venue, the National Arts Club. (Hat tip to Gary Shapiro, the club’s dapper emissary, who alerted me to the talk.)

“We call it the ‘Miracle on

RHYMES WITH CRAZY

Lenore Skenazy

Fourth Street,” began the speaker, Carl Raymond, a tour guide at the Merchant’s House who is also a professional chef. He combines both those skills to sleuth out what the home’s original owners would have been eating 183 years ago, when they first moved in. But before getting to the meat of his talk — as it were — he explained how the miracle came to be standing at all.

When a young man named Seabury Tredwell moved to New York at age 18 to make his fortune in the hardware business, he lived in a boardinghouse. Perhaps predictably, he fell in love with his landlady’s daughter. They married and had seven kids. In 1832 they bought a brand new house on Fourth Street — the suburbs at the time — and in 1840, when Seabury was 60, they had a surprise eighth child, Gertrude.

“Like my mother,” continued lecturer Raymond, “Gertrude never threw anything away.” She also never married. So when she died in 1933, just 20 feet from the bed she’d been born in 93 years earlier, she was surrounded by the very same objects that she had grown up with, right down to 39 dresses. These included the one her mom got married in more than a hundred years earlier, in 1825.

Gertrude’s heir was about to sell the place and all its dusty contents when a distant cousin, George Chapman, realized that this was no ordinary fixer-upper. Stepping inside was like walking into a time capsule — the King Tut’s Tomb of Manhattan. Gertrude had kept the house “as papa would’ve wanted it” and Chapman wanted that for the rest of us. He purchased the place and turned it into a museum.

In 1965, Merchant’s House was one of the first 25 buildings on which our city bestowed landmark status. To this day, 90 percent of the items in it are original.

So what did the Tredwells eat during the century or so that they lived there?

Alas, nothing particularly delicious at first.

Despite our modern pinning for heirloom vegetables, early 19th century New Yorkers generally boiled these to death. The watery mess was served alongside boiled or roasted meats with perhaps some melted butter as gravy. And since Eliza was raised in a boardinghouse, it is likely she served the same kind of food her mom did.

Historians contend that more change occurred in the 19th century than in any other era, and happily, some of that occurred in the kitchen. By the end of the 1800s, French cuisine was all the rage, along with the new practice of serving food in courses..

You can still see the dining room table and chairs the Tredwells used, and some of their cookware, and the bells to call the servants, a la Downton Abbey. But threatened is the beautiful original plasterwork in the dining room and elsewhere.

Vibrations from nearby construction could crack the walls. The museum is hoping to ensure that doesn’t happen by working with lawyers and engineers to develop protection plans.

With any luck, the Merchants House will be around for another 183 years, when aged locals may remember an “old New York” back when food was created by cooks, not 3D printers, and delivered by bike, not drone.

Hells bells! Carmine loses his phone service!

I'm madder than Alexander Graham Bell the first time he heard one of those annoying custom ring tones instead of the soothing sound of a Bell Telephone ring over the fact that I didn't have telephone service for more than 10 days — and had no way to tell anyone about it!

Look, you all know the ol'Screecher calls the Phone Company to complain so often, they answer the phone over there by saying "What is it now, Carmine?" but that doesn't mean I get all the quality service I deserve, losing service at the worst possible times — which is to me anytime I lose service.

It all started the other day when I went to send a very important facts to someone that desperately needed to receive it. But when I rolled over to the facts machine in my home office and hit the "hook" key, I didn't get a dial tone! In fact, I couldn't hear a thing!

So I called my pal Cookie on my cellphone, and ordered him to immediately call me on my home phone to see if I could receive calls (I had already noticed that the Phone Company phone wasn't ringing as early and often as it had in the past, and was concerned even before I went to facts the facts). When he called me and the phone rang, I thought the problem fixed itself — but it turned out he called my other phone — the one that comes from the Cable Company!

BIG SCREECHER

Carmine Santa Maria

Now, I know exactly what you are thinking: "Carmine, I thought you didn't even have cable, knowing full-well that you would never pay for something you can get for free over the government-protected airwaves."

