Bklyn pol: Axe city's Advocate

BY KEVIN DUGGAN

A Bensonhurst councilman on Wednesday introduced a bill to eliminate the watchdog position of Public Advocate, weeks ahead of a special election to fill the seat that the current officeholder will vacate to become the state's next attorney general.

Councilman Kalman Yeger's (D-Bensonhurst) legislation proposes letting voters decide via a future ballot referendum on whether to keep the office of Public Advocate, which Attorney General-elect Letitia "Tish" James will leave in January after besting three competitors in the race to become New York State's top prosecutor earlier this month.

Yeger — the colleague of several Kings County pols who've already launched bids to replace James, including Flatbush Councilman Jumaane Williams — reportedly proposed the bill because he'd rather see the taxpayer dollars that now fund the office, which

GOLDEN WON'T GO

GOP senator refuses to concede to Dem following election upset

BY JULIANNE MCSHANE

He's Golden on! Republican State Sen. Marty Golden refuses to concede his seat to Democratic upstart Andrew Gounardes, even after the challenger declared victory in Nov. 6's General Election by winning more than 1,100 votes than the incumbent.

Golden for 16 years has represented the state's 22nd Senate District — which includes Bay Ridge, Dyker Heights, Bensonhurst, Marine Park, Gerritsen Beach, Gravesend, and parts of Sheepshead Bay, Borough Park, and Midwood — and won't give up his office until thousands of outstanding absentee ballots are counted, he said.

"We're just going to go through the paper, and I think even my opponent and everybody out there that's listening understands that every vote counts," Golden told Spectrum News New York 1 on Nov. 8. "I think everybody would want to know that their vote was counted."

By press time, data from the state Board of Election showed that Gounardes won the race with 31,168 votes to Golden's 30,039, with all precincts reporting results.

But the Kings County Board of Elections still has to count absentee ballots requested by 3,400 voters in the district, according to a rep for the state board, who added that the county board so far has received some 1,826 of those ballots — 1,053 of which came from registered Democrats, 477 from Republicans, 39 from Independents,

'This is not Afghanistan'

Beep demands voting reforms after chaotic Election Day in boro

BY JULIANNE CUBA

City and state officials must overhaul the city's archaic voting system, which on Nov. 6 failed hundreds of Brooklynites trying to cast ballots in the decisive midterm election, according to Borough President Adams, who on Nov. 7 unveiled a five-point plan to bring the outdated system into the 21st century.

"I think it's imperative to really examine what we witnessed yesterday, this is not Afghanistan, this is America," the beep said outside the Brooklyn Board of Elections. "And at the cornerstone of this country's beliefs is a right to vote, and the right to be part of the process that chooses who will represent us."

The day before, droves of voters took to social media to vent about how issues such as long lines and malfunctioning machines made it difficult to do their civic duty, and some said the challenges forced them to leave their polling places before they got the chance to make a choice.

Adams put forth five proposals to combat the reported difficulties, including a call for immediate investigatory hearings into what caused the widespread difficulties; expanding the poll-worker program and increasing the training for it; instituting early voting polices like those in more than 30 other states across the country; using technology to modernize the way New Yorkers vote; and bringing together all involved in the voting process to work on reforming the entire system.

But among them, the most crucial is allowing voters to cast their ballots ahead of election day, in order to alleviate long lines, and get ahead of any day-of issues that arise, he said.

"When you have early voting in place it allows an opportunity to iron out any kinks, gives more than one day," said Adams, who spoke standing beside local leaders who included Park Slope Assemblyman Robert Carroll, Sheepshead Bay Assemblywoman Helene Weinstein, and Bushwick Councilman Rafael Espinal.

Problems including paper jams, broken machines, and chaotic queues that formed as a result, plagued a whopping 49 polling sites across Kings County, according to the beep.

The man in charge of the city's Board of Elections, Michael Ryan, pointed a finger at a perennial nuisance that reared its head in Brooklyn that day — bad weather — but the beep said blaming Mother Nature is not a solution.

"This is inexcusable," said Adams. "It rains in New York."

At a Fort Greene polling site, for instance, all five machines stopped working at the same time, sending 200 people out the door wondering if their vote would even count, according to the head of the city's Department of Small Business Services, who was trying to cast his ballot at the neighborhood's Ingersoll Community Center.

"Now all scanners are down. This is a disaster. In 2018 and in NYC I'm embarrassed," Gregg Bishop said on Twitter.

Adams didn't go as far as Council Speaker Corey Johnson (D-Manhattan) did on Nov. 6, when he called on Ryan to resign due to the election-day fracas.

But the borough president noted that problems start at the top, and said getting to the root of the failure is more important than hastily instituting changes.

"The call for a resignation is the easiest thing to do, we had different heads of the BOE and got the same result," Adams said. "Let's do an analysis of what the problem is and let the outcome of that analysis determine what levels should be gone and what levels should stay."

READY TO RIDE: Sgt. Justin Ruiz hopped in the driver's seat of the Honda CRV he received at Fort Hamilton Army base on Nov. 8.

Vets awarded free cars at Fort Hamilton

BY JULIANNE MCSHANE

These vets got the keys to their future!

A pair of local veterans received newly refurbished cars at Fort Hamilton Army Base on Nov. 8 — three days before Veterans Day — as part of an insurance company's annual giveaway. The free wheels will go a long way toward helping one of the lucky recipients become more independent, he said.

"I'm still in shock over all this," said Sgt. Justin Ruiz, who lives on bucolic Staten Island. "By all these people helping me and having my back, they've given me more freedom."

Ruiz received a 2015 Honda CR-V as thanks for the four years he served as a laboratory technician in the U.S. Air Force in Texas, and the six years he served as a combat medic in the Army — 14 months of which he said was in Iraq — as part of Progressive Insurance's sixth-annual Keys to Progress event, which distributed more than 100 refurbished cars to vets across the country.

Ruiz also received six months of prepaid insurance for his new ride, along with approximately $2,300 in gift cards redeemable at gas stations and local eateries, he said.

The event is organized each year to give back to those men and women who have given so much to their country, according to the insurance company's New York claims manager.

"We work with a lot of local organizations trying to find the best people to really use these cars," said Michael DiPiazza. "Whether to work, volunteer, or get medical treatment, we're trying to help them."

Ruiz entered the giveaway contest after finding out about it from an advisor at the College of Staten Island, where he's studying computer science and created a group for student-veterans to bond, he said.

"We try and provide good morale and keep people moving forward," Ruiz said. "We don't want them to get stuck."

But the vet hurt his knees while serving in Iraq and, because he previously didn't own a car, relied on the city's bus system and his girlfriend, who lives in faraway New Jersey, to get him to school, he said.

"It was either staying at home, dealing with public transportation, or going on someone else's schedule, so it was really hard," Ruiz said.

And now, he can zip around on his own thanks to his new ride — which he said he was shocked to receive.

"I don't have to do things on other peoples' schedules. If I want to stay late to study or go in early, it's only on me," he said. "I was honored that someone thought of me, and I never thought I would win something like this."

Ruiz's record of service made him a worthy candidate for the car, according to DiPiazza.

"Those are the candidates we try to target, who are impacting other individuals within the community," he said.

The other Kings County recipient of a car, Petty Officer Second Class Retired Kotora Pack — who received a 2015 Nissan Rogue — spent 21 years in the U.S. Navy, and previously relied on public transit for her work with do-good groups the International Masons and Eastern Stars, which provide school supplies to needy children and wheelchairs to the elderly. She could not be reached by press time.

Mill-Marine civic leaders collect Thanksgiving food for neediest

BY KEVIN DUGGAN

They helped those in need of a warm feed.

Members of a local civic group spent the afternoon of Nov. 11 collecting car loads of donated Thanksgiving food items during their annual pre-holiday food drive.

Volunteers with the Madison-Marine-Homecrest Civic Association filled four four-wheelers with non-perishable nosh, much of which shoppers donated that day during the do-gooders' collection outside a Gerritsen Beach Key Food grocery store, according to the association's president, who said the group combined that haul with other items locals dropped in boxes it set up outside other area grocers earlier this month, which it continued to grab grub from through Nov. 15.

"In the four hours that we spent in front of Key Food, we collected as much as we do leaving out the boxes at the stores in a week," said Ed Jaworski, who has been spearheading the annual collection for the past 10 years.

And one shopper who came out to fill her pantry saved some significant space in her cart for the less fortunate, Jaworski said.

"There was this one woman who came out with a full shopping cart, and half of it was for us," he said, adding that some boxes were so stuffed after an hour of collecting that he had to drive the goods home to make more space.