And you're right! But I will happily pay for all the many ways to get my message out there, and based on the Phone Company's past performance, the second I was given the opportunity to back things up with a service provided by the Cable Company (not to mention those six Cellphone Companies!) — I jumped at it.

But that doesn't mean that when one of my many ways of communicating with the world outside Harway Terrace goes down, I don't go crazy, and that's just what I did when I found out Cookie was getting a busy signal every time he called me, and I was quite certain the phone wasn't off the hook!

So I immediately put in a call to the Phone Company to find out what was going on, but its crack tech support team was stymied, and determined it would have to send a troop of staffers to my house to figure out what was going on, exactly.

When they got here and put in a call, they would hear my phone chirp, then go merrily on its way to Never-Never Land.

And that's where they would go, too! They would say to me, "Give me a minute and let me check something in the truck" — only to never be heard from again. It was as if they were terrified of the chirping ghost that was haunting my main line!

Now, don't get me wrong. These men were gentlemen, all spoke well, all recognized me from my column, and all were earnest in their desire to fix the problem. Alas, none were able to.

So I continued to call up and complain of the persistent problem, only to receive assurances that someone would show up Friday, only to find out that it was a lie, they couldn't send anyone until after the weekend — the time I make my most important calls!

So I played the disabled and sick card, explaining that I was handicapped and my wife was sick and it was a medical emergency. Too bad!

I explained that the last technician said that the copper wires that have served us for centuries outside and above my door needed to be upgraded, and that that upgrade would clear up the problem!

But I don't see how replacing wires that have worked for years will solve anything! I think they want to melt those wires down and turn them into pennies!

Of course, nothing solved the problem, and I was just getting used to being Phone Company free when, 10 days after this hardship began, I received an anonymous message on my cellphone telling me to disconnect the advance call forwarding on my phone that was sending the calls to wherever!

That's when I just started turning the dial over and over again and hitting the phone with the back end of a screwdriver until things started working again!

And they finally did!

Screech at you next week!

Dance performance brings viewers into the world of debutantes

By Noah Hurowitz

These debs are no downers!

An interactive dance performance in Red Hook introduces audiences to the tension and competition behind the tightly-enforced etiquette of a debutante ball. The show "Debutaunt" portrays girls who may be steeped in tradition, but who want to carve out space for themselves, said the show's creator.

"There is a mistress of ceremonies who passes on messages that aren't productive or useful to this generation, but the girls by the end are in revolt in their own way," said choreographer

Mary John Frank. "They are forced to find their own voice and decide whether to stand up to old traditions."

"Debutaunt" brings viewers into the action with lessons on posture and table manners, and each audience member receives a bracelet with the name of a particular debutante. Each character has her own choreographed dance and accompanying video, and as the evening progresses the debs fall into competitive strife as their assigned champions cheer them on.

Frank knows about the world of debutantes — she used to be one.

During breaks from studying at New York University, she would return to her home in Texas to participate in debutante events alongside the young women she had grown up with. There was a stark contrast between her New York life and her debutante life back home, but slipping back into the life of a southern belle was easier than you might think, she said.

"For me, it was just what people in my community did," she said. "My parents were matched at a debutante ball. It was very much part of the culture, and I wanted to feel connected to that."

Still, she was in no rush to try to explain the tradition to her New York friends.

"I didn't hide it, but it seemed so out of context there would be no way of describing it to people here," she said.

Instead, the show brings New York audiences into the world of cotillion-style dancing. In fact, each show ends with a dance, and Frank encourages audience members to dress up and join the ball.

City's first gay comics convention comes to Brooklyn

By Max Jaeger

These comic book fans are burning with pride!

A group of progressive nerds are throwing the city's first queer comic and pop-culture convention — Flame Con — at Park Slope's Grand Prospect Hall on June 13.

The gathering will let creative folks from the gay community interact on an unprecedented scale, one artist said.

"It's harder for people who are queer to find a home in terms of festivals," said Bedford-Stuyvesant illustrator Hayley Blatte. "So this is a great opportunity for people to exchange ideas and create an even tighter community."

Comic conventions — home to foam sword wielders and superhero cosplayers — are generally judgement-free, but the city's other festivals struggle to engage the queer community, said Flame Con's organizers.

"The 2010 New York Comic Con only had one queer panel, and it was packed to the gills, but at the end everybody left — nobody hung out and talked," said Joey Stern, who that year formed Geeks Out, the group behind the convention.

At Flame Con, expect all-gender bathrooms, a cosplay pageant, name tags with a space to write your preferred pronoun, queer readings of Sherlock Holmes, and panel discussions that go deeper than conventional convention conversation about the queer community, Stern said.

"They're not 'Gay 101' panels," he said. "The sort of things that might be hard to find at other conventions — we've got that front and center."

Among the cartoonist luminaries exhibiting at the show will be "X-Men" artist Phil Jimenez, "She-Hulk" cover artist Kevin Wada, and Brooklyn Paper arts editor and resident cartoonist Bill Roundy.

And the con has its own mascot — Flamey — a spandex-clad super hero with imposing pauldrons and a shock of flaming hair. The fiery hero was a fait accompli, Stern said.

"You put seven queers into a room and tell them they're going to put an event on and someone will make a costume for it," Stern said.

And the character's power embodies the spirit of the meet-up.

"Flamey is all genders, goes by 'they,' and can be worn by anyone," Stern said.

Of course, if you happen to be straight, you're more than welcome — Flame Con is all about inclusivity regardless of proclivity, Stern said.

"We're definitely not checking people at the door to make sure that they're gay," he said.

Flame Con at Grand Prospect Hall (263 Prospect Ave. between Fifth and Sixth avenues in Park Slope, www.flamecon.org) June 13 noon–6 pm. After party 8 pm–midnight. $10–$25.

Queer here

By Max Jaeger

Brooklyn represent! Many artists won't have to travel far to get to the city's first queer comic convention at Grand Prospect Hall on June 13 — scores of Flame Con's famous guests came from right here in Brooklyn. Here are a few of our top picks — all living in the borough that former Beep Marty Markowitz's dubbed the "lesbian capital of the Northeast."

Hayley Blatte

Bedford-Stuyvesant illustrator Hayley Blatte's hirsute heroines explode narrow preconceptions of beauty, turning the pin-up girl aesthetic on its head by introducing grotesque and taboo elements.

"I'm reinventing the classic pinup with a feminist twist," she said.

The body-positive depictions show that waxed eyebrows and an hourglass figure are not the defining characteristics of femininity.

Jennifer Camper

Talk about seven-card stud! Queer comics pioneer (and Kensington resident) Jennifer Camper is bringing decks of sexy playing cards illustrated by herself and several other queer cartoonists exhibiting at Flame Con. The decks are a steal at $20, and the proceeds go to defraying the cost of the City University of New York's Queers and Comics conference. While you're there, pay your respects to the long-time Gay Community News and Village Voice contributor.

Max Wittert

Williamsburger Max Wittert — known for parodic revisions of popular comics — will display art from his series "Jean and Scott," which imagines the banal home lives of X-Men Jean Grey and Cyclops (Scott Summers). The multi-media maestro will also bring handmade handkerchiefs with erotic patterns crafted as a throwback to the "hanky code" popular among gay men in the 1980s and '90s, he said. The artist is also selling prints and some 'zines, he said.

Seniors perform stories created from their lives

By Allegra Hobbs

They have stories a lifetime in the making.

A group of senior storytellers have crafted their life experience into captivating stories with the help of professionals from the Moth, the city's famed storytelling enclave, and will share the results at the Prospect Hill Senior Services Center on June 17.

Seniors in the program say that sharing their stories has been eye-opening.

"You meet a person and you don't know what experiences they've had," said storyteller Beatrice Christian. "Then they tell you and you say, 'Wow.'"

Christian will tell the story of a chance meeting with the man who would later become her husband. Other stories on the docket recount a mother-son road trip to visit ill relatives in California and seeing the skyscrapers of Manhattan for the first time at the age of 15.