The civic association also took cash donations, which it will use to buy items such as turkeys, ham, and potatoes — but also chickens, because many of the people in need don't have big enough ovens to fit the holiday's staple bird, according to Jaworski.

"We'll probably collect at least $500, which we buy turkeys and chicken with," he said.

The group donates all of its goods to Our Lady of Refuge Church on Foster and Ocean avenues, which distributes the grub via its food bank, the lines for which during the holidays Jaworski described as a sobering sight.

"When you see all the people lined up, it's sad to know that there's that kind of food shortage, even in residential neighborhoods of Brooklyn," he said.

One member of the civic group who stood outside the store asking passing customers to buy an extra can of food for the drive said she appreciated the opportunity to bring joy to her community's neediest.

"Giving the food to people that really need it just makes them so happy," said Elizabeth Morrissey.

Another do-gooder from Marine Park who dropped off a large can of tomato sauce on her way out of Key Foods said that the group's efforts make all the difference to those who can't afford to put a full Thanksgiving feast on their tables themselves each holiday.

"I think it's a very helpful and generous thing to be doing," said Maria, who declined to give her last name.

And the annual drive doesn't only raise the amount of food available to those in need — it also raises awareness about the sheer number of locals who are down on their luck during the season, Jaworski said.

"It shows that people are aware of those in need of food and that they are very generous," he said.

Bay man convicted for tormenting teen over biz squabble

DA: Guy threatened, beat victim who started a business that competed with his cousin's

BY KEVIN DUGGAN

A Sheepshead Bay man faces up to 20 years in prison after a jury in federal court on Nov. 6 convicted him for extorting and attacking a 19-year-old business competitor.

Mark Krivoi kidnapped and violently shook down his victim after he started a cleaning business that competed with Krivoi's cousin's power-washing operation, according to the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, who prosecuted the case.

"As found by the jury, Krivoi threatened and beat the young man simply for starting a competing business," said Richard Donoghue.

Krivoi, also known as "Igor," and his cousin conspired to kidnap the teen after he left the power-washing business to start his own outfit, threatening him by telling him he could not set up shop in the borough, and demanding a meeting to resolve the issue, according to the attorney's office.

The two met the victim and drove him to a secluded spot in Sheepshead Bay where the cousin held him at knifepoint and warned him that Krivoi was a "soldier" in Brava, a local motorcycle gang that's name means "brotherhood" in Russian, according to authorities.

The cousin then demanded $10,000 from the victim, and when he said he couldn't pay up, told Krivoi "go" in Russian, and he punched the teen repeatedly, knocking him to the ground, and threatened to kill and bury him on the spot, court documents read.

The victim gave in and said he would pay $5,000, and later he con-

Suspect cuffed after boy found abandoned

BY JULIANNE MCSHANE

Cops arrested a suspect after passersby reported spotting an abandoned baby boy at a Prospect-Lefferts Gardens construction site on Tuesday.

The big-hearted tipsters told police they spotted the infant alone at the New York Avenue worksite near Lenox Road around 8:20 am, according to Police Department spokeswoman Sgt. Jessica McRorie, who said officers then recovered the child.

McRorie, however, did not reply to multiple inquiries about who abandoned the boy, and whom officers cuffed in relation to the incident, or what charges they issued.

But the New York Daily News reported the child's mother left him at the site, where she allegedly arrived without notice and started yelling and cursing at workers before collapsing on the ground. The mom fled the scene when she heard the passersby call the cops, and officers later arrested her a block away from the construction site, according to the Daily News report, which cites law-enforcement sources.

Paramedics transported the boy to Kings County Hospital, according to McRorie, who said he showed no visible injuries or obvious signs of trauma.

Officers brought his mother to the same hospital's psychiatric wing following her arrest, according to the Daily News report.

But McRorie did not reply to questions regarding her status, and said authorities' investigation into the incident is ongoing.

The victim told police that the shyster called his home between Avenues H and I at noon impersonating a tax agent and threatened the victim with prison if he did not pay the tax revenue service for money he supposedly owed.

The victim bought gift cards while on the phone with the fraud and gave him information to retrieve payments from the cards, realizing the lie later, cops said.

Midnight marauder

A bandit looted a woman's car parked on E. 59th Street on Nov. 7.

The victim told police she left her vehicle between Avenues L and M at midnight and returned the next day at 7:50 am to find someone had rummaged through and stole her bank card, cash, and car registration.

Brutal brawl

Cops cuffed one out of three men who they say attacked two men on Brightwater Court on Nov. 11.

The victim told police he was sitting in his car at Brighton Sixth Street at 4:20 am when his cousin came running with three men in pursuit.

He got out of his car to help when the arrested man allegedly punched him in the face, cops said.

Police said the same guy then punched the victim's cousin, who fell to the ground, and then kicked him in the face and took off his leather jacket.

The second suspect went through the cousin's pants while he was on the ground unconscious and bleeding from his face, according to the police report. This same suspect was also wielding a broken glass bottle in his hand, and threatened the victim with it, cops said.

A third suspect also punched the cousin and appeared to have a sharp object in his hand, according to cops.

The second and third suspects fled towards Riegelmann Boardwalk while cops arrested the first, according to the authorities.

Paramedics took the cousin to Lutheran Hospital for evaluation, cops said.

Face time

A lout threatened a man with a knife and punched him in the face in a botched robbery attempt on Benson Avenue on Nov. 5.

The villain approached the man around 10:30 pm at Bay 16th Street, where he flashed a blade and told the man to "give me everything you have."

When the man refused, the brute punched in the face twice before fleeing on foot, on Benson Avenue towards Bay 17th Street, and then towards Rutherford Place.

Sugar high

A thief stole 13 candy bars from an 86th Street store on Nov. 7 and punched and pushed an employee who tried to stop him.

The theft occurred at the store near Bay 40th Street around 8:20 am, and the scoundrel fled on foot towards Stillwell Avenue, cops said.

Petty cash

Three teens pushed a man to the ground and threatened to kill him before stealing $20 and his phone on Cropsey Avenue on Nov. 10.

The incident occurred at Bay 20th Street around noon, when the perps pushed the man to the ground and told him "give me your things or I will kill you," cops said.

The teens then grabbed the man's goods and fled on foot in an unknown direction, police said.

Special delivery

A perp broke into a delivery man's truck parked on 18th Avenue on Nov. 10 and stole $7,000.

The no-goodnik entered the truck parked between 85th and 86th streets through the unlocked passenger side door around 2:40 pm and stole a plastic bag with the cash inside, according to authorities. The baddie fled on foot down 18th Avenue towards Benson Avenue, police said.

Drank and drove

Four good-for-nothings stole a 12-pack of beer from a Cropsey Avenue store on Nov. 11, with one of the perps threatening to hit an employee with a bat and also shoot him.

Officers said the louts stole the brewskies from the store near 20th Avenue just after 4:15 pm, and got into a white Lexus parked outside. But when an employee followed the men to the car and asked them to pay up, one of the brutes threatened to hit him with the bat and claimed to have a gun that he would use to shoot him, according to the report.

The foursome then fled on 20th Avenue towards Shore Parkway, police said.

Work buddy

Cops arrested a man for allegedly beating a colleague on Seventh Avenue on Nov. 11.

The victim told police he was arguing with his co-worker near 60th Street at 10:52 pm, when the guy picked up a metal baseball bat and smacked him with it, busting up his left leg, before taking the slugger to his car and smashing that up, too.

Police later showed up, and cuffed the suspect for felony assault.

Teen terrors

Police cuffed two teens for allegedly beating and robbing a woman on 50th Street on Nov. 10.

The victim told police that the kid suspects, ages 14 and 16, jumped her between Seventh and Eighth avenues at 7:30 pm, punching her in the face, before taking her purse and jacket. Cops busted both kids that day for felony robbery.

Gun nut

Officers arrested a man for alleged possession of an illegal firearm on Eighth Avenue on Nov. 10.

The arresting officer claimed he spotted the suspect near 48th Street with a nine millimeter Ruger pistol at 2:55 pm, and, upon searching the man, discovered the pistol loaded up with 17 rounds of ammo, in addition to a bag of pot stuffed into his pants, according to the police report.

Three versus one

Police busted three men for allegedly beating and robbing a man on Sixth Avenue on Nov. 10.

The victim told police he was arguing with the suspects near 49th Street at 2:30 am, when the trio laid a beatdown on him, before nabbing his Samsung smartphone.

The suspects fled afterwards, but the victim joined police on a search of the area, and managed to point out his attackers, who were promptly cuffed for felony robbery, cops said.