The seniors developed their stories at weekly meetings over the past six months, with visiting artists offering tips on storytelling structure and creating a story arc. The artist-in-residence at the center said that helping the seniors express themselves has been hugely rewarding.

"The magic of it is when you start asking questions about experiences in their lives," said Cyndi Freeman, a performer who has taught storytelling with the Moth community program for the last five years. "Stories will pop up that there usually isn't room to share."

The storytellers are thrilled to finally share their tales with an audience, and say that listeners will be enriched by what they hear.

"They can expect some exciting stories about how people open their hearts up to other people, and how people went out of their way to make someone else's life happy," said Christian.

Sharing stories with each other has also been a bonding experience, said the seniors.

"People don't really tell you their backstories, you just know them in the center but you don't know their history," said Deborah Wheaton, a senior whose passion for storytelling has taken her beyond the program and to Moth events throughout the city. "It's really interesting to hear someone tell what's really important to them."

THE IN-CIDER

Author reveals secrets of home-brewing cider

By Danielle Furfaro

She thinks that making cider in the house rules.

Williamsburg home brewer and author Mary Izett wants adult beverage lovers to know that making their own hooch is not nearly as daunting as it may seem.

The author of the new book “Speed Brewing: Techniques and Recipes for Fast-Fermenting Beers, Ciders, Meads, and More” will give away some of her secrets at the Pour the Core hard cider festival on Saturday.

“I always hear people say that they would love to start homebrewing, but they have three roommates or a tiny apartment or a new baby,” said Izett. “But I think that people can brew in their home no matter what the situation, and I want them to know that.”

Turning juice — usually apple — into booze is a quick and painless process that requires only a small amount of space, a few cheap ingredients, and a wait time as short as a week, said Izett, who is a member of both the New York City Homebrewers Guild and the Malted Barley Appreciation Society. And it does not even have to be a high-end organic juice.

“You can get the juice at the green market, but you can also just get it at Costco,” she said.

It is easy to go down to the corner store and grab a six-pack of Woodchuck, but Izett said it is cheaper and more rewarding to make it at home yourself.

Apples of her eye: Mary Izett talks about turning apples to alcohol at the Pour the Core hard cider festival on June 13.

“I just love the creative process and making something,” said Izett, who has been brewing beer and cider in her apartment for more than a decade. “It is one thing to buy something at a store to share with your friends, but making something yourself and sharing it is a whole other thing.”

Bay Ridge goes out — outside!

By Max Jaeger

Outdoor concerts are singing in three-part harmony in Bay Ridge this weekend. You’ve got a trio of chances to catch some music in Shore Road Park, and if fresh air and sunshine aren’t your bag, there’s plenty going on in the neighborhood watering holes.

Have it your way on Friday, when Maru Carosino plays songs from the American Songbook at the Shore Road Park Gazebo (90th Street and Shore Road) at 7 pm. Expect traditional jazz and show tunes from greats like George Gershwin, Cole Porter, and Jerome Kern.

Then skip over to Schnitzel Haus (7319 Fifth Ave. between 73rd and 74th streets) at 9 pm to catch blues-some two-some Full Disclosure.

On Saturday, gambol back to the Gazebo for pop songwriter Vincent Merola at 5 pm. If his dulcet tunes don’t get you misty, the weather might — so bring an umbrella, because the chance of rain is 50-50.

By now you’ve probably had enough ivory tickling for a year, so we’re throwing you a bone. After Merola wraps up, sail over to No Quarter (8015 Fifth Ave. between 80th and 81st streets) to catch the aptly named rock band Quartet of Catastrophe.

Then, double down and make a pilgrimage to the Wicked Monk (9510 Third Ave. between 95th and 96th streets) to catch Garden State rockers Johnny Drama at 11 pm.

Indulge your cultured side on Sunday with a trip to Brooklyn Writers Space’s poetry workshop at the Narrows Botanical Garden (7001 Shore Rd at 70th Street) at 3 pm.

Then complete your weekend piano trifecta on Sunday — take a walk south and catch classical pianist Gregory Post at the Gazebo at 6 pm.

The best reads — handpicked by some of the best Bklyn bookstores

Community Bookstore’s pick: “Counternarratives” by John Keene

In “Counternarratives,” John Keene conjures lost memoirs, detective pulps, and newspaper reports to rewrite literary and cultural history. This new story collection carves daring paths through the Western canon, reviving Jim and Huck Finn, Langston Hughes and Xavier Villaurrutia, sorcery, slavery, and colonialism. Keene’s blend of history and narrative, the familiar and the strange, reads like a furious Ishmael Reed channeling his inner Borges: careful yet caustic. Fans of “Annotations,” Keene’s brief, brilliant study of home, have waited a long time for his next offering. It is here, and it is brilliant and biting.

— Hal Hlavinka, Community Bookstore [43 Seventh Ave. between Carroll Street and Garfield Place in Park Slope, (718) 783-3075, www.communitybookstore.net].

Greenlight Bookstore’s pick: “Can’t and Won’t” by Lydia Davis

Lydia Davis is a miniaturist, a stylist, an obsessive writer of the small and particular that all too often disappears into the void of everyday life. In her newest collection she presents some of her shortest stories to date. She builds her pieces carefully sequence by sequence, so that minor moments gain weighty significance. She writes in the form of absurd and incoherent dreams, letters, and lists. She catalogs the inconsistencies and surprising contingencies of life. This is a collection for the malcontented, the idiosyncratic, and for those curious to learn about existence in its most peculiar manifestations.

— Maya Solove, Greenlight Bookstore [686 Fulton St. between S. Elliott Place and S. Portland Avenue in Fort Greene, (718) 246-0200, www.greenlightbookstore.com].

Word’s pick: “The Knowledge: How To Rebuild Civilization in the Aftermath of a Cataclysm” by Lewis Dartnell

This is not your typical apocalypse prep book. Dartnell focuses on the science and history behind the items we take for granted, as a sort of “how we got to now” thought experiment. He writes about communications, agriculture, technologies, and medicine. Would we be able to recreate penicillin from scratch? Could you make your own clothing? While reading, I realized how woefully unprepared I was. The book is educational, fun, and thought-provoking.

No repeat for Clippers

Xaverian's quest for consecutive crowns thwarted by Farrell in CHSAA playoffs

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

As American Pharaoh ended the 37-year Triple Crown drought over the weekend, the wait for a repeat Catholic baseball champion hit 38.

Second-seeded Xaverian saw its bid for consecutive crowns ended by the No. 8 Monsignor Farrell by 5-0 in a loser's bracket game in the Catholic championship tournament on June 7 at St. Joseph by the Sea.

"It was definitely in our minds the whole playoffs," said Seton Hall-bound third baseman Anthony Scotti. "It's tough. It's just tough to do."

The Clippers lost its tournament opener to Archbishop Molloy, rallied to beat Fordham Prep in eight innings, but again saw its offense struggle against the Lions. Xaverian managed just three hits against Farrell starter Nick Lepre, who went the distance. He located his fastball well to strand six runners and leave the bases loaded twice in the bottom of the third.

"We had a few opportunities there, bases loaded in a 2-0 game, one out," Clippers coach Frank Del George said. "It's unbelievable. We had the right guys up, top of the order. It was not just this game."

On the other side, Farrell collected four-straight hits with two away in the top of the third to take a 2-0 lead again. Farrell starter Alex Passarella, Hayden Gumb, and Gary Otten each drove in runs. The junior pitched well enough to win on most days, allowing three runs on five hits over six innings.

"When he gets locked in, he is pretty good," Del George said.

The Clippers (18-5) had a chance to answer in the bottom of the third, when Scotti got an infield single to start the frame. Xavier Vargas reached on an error and Chris Iacono walked to load the bases. Lead-off hitter Phoenix Hernandez then grounded into a five-five-two double play. Xaverian loaded the bases again after a walk to Joe Vitacco, but Nick Meola grounded out to end the frame.

The Clippers threatened again in the fifth, but could not scratch a run across the plate. Iacono walked with one out and Hernandez delivered a hit-and-run. But pinch runner Andrew Watters was thrown out trying to go to third on the hit by Farrell right fielder Tom Medina. Vitacco singled, but Meola flied out to end the threat.