Foursome steals $100K from M'Beach man's bank account

BY KEVIN DUGGAN

Four scammers withdrew roughly $100,000 from a Manhattan Beach man's bank account in one day by cashing bogus checks at five banks across the city, police said.

The crooks, within the span of one hour on July 11, cashed 17 fraudulent checks at TD Bank branches in Manhattan and Staten Island to collect the illicit money, according to cops.

One suspect, whom police said is between 40- and 50-years-old, withdrew cash from a Staten Island branch at 2:50 pm.

The second suspected swindler, whom cops said is between 30- and 40-years-old, hit up the same branch for more money at 3:18 pm after scamming another bank on The Rock at 2:39 pm.

The third con artist, whom officials said is in 20s, swindled two Manhattan banks less than 10 blocks from each other around 3:16 pm, police said.

And the fourth nogoodnik claimed his bogus bounty — while smiling for a security camera, footage shows — at another branch on the distant isle at 3:15 pm, authorities said.

The victim didn't learn about the thefts until roughly two weeks later, when his bank alerted him to possible fraudulent activity on July 23, according to cops.

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to call Crime Stoppers at (800) 577-8477. The public can also submit tips by logging onto the Crime Stoppers website at www.nypdcrimestoppers.com or by texting tips to 274637 (CRIMES) then entering TIP577. All tips are confidential.

CRIMINALS: Police are hunting for these four men, who they said entered five TD Bank branches in Manhattan and Staten Island within the span of one hour on July 11 and cashed fraudulent checks to withdraw money from a Manhattan Beach man's bank account. NYPD

Sunset Park hospital's new video game helps stroke victims recover

BY COLIN MIXSON

This treatment is next level!

A Sunset Park medical center is using new video-game technology to help stroke survivors and victims of other brain injuries regain motor function, a treatment one hospital honcho called effective — and fun.

“There was a boredom factor to try and get a person to cooperate through the whole treatment,” said Vincent Cavallaro, NYU Langone Hospital-Brooklyn's vice president of neurology and rehabilitation. “This is much more engaging.”

But patients at the 55th Street hospital between First and Second avenues don't play with your run-of-the-mill Nintendo controller.

Instead, they guide digital avatars — including cartoon go-kart racers in a game similar to Mario Kart — using a motorized machine that challenges them to keep their balance while helping their recovering brains develop new ways to communicate with their bodies.

And the machine, called Kore Balance, isn't just loaded with the go-karting program. It features a variety of games that also includes one in which patients guide a penguin as it slides down a ski slope, which allows them to track their progress and even play against others in recovery, according to another hospital employee.

“You get to compete against yourself, and other patients as well,” said Kara Nizolek, who directs rehabilitation at the hospital.

The Kore Balance contraption is the latest in the medical center's fleet of video-game-like devices that assist those recuperating, which also include a sensor-equipped glove and corresponding program that helps fine tune motor skills by allowing patients to play music by making various gestures with their hands, and a joystick with a weighted support that allows people who can only partially move their arms to improve their range of motion.

Those devices have proven extremely effective in aiding recovery over the years, according to Nizolek, who said video-game-assisted rehabilitation is no longer the future, but the present.

“This is the new hot topic,” she said. “Virtual reality and robotic interventions are seen as best practices.”

Refugee-turned-Ridgite helps others resettle in boro

BY JULIANNE MCSHANE

An Iraqi refugee who fled death threats in his homeland now helps other refugees begin their new lives in Kings County.

Amed Alfaraji said his own experience as a refugee in America motivates him to help other people resettle in his role as the director of community outreach for the Downtown Arab American Family Support Center.

"I am a proud refugee, and a proud American, so I want to pay back to help other people," said Alfaraji, who lives in Bay Ridge and said he received his American citizenship this past March.

Alfaraji currently works with about 70 refugee families and 300 refugees in total, most of whom are from Syria and settled throughout Kings County, and the distant lands of New Jersey and upstate New York. He helps them secure green cards, work authorizations, and jobs, along with helping them navigate the linguistic and cultural challenges that come with living in a new country, he said.

"I try to educate them, because it's a different culture — some families have [culture] shock," he said. "Life here is free — they have to understand that. You have the right to speech, you have the right to everything."

The refugee-turned-Ridgite originally hails from Baghdad, where, in 2004, he worked with the U.S. Army as an Arabic interpreter, he said. But Alfaraji abandoned his post after he received three death threats in one month, adding that the last threat came in the form of a bullet he received in the mail accompanied by verses from the Quran, the Islamic holy book. Three of his friends who worked as interpreters were killed the following year, and one went missing, he said, adding that Iraqi insurgents were murdering translators, whom they viewed as collaborating with the U.S.

"They were targeting interpreters," he said.

Alfaraji quit his job and fled to Syria with his pregnant wife, Bana al-Ani, in 2006, he said. The pair set up a business translating legal documents from Arabic to English in Syria's capital city of Damascus, where al-Ani gave birth to the couple's daughter, Asal, Alfaraji said.

The family fled to Egypt in 2008, and Alfaraji applied for asylum in the U.S. the following year, he said.

In 2012, the family finally arrived in the U.S., where they stayed with a host in Manhattan until finding their Ridge home, according to Alfaraji, who added that he spent the next three months working 14-hour shifts as a dishwasher six days a week. He earned only $250 a week, he said, and considered bringing his family back to Iraq, but decided to stay when he realized he could use his English-speaking skills to help other refugees.

"I wanted to go back, but I knew the language. I was thinking of the other refugees who don't know the language, and they are isolated," he said. "That convinced me to help people and to do my best."

By the end of his first year in the U.S., however, Alfaraji got a job at the Arab American Family Support Center, working as a front desk administrator. The following year, the couple welcomed a newborn son, Adam, and Alfaraji was promoted to operations officer and then operations manager, helping to plan events and oversee administrative tasks. And last year, he was promoted to his current post, where he began working directly with refugees, he said.

One Syrian refugee who fled persecution for being gay said Alfaraji helped him find a job and apply for medical insurance and food stamps, adding that the outreach director's accepting nature and experience as a refugee help make him an invaluable resource for others fleeing their homelands for Kings County.

"As a caseworker, he has an open mind, so he accepts that I'm gay and started to help me," said Lutfi Alhasani, who arrived in the U.S. in 2016 and now lives in the Bronx. "He tells me a lot about life here ... he knows how you come from war to another war. He knows your question and he already has an answer."

Alfaraji said he hopes to continue helping refugees and representing the Arab communities throughout the borough, work he began earlier this year when the beep named him a Brooklyn Ambassador — a role in which he acts as a liaison between Borough Hall and local Arab communities — and a member of the newly formed Brooklyn Complete Count Committee, which encourages greater participation in the 2020 Census.

The Ridgite said he cares most about improving others' lives — in Brooklyn and beyond.

"I love helping people," he said.

D'town Macy's unveils new look

BY JULIANNE CUBA

Macy's bigwigs on Nov. 9 unveiled their newly remodeled location inside the historic Downtown buildings once home to Brooklyn's beloved homegrown department store Abraham and Straus.

The retailer's sleek new look followed three years of renovations that shoppers watched unfold with baited breath because the store stayed open throughout the makeover, according to its manager.

"We operated in less space, it was the only way we were able to stay open," said Kizzie Tunson.

Contractors in 2015 broke ground on the job that required reconfiguring many of the store's floors, which stretch across two adjoined Fulton Street buildings, a four-story, 1870s-era cast-iron structure, and a nine-story, 1930-built Art Deco tower next door.

The work required getting rid of office spaces on many of the floors in order to create open spaces that customers could easily move through, according to Tunson.

"There used to be all kinds of executive offices," she said.

Reworking the store's shoppable space, which Tunson said used to occupy eight levels of what she called "half floors," resulted in a shrunken retailer with five distinct levels: a basement with furniture and home goods, a first floor with accessories and makeup, a second floor with men's clothes, a third floor with women's clothes, and a fourth floor with children's clothes.

Workers also knocked down the retailer's old escalators and rebuilt new ones in the center of the store, to make going up and down more convenient for patrons, Tunson said.

"The escalators are all new," she said. "They are right in the middle of the store, as opposed to where they used to be in the corner."

This reporter did not spot the antique ornate elevators that date back to the location's A&S days on her pre-opening-day tour, and a rep for Macy's did not immediately respond to a request about whether those also still shuttle shoppers around the store.