"We couldn't really get anything going," Scotti said. "We just had no momentum throughout the game. That's when we play our best. When we have momentum."

Farrell added a run in the sixth and two more in the seventh to increase its lead to 5-0 to end any hope of comeback and a Xaverian repeat. The Clippers won seven elimination games to win the crown a year ago. It would have needed six to get down this year. Del George, seeing young teams remaining in the tournament, said it's sometimes hard to get the same hunger from a veteran group coming off a title.

Nazareth falls in second-straight title game

BY PATRICK MCCORMACK

Nazareth went into the championship game looking to make up for last year's loss in the final.

But Monsignor Scanlan's Mario Rodriguez dashed the Kingsmen's hopes with a game-winning single in the bottom of the eighth inning. Nazareth fell 4-3 to Scanlan in the Catholic Class A championship game at St. John's University's Jack Kaiser Stadium on June 4. The Kingsmen needed to beat Scanlan twice to win the crown in the double-elimination format.

"We lost, which is unfortunate," Nazareth Coach Oggie Quiles said. "It was a great game, a lot of big plays on both teams."

Though the result was the same, the Kingsmen squad has grown since last season in the coach's eyes.

"They are caring about the game more," he said. "They took this loss harder than they took last year's loss, just because it was such a great game and they worked so hard. Last year, when we were down, we didn't fight. This year, they knew we were going to find ways to score runs."

The Crusaders opened up the scoring in the bottom of the third. With two men on, Antonio Arroyo lined out to the second baseman, who threw the ball away trying to turn a double play.

Following the error, Scanlan pitcher Ernny Ordenez

Brooklyn-native Calhoun transferring to Ohio State

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Former Christ the King star Sierra Calhoun has a new home. It just won't be any closer to her old one.

The freshman guard, who left the Duke women's basketball program in January, announced last week that she chose to transfer to Ohio State over St. John's.

Calhoun, a Brooklyn native, declined comment on her reasons for leaving the Blue Devils, but said she is pleased to get a fresh start.

"It hasn't been stressful or anything," Calhoun said. "I've just been excited to figure out where I am going to go and where I am going to start off the next chapter in my life and college career. I'm just happy to be going to Ohio State."

The former McDonald's All-American said her decision ultimately came down to a choice between Ohio State and St. John's, which was tops among the local schools recruiting her. She thanked Red Storm coach Joe Tartamella and his staff.

"I had a great relationship with the St. John's coaching staff," Calhoun said. "They did a great job recruiting me."

Calhoun said there was some allure to returning to the city to play, but she ultimately opted to join coach Kevin McGruff and a Buck

Changes needed to Catholic baseball playoffs

The Catholic baseball playoffs need a new format.

The current Class AA structure is a headache to explain, schedule and play through. It involves all 17 teams, a qualifying round, a six-team seeding round and a best-of-three series round all to get into an eight-team, double-elimination tournament. As many as 36 games can be played in a span of three weeks.

I used to enjoy this format, but it has lost a lot of its luster, with many of the games being played at homes fields and random neutral sites. Last Saturday, two games were at Iona Prep in New Rochelle and the other at St. Joseph by the Sea on the tip of Staten Island. Talk about two very different places.

The traditional triple-headers at Fordham University and St. John's University that made the tournament cohesive are no longer possible regularly. The schools are renting their fields out to other entities.

Also, why do teams like winless St. Edmund, two-win Cardinal Spellman and three-win St. Raymond not get a chance to qualify for and play in a post season they can compete in? How do we fix this?

Here is my solution:

Only teams with .500 records make the newly named Class AAA playoffs and are ranked like they are now. Traditionally, 12 or 13 teams hit that mark. That last team into the 17-team field this year was Mount St. Michael at 7-12. If there are 13 teams then the 12 and 13 seeds play a play-in game for the last spot.

The next eight teams play in a new Class AA double-elimination tournament, creating a three-tier system much like the Catholic football league. The last two to three teams do not qualify for the playoffs.