The makeover made room for some new brands among the store's products, too, including fashion labels

DKNY and Michael Kors, and makeup companies Kiehl's, Mac, and Benefit Cosmetics, with the latter staffing two licensed aestheticians on site who can tweeze customers' eyebrows, Tunson said.

Last month, Macy's staff started knocking down the walls that cordoned off spaces under renovation, razing the last one last week, according to the manager.

"Every week we dropped a wall," Tunson said.

The scaffolding outside the Fulton Street department store — a local eyesore since the job kicked off — will likely stay up until some time next year, however, due to builder Tishman Speyer's ongoing transformation of the 1870s-era building Macy's occupies, which the builder bought along with the department store's graffiti-covered Hoyt Street parking garage in 2015 in a deal that helped fund the recent renovations.

The Manhattan-based firm is erecting a 51-story high-rise filled with 480 condominiums on the site of the old garage, which it hopes to open in 2020, and finishing work on the 14-story tower it is building on the site of the 1870s building, the bottom four levels of which incorporate Macy's new above-ground floors, and the top 10 levels of which will contain office space the company hopes to debut next year.

Beep gifts actor Morgan with key to Bklyn for birthday

Happy birthday, Tracy!

Borough President Adams gifted Brooklyn-bred comedian Tracy Morgan with a ceremonial key to the Borough of Kings to celebrate the funny man's 50th birthday on Nov. 9.

The foot-long, gold key to Brooklyn is an honor that Adams said rivals the star bearing Morgan's name that folks in faraway Los Angeles installed in a sidewalk as part of the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

"Yes he has his Hollywood star, but that's for the West Coast. This is about the East Coast, and you can't say East Coast without Brooklyn, the third-largest city in America," said Adams, offhandedly claiming Kings County outgrew Chicago as the country's third-largest city — an assertion that publicly available U.S. Census data does not support.

The key also recognizes Morgan's work on television series "The Last O.G." — which he filmed throughout the borough — and "30 Rock," as well as his help in refurbishing public basketball courts in Bedford-Stuyvesant, where he grew up, and other neighborhoods as part of a joint effort with Adams and bigwigs at

Turner Broadcasting System, the network that airs "The Last O.G."

The beep referenced another Brooklyn-born-and-bred icon, rapper Christopher "Biggie Smalls" Wallace — who is set to get a Clinton Hill street named after him and served as the inspiration for new Brooklyn Nets uniforms — in commending Morgan's love for his hometown.

"As Biggie would say, he knows how to spread love the Brooklyn way," Adams said.

Other notable attendees at the Borough Hall ceremony included actor and rapper Clifford Smith, known by his stage name Method Man.

Morgan choked back tears while accepting the honor, saying the traumatic 2014 car crash in New Jersey that seriously injured him and killed another man inspired him to further connect with his roots, before delivering a punch line that made the crowd howl.

"I wanted to know who

ALL SMILES: United Healthcare employees told locals about the company's offerings in Brooklyn at the event.

Locals learn healthy living at networking event

BY BRIANNA KUDISCH
This event united Kings County!

Health-conscious Brooklynites hobnobbed at a swanky Downtown hotel on Nov. 7 during a networking session where they mixed, mingled, and learned more about the resources that host United Healthcare offers in the borough, according to a company employee.

"We wanted people to see what United Healthcare offers our community," said Manuel Quezada. "All the different types of services."

Attendees who came out to Flatbush Avenue Extension's Tillary Hotel for the event enjoyed a spread of refreshments — including a free continental breakfast of pastries, sliced fruits, muffins, and smoothies — while some had their portrait drawn by an on-site caricaturist, and others relaxed by getting hand massages and manicures.

United Healthcare leaders also doled out three community grants totalling $5,000 at the meet-and-greet, which featured an appearance by the firm's furry mascot, Dr.

Health E. Hound, who showed up to promote the virtues of a balanced diet.

Guests walked away with goody-stuffed gift bags, whose swag included duffel bags and coffee mugs, according to Quezada, who called the day a success.

Iconic Dumbo vista imperiled!

New towers will ruin nabe's view of Empire State Building framed by bridge, locals say

BY JULIANNE CUBA

It's a view about to be killed!

A quartet of towers poised to rise across the river from Dumbo in Manhattan will block Washington Street's iconic view of the Empire State Building framed by the Manhattan Bridge, locals fear.

"This would be a travesty," said Kevin McAuley, who lives in the neighborhood. "It'll go up and then it's irreversible — people don't think through the consequences."

A foursome of builders wants to erect the 80-, 69-, 63-, and 62-story high-rises in the outer borough on the bank of the East River in a massive development project that needs approval from the City Planning Commission, but isn't required to formally go before the community or Council as part of the lengthy Uniform Land Use Review Procedure.

Manhattanites have protested the project for months, charging the towers would kick out long-term residents, speed up gentrification, and wreak havoc in the neighborhood.

SEE IT NOW: The Empire State Building framed through the Manhattan Bridge in Dumbo.

But locals argue the development's biggest casualty will be felt in Dumbo, where its 69- and 62-story towers that together recall a U-shape structure will likely block the view of the 102-story Art

Deco skyscraper from the corner of Washington and Water streets, according to a bigwig from cultural-advocacy group the Municipal Art Society, who referenced internal renderings the group created that superimposes the proposed high-rises over the current skyline, showing how they may block the view.

"The sort of U-shaped development would be seen from the spot squarely behind the bridge," said Tara Kelly. "Based on that model, it would be pretty much in that line with the Empire State Building."

The historic, Belgian block street is known for attracting newlyweds and other visitors from around the city and world who want to photograph special moments with the backdrop of the Empire State Building through the Manhattan Bridge's arched supports — and it would be a shame for the city to destroy that view, according to a 50-year Washington Street resident.

"It's become a tourist attraction like the Colosseum, people come from all over the world and stand there and take pictures," said Richard Mauro. "It's embedded in my DNA."

How future developments affect such picturesque streets or so-called "view sheds" is an issue that does not get enough attention from officials as projects snake their way through various approval processes, but vistas are as important to protect as physical buildings or neighborhoods, according to the head honcho of private preservationist group the Historic Districts Council.

And the city should think twice before green-lighting the massive Manhattan development — especially because the only other protected view of the Manhattan skyline in Kings County, from the Brooklyn Heights Promenade, may also change forever if officials move forward with plans to destroy and rebuild the walkway as part of their looming repairs to the Brooklyn-Queens Expressway's triple cantilever, the preservationist said.

"The one place in New York City where the views are protected is from the Brooklyn Heights Promenade, which they are now trying to destroy. We don't have protected views," said Simeon Bankoff. "Take a picture, it lasts longer."

There are many traits that make Dumbo special — including its beloved Belgian blocks, which the city is controversially restoring and replacing in order to make neighborhood streets more accessible — but few provide as singular a sense of place as the Washington Street view, Bankoff said.

"The framing of the views of the waterfront, underneath the Manhattan Bridge particularly, and down the street, do add to the district," he said.

Slope kids decorate bags used to bring holiday meals to the sick

BY COLIN MIXSON

These kids have Thanksgiving in the bag!

Students at a Park Slope school on Nov. 8 drew crayon turkeys, rainbows, and other sweet sentiments on paper bags that will be stuffed with free Thanksgiving meals for New Yorkers with debilitating illnesses, whom the kids hope will enjoy the food as much as its charming packaging.

"It made me happy doing this thing for somebody who is sick and can't go shopping, or make food, and who can't do many things," said 9-year-old Andrew, who sketched a fuzzy bunny, a pumpkin with a hat, and the head of a bear — whose body, he claims, he forgot to draw.

The bags decorated by the fourth graders at PS 107 are part of a whopping 4,000-plus that students citywide are customizing between now and Turkey Day, when do-good group God's Love We Deliver will use them to deliver some of the 1.8-million annual meals it brings to folks battling such illnesses as HIV, cancer, and multiple sclerosis, who cannot shop for or prepare food themselves.

Kids at the Eighth Avenue elementary school spent about an hour doodling on as many bags as they wanted, with one young lady turning out six paper pouches, including one with a rainbow over a dancing turkey and the proclamation "I love rainbows."

Her inspiration, she said,

BAGGED IT: Kids at PS 107 decorated delivery bags for Thanksgiving meals that do-good group God's Love We Deliver will prepare for sick New Yorkers. Photo by Trey Pentecost was the sheer joy the brightly colored bags will bring those who receive them.

"I thought about how their faces will look when they see it," said 9-year-old Aliyah.

And recipients really do love the youngsters' work, according to a God's Love We Deliver spokesman, who said its Thanksgiving-meal delivery is one of the group's most popular, in large part due to the festive packaging.

"Our clients really, really appreciate it," said Emmett Findley. "It's a full Thanksgiving feast, with turkey, gravy, pumpkin bisque, and apple crisp, and to have that in these bags is special for them."

37 from Conservatives, three from Green Party members, two from Working Families Party members, and 213 from voters not registered with any party.

Voters' party affiliations, however, do not necessarily indicate their vote, since they can select any candidate in the General Elections, state-board rep Cheryl Crouser said.

The county board was accepting absentee ballots through Nov. 13, and officials began counting them the next day, Crouser said. The county board has until Dec. 3 to finish its count of the overall votes, and the state board must certify the results by Dec. 14, she said.

Golden campaign spokesman Michael Tobman claimed that votes from seven ballot scanners still have to be counted, too, but a spokeswoman for the city Board of Elections could not confirm the number of scanned votes left to be counted.

The county board began an audit of a random selection of the borough's scanners on Nov. 9 as part of the standard post-election certification process.

Gounardes, for his part, is confident in the victory he already declared, and believes the remaining ballots won't affect his planned trip to Albany when the state Senate begins its next session in January, according to a rep.

"When every vote is counted, we are comfortable with our margins and look forward to serving the residents of District 22," said Dara Adams.

ADVOCATE

the city created in 1993, spent elsewhere.

"This is an experiment that's literally been going on for about 30 years now, and I think it's run its course," the councilman told website Patch on Monday.

The Public Advocate is meant to serve as a check to city officials — such as when James, a former Fort Greene councilwoman, demanded the Landmarks Preservation Commission rescind its vote approving a controversial makeover of the neighborhood's eponymous park last year. The officeholder can introduce legislation before Council, and participate in debates on bills, but cannot vote on them, according to the city charter.

James, whom voters re-elected to a second four-year term last year, begins her new role as Attorney General on Jan. 1, after which the city charter requires Mayor DeBlasio to hold a special election to fill her seat no sooner than 45 days later.

The office of Public Advocate cannot be eliminated through legislation, however, which is why Yeger's bill would put it up for a vote on a future ballot, according to his spokesman Jay Ackerman, who said there is no definitive timeline for when a referendum would appear should the bill pass.

Ackerman said that theoretically there could be a vote as early as November 2019, but that a referendum would more likely appear on the November 2020 general election ballot, meaning that whomever is elected to replace James will still serve in the office for a few years.

The city allocated some $3.6 million of its total $1.2-billion budget to fund the office for its current fiscal year, according to records, which show James took home a salary of just more than $184,000.

And James isn't the only Public Advocate who has used the role as a stepping stone to higher office — Mayor DeBlasio held the position before voters elected him the city's top pol in 2013, and the inaugural officeholder, former Public Advocate Mark Green, ran an unsuccessful 2001 mayoral campaign against Michael Bloomberg, who won the election that year.

But critics who claim the office is merely a way to collect a check while boosting one's resume are ignoring its importance, according to Williams, who said the position should be strengthened, not eliminated.

"The Public Advocate was not created to be a stepping stone, it was designed to be a watchdog and hold government accountable," he said. "It seems odd that the answer to the watchdog not being strong enough isn't to empower more, but to eliminate it."

Williams — who in September lost a primary bid to become the Democratic nominee for New York State Lieutenant Governor to incumbent Kathy Hochul, but won 6,000 more votes than Hochul within the five boroughs — is one in a group of 10 likely candidates to succeed James.

That group includes other Brooklyn electeds such as Councilmen Robert Cornegy (D-Bedford-Stuyvesant) and Rafael Espinal (D-Bushwick), who with Williams spoke to voters at a Monday forum for Public Advocate hopefuls hosted by advocacy group the Progressive Action Network, whose leaders endorsed the Flatbush pol following the event.

Delightfully appealing home in Gravesend

A three-bedroom in desirable family-friendly neighborhood

BEN BAY REALTY

It's a charming house with big-city amenities.

This week's Home of the Week at 1921 W. 13th St. in Gravesend is an endearing detached, three-bedroom, two-bath home on a 2,800 foot lot selling for $1,259,000.

When you enter the lovely open-concept, completely updated house, you will be pleasantly surprised. The home has a spacious open living room with porcelain-tiled floors, where light floods in through the oversized bay window — and its own private drive, a rarity in the borough! Homebuyers will also appreciate:

- Two-car garage
- Fully renovated
- Recessed lighting throughout
- Custom kitchen with granite countertops and glass mosaic backsplash
- Open floor plan

BEN BAY REALTY

This three-bedroom, two-bath home sits on a quiet tree-lined corridor not far from all the city's amenities.

- Finished basement with private side entrance
- This home couldn't be better for those looking to live on a quiet street, while not compromising on the best amenities the city has to offer.

In the residential neighborhood of Gravesend, you'll feel at home in one of Brooklyn's finest neighborhoods.

The tree-lined corridor of W. 13th Street is a quiet refuge in a dynamic, yet, grounded community of Southern Brooklyn.

Located within a less than 10-minute walk to the D and N subway lines and just around the corner from the B4 bus, this property couldn't be better connected to mass transit.

The bustling thoroughfares of Stillwell Avenue and 86th Street are just around the corner with all their stores, restaurants, and cafes — yet far enough to keep away the noise.

Looking for some green space and recreation? How about Scarangella Park and Lafayette Playground, both only an eight-minute walk away.

Don't miss this unique opportunity!

Ben Bay Realty, (718) 504-6442.

Boro honors Korean War veterans

BY JULIANNE CUBA

It was a salute to their service.

Brooklynites honored two dozen local veterans of the Korean War during a ceremony near a Downtown monument memorializing the conflict.

The group's Nov. 8 tribute at Cadman Plaza Park's Korean War Veterans Plaza provided a moving start to the borough's many Veterans Day remembrances days before the official holiday on Nov. 11, according to an organizer.

"It was amazing, incredible," said Toba Potosky, the president of green-space steward the Cadman Park Conservancy, who has staged the annual ceremony for the past five years.

Local pols — including Borough President Adams, Downtown Councilman Stephen Levin and state Sen. Marty Golden (R-Bay Ridge), who on Nov. 6 lost his seat of 16 years to Democrat Andrew Gouardes, but has yet to concede — joined veterans and their family and friends to honor the heroes, and to present 25 plaques to 25 men and women who served during the 1950–53 war between North and South Korea, in which United States troops fought alongside the South Koreans.

One honoree said the best part of the day was when his pals told him he didn't look a day older than when he first put on his military uniform decades ago.

"I saw a lot of people that I know and everybody said to me, 'For a guy that had a stroke you look very well,'" said Brighton Beach resident Jerome "Jerry" Forman, a Marine Corps veteran stationed in North Carolina during the war, who said he was never deployed.

The yearly tribute stands out among the borough's Veterans Day events because the Korean War doesn't always get as much recognition as other conflicts, but its vets made the same sacrifices — and deserve the same honors, according to Potosky.

"Often times the Korean War is overlooked," he said.

Coney nurse leading the charge

CONEY ISLAND

Let's hear it for Manjinder Kaur, a registered nurse at NYC Health + Hospitals/Coney Island who was honored in NYC Health + Hospital's annual Nursing Excellence Awards celebration. Kaur received the Excellence in Advancing and Leading the Profession award for her role in improving the patient experience at the medical center.

"The challenge of making our healthcare system safer is my number one goal, and nurses are the key stakeholders in accomplishing this goal," said Kaur.

Kaur, who has more than 12 years of service at the hospital, has taken the lead in implementing several projects aimed at improving patient safety and standards of care. She reduced patient wait-times for an EKG from nearly an hour to nine minutes, increased Press Ganey scores for Emergency Department nursing by 14 percent, improved Bar Code Medication Administration compliance, and oversaw a successful transition to an electronic medical record system during a three-month Emergency Department plan.

Doctor in the making

Congrats to Brooklynite Krizha Adona, a physical therapy student at University of the Sciences in Philadelphia who received a white coat at the Physical Therapy White Coat Ceremony on Sept. 8.

The ceremony is an annual rite of passage for students going into the professional phase of Doctor of Physical Therapy program, where Adona received the honor along with more than 70 of her peers who all recited the Oath of a Physical Therapist, a gesture to reinforce their commitment to working with patients compassionately and to enhancing their health and well-being.

She is now all set to continue her path on her full doctor of physical therapy degree in May 2021.

Hail to the new chief!

Schneps Community News Group is proud to announce that Park Slope Courier Deputy Editor Anthony Rotunno, who joined our newsroom in America's Downtown in May 2017, is taking the reins as the Courier Life newspapers' new editor-in-chief.