The top four teams in the Class AAA tournament get a bye into the quarterfinals. The remaining four play single-elimination first-round games. The four winners then move into an eight-team, double-elimination tournament just like the current format. The opening round of that will be scheduled so that pitchers who threw in the first round can go with their team facing elimination if need be.

This format shortens the tournament to a maximum of 20 games that can be played in two weeks. With fewer games, there are fewer days to try to get scheduled at St. John's or Fordham, giving a better chance to get games there.

There is also less of a chance of games running into proms, graduation and graduation masses. In addition, the shorter format could make it possible for schools to play for a Catholic championship, like there is in all the other of the league's sports. Most of all, the young arms we are trying to protect will throw fewer pitches.

The Class AA postseason could be completed in a similar time frame and give teams something realistic to play for in May and June.

The traditionalists will never go for this, but this updated format makes too much sense — for time, raising the importance of the regular season, competitive balance and the health of the players — not to consider it.

Fort Hamilton's Budna turns curiosity into Division I volleyball scholarship

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

In four years, competitive volleyball went from something Marlina Budna was curious about to her ticket to a college scholarship.

The Fort Hamilton senior middle hitter came into the school having only played volleyball during gym class in elementary school and recreationally here and there. Tigers volleyball coach Richard Sherry was her gym teacher freshman year and she immediately inquired about joining the team.

"I always liked it," Budna said. "I hadn't really played it in an organized way, but I always wanted to play and try it and it worked out."

During her time in Bay Ridge, Fort Hamilton became one of the elite volleyball programs in the city. It won three-straight Public School Athletic League city titles, including its first Class A crown last season. Budna is heading to Division I St. Peter's College to play next season.

To cap it off, she received the league's Wingate Award along with 49 other athletes during a ceremony at the Brooklyn Marriot on June 9. The honor is given to the top senior student-athlete in each sport.

"It's just an honor to repredrilled a double to make it 2-0. Nazareth pitcher William Navarro then settled down and struck out the next two batters.

"We told him to enjoy himself, have a little fun out there," said Quiles of Navarro. "He did a great job making big pitches when he had to."

Nazareth was able to go ahead in the fifth. With runners on second and third and two outs, Ordonez looked to ruin the Nazareth rally by striking out Agustin Quiles. The third strike, however, got by catcher Nelson Rodriguez, which allowed a run to score. He then threw the ball away on a pickoff attempt to third allowing the second run to come home. Later in the inning, a ball went past Rodriguez again allowing Quiles to score and make it 3-2.

"That's the type of game that we play," coach Quiles said. "We have a lot of team speed. We use it the best that we can and things worked out for us."

Navarro, who pitched seven innings, gave up four runs, struck out 11 and walked three. He began to cruise, retiring six-straight batters after the Scanlan two-run third.

"I just went out there, threw my pitches, hit my spots, and everything fell into place," the junior said.

The Crusaders tied the score in the bottom of the sixth on a fielder's choice by Nelson Rodriguez. Nazareth wasn't able to retake the lead, before Mario Rodriguez became the Crusaders' hero and ruined Nazareth's hopes of getting a crown. But there is always next year.

"It brings me great motivation," Navarro said. "My team and I are going to be working this entire summer. We're definitely going to be a force next year, without a doubt."

sent our borough, our school," Budna said. "We started from the bottom and then we won three city championships."

She, like the program, grew slowly. Budna admitted to not being able to serve and credited Sherry and her teammates for sticking with her. She joined the Jewish Community House volleyball program and saw her game blossom.

"It was something to do after our season ended," she said. "I wasn't just sitting at home. It expanded me as a player, to learn more and keep playing and playing harder."

Budna also drew inspiration from Fort Hamilton boy's volleyball player Eduard Nogay, who was also the girls' team's manager. He returned to the volleyball court despite a battle with cancer before finally succumbing after his 18th birthday in June 2013.

"I really want to play my best for him," Budna said. "He Brooklyn's top athletes headlined the Public School Athletic League's annual Wingate Awards dinner at the Brooklyn Marriott on June 8.

The Kings County was represented by 12 of the 48 student-athletes honored as the top seniors in each sport who shined on the field, in the community, and in the classroom in their respective sports. Former New York Jets full back Tony Richardson was the event's keynote speaker prior to handing out the hardware.

For the fall season, Erasmus Hall wide receiver Kefa Cort won for football and James Madison's Cameron Wong was the boys' bowling recipient. Dylan Jun Jie Yang of Franklin D. Roosevelt took home the award for boys' badminton and Marlena Budna of Fort Hamilton won for girls' volleyball.

"All the girls supported me and helped me out," Budna said.

South Shore girls' basketball McDonald's All-American Brianna Fraser highlighted the borough's winter season winners. Brooklyn swept the indoor track-and-field awards, with Brenessa Thompson of Medgar Evers and Richard Rose of Boys & Girls taking home the girls' and boys' indoor track honors respectively. Shaheem Trammell of Thelma Hamilton earned the award for Multiple Pathways boys' basketball.

"It feels like a brother-sister thing," Rose said of winning along side Thompson.

The spring season saw six Brooklynites bring home hardware. Midwood's Melanie Garate and Brooklyn Tech's Usman Ansari were the girls and boys handball recipients respectively. Brooklyn Tech's Dominik Tolstykh won for boy's volleyball. Fort Hamilton flag football quarterback Maria Papadokos went home a winner, along with Tyneisha Williams of South Brooklyn Community for Multiple Pathways girls' hoops.

"It's an honor to be with the program since it started," Papadokos said.

eye team that lost in the Big Ten title game and reached the second round of the NCAA tournament last season. Ohio State announced that Calhoun will redshirt the 2015-16 season while fulfilling transfer requirements and will be eligible to play in 2016-17.

"I just had a great relationship with the coaching staff and the players," Calhoun said. "I feel like it was the best fit for me."

Calhoun will head to Ohio State soon to begin summer classes. She missed a semester after abruptly leaving Duke before the team's Jan. 4 game against Wake Forest. She started all 13 games for the Blue Devils and was averaging 10.1 points, 3.8 rebounds and 1.4 assists per contest.

She led Christ the King to a 21-4 record and a Catholic High School Athletic Association Brooklyn-Queens title while averaging 24 points, 9.3 rebounds, and four steals per game as a senior. The Buckeyes are happy to add her to their roster.

"She is an outstanding person who will add a tremendous amount to our program both on and off the court," McGruff said. "She should be a terrific fit as we continue our march toward national prominence in women's college basketball."

XAVERIAN

No team has repeated since Archbishop Molloy in 1976-77.

"I can feel it with the team that it's not the same intensity as we had last year," the coach said.

Scotti said the loss would sting for a while, but the team's 15 seniors will ultimately remember the great careers they had in Bay Ridge.

"Tomorrow we are going to want to win this championship," Scotti said. "A couple weeks from now I think it will hit us."

was very dedicated to the sport. Everything volleyball related, because of him I just don't stop. I keep pushing at it."

The Tigers won the Class B city title in his honor that fall, and Budna matured into one of the city's best all-around players.

As dangerous as she is putting balls down at the net, she is equally effective in the back row. Budna finished with 17 kills and seven digs in Fort Hamilton's victory over Susan Wagner for the Class A city title this season. She compiled 415 kills and 191 blocks during her four-year career.

Sherry credits her with helping to draw girls to the program. People wanted to play with someone as talented as her and saw how she was able to excel in such a short period time. Budna and teammates Sharon Gonzalez (St. Peter's) and Alexandra (Georgetown) will all be playing Division I volleyball next fall.

"She really set a high bar for us, having people wanting to come to Fort Hamilton to play volleyball," Sherry said.

"In the past, it wasn't even thought about."

Budna's future includes playing volleyball at St. Peter's with Gonzalez. The school gave her the best chance to play at the Division I level and stay close at home. Her journey from a volleyball novice to a budding star is one Sherry believes those that come after her can learn from.

"I use her as an example," Sherry said. "She came in here not knowing how to play. Now she is a going to a Division I school."

Leticia James Warns Consumers About Classified Ads

Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble.

Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."