WELCOME TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD: Empire State Bank's staffers and local luminaries, including Borough President Adams, celebrated the opening of the newest branch in Bensonhurst. Corazon Aguirre

Good fortune for new bank branch

BENSONHURST

Standing O welcomes Empire State Bank to Bensonhurst, the home of its newest Kings County branch, at 18th Avenue and 70th Street. The bank's commitment to the community, customer service, and technological innovation will help it serve the nabe's residents, according to its chief executive officer.

"Empire Bank is dedicated to the community," said Philip Guarnieri. "While most banks focus on technology and convenience, we believe in implementing technology in combination with personal service to connect with our neighbors and support our community."

The branch opened in September, but the bankers took a break from crunching numbers to celebrate the opening with an Oct. 30 grand opening party — complete with a ribbon cutting — with local political luminaries, including Borough President Adams and state Sen. Marty Golden (R-Bay Ridge).

To celebrate their arrival in the nabe, bank reps donated $2,000 total to two local organizations, the borough's chapter of the Asian Real Estate Association of America, and the Ben Bay Kiwanis Foundation. Guests enjoyed a Chinese Lion Dance — complete with a drum, gong, and cymbals — followed by a ceremonial blessing where team members fed the lions red envelopes for good luck to honor the nabe's Asian community.

Best wishes for Empire State Bank at its new home.

"We are thrilled to have Anthony leading our Brooklyn editorial team. His experience, vision, and passion will help us continue to improve, and be the leading source of local news across multiple platforms now and in the future," said CEO and co-publisher Joshua Schneps.

Rotunno, also previously the deputy editor of our sister publication Brooklyn Paper, will oversee the Courier Life editorial team in its weekly print and daily digital operations, with a focus on growing the latter by expanding online coverage and the papers' social-media presence in order to deliver their trusted hyper-local news to even more readers around Kings County.

"Brooklynites for decades have turned to the Courier Life newspapers for their singular coverage of issues that matter in their neighborhoods, including local politics, real-estate development, and, of course, dog-fashion shows," Rotunno said. "And I look forward to ensuring locals can find that coverage for decades to come, whether they read it in print, on our website at their desktop computer, or via Twitter on an iPhone aboard the subway."

The 32-year-old was among the trio of editors whose punny copywriting earned the Brooklyn Paper a 2017 first-

CLINTON HILL

New prez in town

Pratt Institute's new president took the helm on Nov. 2 during a festive inauguration ceremony that celebrated her leadership, experience, and commitment to diversity in education.

President Frances Bronet, who became the first architect-president to lead the prestigious institution, said as soon as she visited the Clinton Hill campus she knew it was where she was supposed to be.

"Pratt is the first place I've been where the feeling of home was almost instantaneous," Bronet said during her inauguration speech, alongside Borough President Adams and Vice President of the Board of Trustees Mike Pratt.

The prestigious institution's Soul Tigers Marching Band kicked off the ceremony with a musical procession.

During her inauguration speech, Bronet outlined her vision for the university along with her own goals as its 12th president, including expanding the institution's partnerships and collaborative work, and furthering its long-standing commitment to diversity.

Before coming to Pratt, Bronet was most recently the senior vice president and provost at the Illinois Institute of Technology, and previously served in leadership roles at the University of Oregon and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. — Julianne Cuba

And his work with reporters Julianne Cuba and Colin Mixson on Brooklyn Paper's "Blind Spots" series, which spotlights the shortfalls of the city's Vision Zero initiative, has been cited in such national publications as the New York Times and the Washington Post.

Rotunno, who lives in Bushwick, is thrilled to grow even closer to the borough he calls home by covering the stories that matter most to its readers.

"It's an opportunity of a lifetime, that also happens to be in the most-exciting borough of the greatest city in the world," he said.

Gounardes outs Golden in heated race

Democrat Andrew Gounardes scored an upset victory in a tight race against eight-term incumbent state Sen. Marty Golden on Nov. 6 (R-Bay Ridge), winning the race to represent the 22nd state Senate district, which includes Bay Ridge, Dyker Heights, Bensonhurst, Marine Park, Gerritsen Beach, Gravesend, and parts of Sheepshead Bay, Borough Park, and Midwood, by more than 1,100 votes ("Gounardes defeats Golden after tight campaign," by Julianne McShane, online Nov. 7).

The born-and-bred Ridgite won the race with 31,168 votes to Golden's 30,039, the state Board of Elections reported the following day.

But Golden refused to concede, according to his campaign spokesman, who said that the pol was waiting to make sure all votes were counted.

The race was contentious, with the candidates sparring — and sometimes screaming — over their divergent visions for the district. But on election night, Gounardes thanked Golden for his more than 20 years of public service — first as a police officer, and then as a Ridge councilman, before his 16-year reign in the upper chamber.

Readers sparred online:

Eleven polling sites across Brooklyn had issues throughout Election Day — I'd recount every ballot, especially when a candidate backed by Gillibrand and Cuomo wins! They all complained about healthcare, but forgot to tell everyone, that's why Trump tried to rid the country of Obamacare, but was voted down.

Now there's no excuses no more, Democrats control NYC, maybe they'll fix trains, housing, homeless crisis, or drug crisis, but since eight years under Cuomo and six under DeBlasio didn't get anything done, let liberals come up with more excuses, which seems to be their greatest asset.

When NYC is worse than San Francisco in two years, remember this post.

All is fine, as long as they DO NOT enact Congestion Pricing. Of course, no matter what the MTA or NYCTA says, there is absolutely nothing that would prevent these bastards from still cutting subway service — or especially bus service.

That's exactly what happened the last time there was one party of all New York state government. I'm referring to the major MTA and NYCTA service changes back in June 2010. Hey, "snowflakes," give up your Ubers and Lyfts first.

SCR
from Realityville

I wish more people lived in realityville.

Bernie from Bellevue

I know it's tough for Trumpkins to understand — the idea of a person holding two opposing ideas in his or her head at the same time is so foreign to them — but one can be a die-hard NYC liberal (like me) and still despise Bill DeBlasio.

That said, the fact that Max Rose and Gounardes and Delgado and all these other Blue candidates ousted Red candidates all over the city and state and USA? That's a cause for celebration, and might finally place a check on the racist autocrat, serial bankrupt, pathological liar, tax cheat, and lifelong con man in the White House.

That's just basic math, baby.

Benny from Park Slope

All political parties should be abolished. Continuing on this path will only continue to divide this country even further and makes us even weaker in the world arena.

We are now The Divided States of America. The land where we are not free nor brave and people vote to spite each other instead of dealing with the real issues.

Mike Huntington
from Bay Ridge

It's a shame Golden was the only politician out there that I see gave 100 percent to try to help Sandy victims out and make sure that we weren't being taken advantage by the city of New York.

Andrew did not mention once anything about Sandy and the work that is going on in the neighborhood. Never seen this guy before, so I don't know who he is. He looks like he's just interested in Bay Ridge, but he needs to go everywhere just like Marty Golden did.

We don't need somebody just sitting in the office and collecting a paycheck.

Jack
from Gerritsen Beach

There should be term limits, but failing that, a time comes for pols to simply depart, regardless of their record or popularity. It is not a lifetime Supreme Court position, and a new perspective is needed in order to better govern in changing times.

Golden was way past his expiration date, and unfortunately needed to be pushed out instead of retiring with dignity.

Billy
from Sunset Park

I'm fine with this, except for this congestion pricing. What a drag that would be. Quite honestly, most of you are just whining about nothing except for that "BOOHOO ANOTHER CANDIDATE." Get real. Also, Andrew did help during Sandy, so it would appear some of you are misinformed. I've compiled a list of things I would like to see.

1. Wheelchair accessible stations in Bay Ridge.

2. Better services for the Homeless in Bay Ridge and in other communities. (no more shelter hotel band-aids).

3. EVERYONE TO GET OVER IT AND BE NICE TO EACH OTHER.

Tony T from Bay Ridge

Actually, Andrew founded Bay Ridge Cares after Sandy and served 25,000 meals. He's been serving his community his entire life. Who cares what party he's from? The 22nd elected a good person committed to helping the community and solving problems. We are all welcome to participate.

Jake from The 22nd

Way to go Andrew!! See what happens, people, when younger and progressive voters pay attention to who their local elected officials are on off-year elections, and not just pay attention to who is in the White House?

Barry from Bay Ridge

Contract got it wrong

To the editor,

P.T. Barnum had it so right — there's a sucker born every minute. In this case, the suckers are the United Federation of Teachers membership, 87 percent of whom voted for a contract that says virtually nothing regarding class size and lack of discipline in the schools. Show the membership $10 more in salary and they will vote for anything.

Sorry for the 13 percent who voted against it but are now stuck with what it says.

Teachers are smart people, but after this vote you have to begin wondering about that.

The contract talks about having more desks in the room to accommodate the extra students. That's ridiculous. Make more classes.

This contract again proves that there should be term limits within our city unions. Unity Caucus has been the representative for UFT teachers for nearly 60 years now and its accomplishments have been to negotiate contracts that keep giving back items as the years go on. I am sure that many UFT members are unaware of the fact that their Unity leaders are collecting double pensions.

Though not teaching, the leaders get credit as if they're back in the classroom, as well as a pension paid for by the membership.

The State Attorney General's office should look into the union. They're getting away with plenty.

Never forget vets

To the editor,

I enjoy reading your pages.

My brother Roy and myself were invited to be on the Veterans Day parade on Fifth Avenue by my friend Ray Albele, who is the president of the Bay Ridge parades.

We are trying to get the WWII memorial at Cadman Plaza opened again. It was built in 1950 by Robert Moses. Marty Maher, parks commissioner, Toba Potosky, and Borough President Adams are trying to help us.

On the walls are 12,000 that gave their lives for us. Many of them we grew up with and played ball.

There are plenty of our veterans that need help. This past year, me and my brother Roy were invited on the Big Apple Flight to Washington by Brian Malter and his wife Becky that took care of the program for WWII veterans.

We got off the plane and there were about 100 small children 3- to 6-years-old to honor us. I had tears in my eyes. The kids were great.

Thank you for all the things you write about our veterans.

We had four brothers in WWII that served, only Jack and Roy are alive.

Ideal photographic locales are assured in this world of environments, which also includes an intimate private garden area, a uniquely designed water fountain, as well as a host of fine, white wrought-iron work.

Can even Paradise become better? Of course it can. And they proved that when they totally renovated the large lobby area, adding a regal touch to this space, as well.

Whether it be the wedding, engagement party or any other affair, plan it at Paradise and the bottom line will put a very big smile on your face.

Our service is top flight, with the uniformed staff a longtime part of the Paradise family. These are full-time professionals who know their business; not weekend teens learning the trade.

Add to that everything is cooked from scratch right on the premises to assure the highest in quality control.

Home-care agencies now offer specialized services

BY JOANNA R. LEEFER

Home care agencies are enhancing their services. Up until recently, these agencies provided basic care service to families with an elderly loved one who needed assistance with activities of daily living. This is beginning to change. Recently, agencies began to specialize. Many are now offering care for complex conditions such as Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease and for hospice care.

Traditionally, home-care agencies offered similar care services. They assigned home-care aides to assist frail individuals with personal activities such as dressing, toileting, mobility, bathing, and eating. The agency might enhance its services by including a geriatric care manager to the staff or by offering financial assistance, but the training and function of the home-care aides remained the same.

Before an aide is hired by an agency, she must complete a four-week certified training course that teaches her basic caring skills such as nutrition, hygiene, and safety. To differentiate themselves from other agencies, a company might promoted its services as having "the most compassionate aides," "the highest quality service," or offering "the most supportive environment." Even with these claims, the aides all get the same training required by state and federal regulations and offer the same duties.

This type of assistance is changing. Agencies are learning that not all frail seniors need the same kind of care. Organizations such as the Alzheimer's Association, CaringKind in New York City, and the Alzheimer's Foundation are now offering certification-training courses on the special needs and treatments of dementia patients.

Aides working with Alzheimer's patients are taught about the progression of this unwieldy cognitive condition. Juanita, a home-care aide caring for Monica, a patient in the mid stages of Alzheimer's disease, learned how to anticipate her client's moods. Every day in the late afternoon Monica starts pacing, becomes agitated, and confused. Sometimes she insists she must go home to cook dinner for her long-dead husband or her grown children. This behavior, called sun downing, is a common symptom of Alzheimer's disease. Juanita has learned to anticipate Monica's behavior and finds distracttions, such as playing soothing music, to calm her during these periods.

Lena, a home-care aide, was assigned to care for a patient with Parkinson's disease, a progressive nerve system disorder that affects movement. Before taking the case, Lena's home-care agency enrolled her in a Parkinson's Foundation certificate program. The program gave her an understanding of the importance of developing an exercise regime to keep her client's muscles from freezing. She learned the importance of providing medications on a strict schedule to avoid adverse reactions.

Hospice organizations now offer aides training as well. Hospice is a Medicare program that provides comfort care to patients who are not expected to live more than six months. Many home health aides admit having difficulty working with dying clients. Many do not understand the intent of hospice care and their role in making their client's final days more comfortable. The National Association of Home Care and Hospice offers a 75-hour certificate program that explains the dying process, teaches aides ways to reduce the severity of their client's symptoms, and improve their quality of life without interfering with the advancement of the disease.

More and more health associations are offering courses that teach home-care aides about difficult medical conditions. These specialized programs assist home health aides with better understanding their clients' conditions and make them more desirable caregivers. Home-care aides are still confined to offering custodial care to their frail clients, but they can now anticipate changes in their client's behavior due to specific diseases and adapt their responses to them. Home-care agencies that can differentiate themselves by promoting these specializations make their services unique and add value to potential customers.

Holiday gifts for someone with Alzheimer's

Making sure you get the perfect gift for everyone on your holiday shopping list can be tough. But shopping for someone with Alzheimer's or dementia can be even trickier. Here are some things to consider when shopping for a person who has been diagnosed and when shopping for their caregiver:

Consider their capabilities: When giving a gift to someone who has Alzheimer's, it's important to consider the disease progression, their cognitive abilities and needs. Someone in the early stage may still enjoy many of the same gifts as before the diagnosis. But someone who is in the later stage of dementia and who cannot follow directions, understand the written word, or is physically frail, will have trouble with the simplest of things, like knotting a tie, for instance.

Personalize it: Thoughtful gifts like a personalized photo album, scrapbook, or a framed collage of family and friends are great ideas. These often tap into the person's long-term memories and will undoubtedly be something they can enjoy — and who knows, it might even spark some wonderful conversation.

Music and movies: Along these same lines, consider giving a compact disc of their favorite music or perhaps making them a playlist of songs from their youth. Music has been proven to trigger positive memories in people with Alzheimer's, so this is a great way to go! If there is a movie you enjoyed together in the past, get the DVD and make a fun night out of watching it together in the comfort of their own home.

Practical and thoughtful: Gifts with everyday uses — like a comfy blanket or quilt, a warm sweater (preferably without a lot of buttons or ties), a bathrobe, or slippers — will be a big hit and something the family caregiver will appreciate as well. On the practical side, providing your friend with an account at a car service — something that the caregiver can manage — can be enormously helpful and a safe option to get them around town. And, for those in the late stage of the disease, beautiful picture books or soft stuffed animals may provide joy and comfort.

In general, try to avoid gifts that involve complicated cognitive or physical tasks. These can be stressful and outweigh the thoughtfulness of the gift. When in doubt, simple is always better.

For the caregiver

Since caregivers are often under enormous stress and are frequently exhausted, think of gifts that will give them some respite. A gift certificate for a massage or a manicure would definitely be welcomed. Consider taking the caregiver out for a nice meal so he or she can have some time to unwind, away from caregiving responsibilities. Meal services that give them the night off from cooking is another practical idea.

Sending a thoughtful note recognizing their sacrifice and caregiving efforts would also be a nice touch. But, accompanying that note with an offer to look after the person with dementia for a day in order to give the caregiver a much-needed and hard to come by rest would be considered a luxury.

Simply taking the time to show you care will go a long way with the person with dementia and the caregiver and will help them enjoy the holiday season even more!

How seniors can simplify their everyday tasks

The ability to perform everyday tasks is something many people take for granted. But as men and women approach or exceed retirement age, many may start to struggle with chores and tasks they have performed for decades.

Physical limitations are a common side effect of aging. But such limitations do not have to prove too big a hurdle for seniors to clear. In fact, there are many ways for seniors to simplify everyday tasks while maintaining their independence:

Embrace technology

Even the proudest Luddites cannot deny technology's potential to make seniors' lives easier. Seemingly simple tasks like shopping for groceries and vacuuming a home can be difficult for seniors with dwindling or limited mobility.

But seniors with Internet access in their homes can order their groceries online and then pick them up in-store or have them delivered, saving them the trouble of walking around the store. With regard to vacuuming, autonomous vacuum cleaners have removed the need to use traditional vacuum cleaners. Certain autonomous vacuums employ sensors to detect dirty spots on the floor, and these vacuums can even be programmed to clean the home while residents are out of the house.

Upgrade bathrooms

Tasks associated with personal hygiene also tend to be taken for granted until they become difficult. But a few simple bathroom alterations can help seniors safely navigate the bathrooms in their homes so they can maintain their personal hygiene without fear of injury.

Grab bars can be installed on shower walls so seniors can safely get in and out of their showers and bathtubs. Such bars are both effective and inexpensive, and some do not even require any drilling to install. Specialty grab bars, tub grips, and tub transfer benches are just a few additional products that can make bathing easier for seniors who have lost or are starting to lose some of their physical strength.

Get 'smart' on the road

Seniors who are experiencing mild difficulty driving can make getting about town that much easier by plugging their smartphones into their vehicles or making use of the various apps that have become standard in modern vehicles.

For example, the maps app on a smartphone can be connected to a car and direct seniors to their destinations, saving them the trouble of remembering all the ins and outs of how to get a particular destination. Seniors also can employ apps to help them find their vehicles should they forget exactly where they parked in crowded parking lots. Such apps can increase seniors' comfort levels on the road while helping them maintain their independence.

Downsize

Whether downsizing to a smaller home or simply downsizing a lifestyle, seniors may find that living smaller is akin to living simpler. Empty nesters may find they no longer need several bedrooms in their homes, and moving into smaller homes can reduce their daily workloads while also clearing out clutter that can make performing everyday chores more difficult.

Men and women accustomed to hustle and bustle may also find that cutting back on professional and/or personal commitments gives them more energy for everyday activities while enriching the commitments they continue to maintain.

Aging men and women can employ various strategies to simplify their lives and maintain their independence well into their golden years.

Eating right can improve quality of life

Legend states that on April 2, 1513, Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de León was the first European to discover modern-day Florida when he traveled on a quest for the mythical “Fountain of Youth.” While modern science has proven that there is no mystical fountain or body of water that can reverse or slow down the aging process, there are many steps people can take to age well and prolong their lives.

Eating the right foods is one way to age well. According to Dr. Ralph Felder, coauthor of “The Bonus Years Diet,” reversing the aging process internally is more difficult than outward cosmetic changes. But the right foods can go a long way toward increasing both life expectancy and quality of life. Those who want to employ diet to increase their life expectancy may want to start adding more of the following foods to their breakfast, lunch and dinner plates.

Broccoli, grapes, and salad: According to Health magazine, researchers have found that compounds in these three foods boast extra life-extending benefits.

Berries: In addition to their abundance of antioxidants, berries have other benefits. A 2012 study Berries and whole grains are nutritious foods that can help men and women live longer, healthier lives.

from Harvard University found that at least one serving of blueberries or two servings of strawberries each week may reduce the risk of cognitive decline in older adults.

Fruits and vegetables: Produce is good for the body because it's low in calories and high in fiber, vitamins and other nutrients. Numerous studies have indicated that diets plentiful in fruits and vegetables help people maintain a healthy weight and protect against cardiovascular disease.

Whole grains: Whole grains pack a lot of nutrition into a low-calorie food. Whole grains help protect against type 2 diabetes, and researchers at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center found study participants whose diets included plenty of whole grains and fruit cut their heart disease risk by almost half compared to those whose diets favored meat and fatty foods.

Red wine: A glass a day for women and no more than two glasses daily for men can be beneficial. Moderate consumption of red wine has been shown to slow age-related declines in cardiovascular function, according to the American Heart Association.

Fiber: Increase your fiber intake for a longer life. Research from The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition finds that the more fiber you include in your diet, the lower your risk of coronary heart disease. The daily recommendation is 25 to 35 grams.

While there may be no such thing as the fountain of youth, a healthy diet can help men and women prolong their lives.

NYP Brooklyn Methodist Hospital Helps Seniors Combat Memory Loss

Memory loss is a natural part of aging. Over time, an adult's brain changes and some aspects of cognition (thinking), such as attention and memory may deteriorate. Most people are able to adapt to these subtle changes. However, when the natural aging process of the brain is accelerated by disease, the result may be dementia, in which loss of cognition is severe enough to interfere with a person's daily functioning.

“Dementia can manifest in many forms and typically begins affecting people over the age of 65,” said Albert Ortega, PhD, neuropsychologist at NewYork-Presbyterian Brooklyn Methodist Hospital. Typical signs and symptoms of memory-related conditions can include: being less social than usual or exhibiting isolating behavior; confusing or forgetting names of familiar people, such as family members or close friends; difficulty completing important tasks, such as balancing a checkbook or making a favorite recipe; having trouble understanding or following directions or instructions; getting lost in the middle of a conversation; neglecting personal hygiene and other basic needs, or repeating the same question or statement several times.

Alzheimer's disease is the most common cause of dementia, affecting one in eight older Americans. However, Alzheimer's is not the only cause of dementia. It is not uncommon for other medical conditions to mimic memory related conditions. “Seniors can experience confusion or memory problems for a variety of reasons, such as infection, vitamin deficiencies, depression, thyroid problems or medication misuse. A thorough evaluation of each patient can help ensure that these conditions are ruled out or treated through lifestyle changes or medication,” said Dr. Ortega.

Once a physician reviews a patient's current symptoms and determines an overall risk for dementia, the next step is to schedule an appointment with a neurologist for further evaluation.

“Typically, a neurologist orders blood work, neuroimaging—such as computed tomography or magnetic resonance imaging—and a neuropsychological assessment,” Dr. Ortega said. “When a patient meets with a neuropsychologist, this specialist will determine whether cognition is what it should be, based on the patient's age. Once these elements are considered, the neurologist can determine whether dementia is present and the likely cause.”

While there is no cure for dementia, diagnosing the condition early allows specialists to treat symptoms by prescribing specific dementia medications to help maintain functioning. Other methods of managing dementia include assessing non-dementia-related medications or supplements that could be adding to the person's confused state; practicing mental exercises (especially if they involve interaction with one's environment) to strengthen the brain; or having the patient instruct someone else on how to perform a well-known task, such as preparing a favorite meal or recalling where certain items should be stored in the house.

“Staying physically and mentally active is the first step toward better brain health,” said Miran Salgado, MD, chairman of neurosciences at NYP Brooklyn Methodist. “Taking time for a daily walk or other form of exercise can help maintain memory. No matter what your age, you can take steps to boost your brainpower.”

To schedule an appointment with a physician affiliated with NYP Brooklyn Methodist Hospital, please call 718-499-2273 or visit www.nyp.org/brooklyn.

Many seniors are moving in with their adult children to help care for grandkids and provide some relief from a sagging economy.

Things to consider when building an in-law suite

Perhaps thanks to a struggling economy and an unpredictable stock market that has resulted in many retirement nest eggs being decimated, more and more adult children are welcoming their aging parents into their homes. Such living situations have led to a growth in in-law suites.

In-law suites are often created by converting a room in the house, such as the basement or even a garage, into a livable suite. Such suites can benefit elderly relatives who might have been dealt an unforeseen financial blow. But in-law suites can also benefit younger homeowners who want to see their parents more. In addition, when older men and women move in with their adult children, they can provide some necessary relief from the escalating cost of daycare.

But before building an in-law suite in their home, homeowners might want to heed the following tips:

Be certain it is legal. Making changes to your home may require a permit, particularly if your in-law suite will be an entirely new addition to your property and not just a strict room remodel. Contact your local zoning board to ensure the project is within your rights as a homeowner.

Consider the health of your in-laws when making plans. Many in-law suites are occupied by aging relatives who might not be able to get up and down stairs as easily as they used to. That makes accessibility of the suite a top priority. Typically, it's best to locate in-law suites on the first floor, so relatives won't find it difficult to get in and out of the suite.

Don't overlook privacy. Just because your parents or in-laws will be moving in doesn't mean they don't still value their privacy. Chances are your relatives will initially feel as though they are invading your space and your privacy, so be sure the suite affords adequate privacy to all members of the household. It might be best to build the suite so it has its own separate entrance from the rest of the home. The suite should also have its own full bathroom and, if possible, its own kitchen area so your in-laws can cook for themselves and entertain their own guests without feeling like a burden. A second kitchen is also something to discuss with a zoning board, as some locales prohibit having two complete kitchens in a single residence.

Tailor certain amenities to the elderly. If your in-laws are older, install certain amenities, such as grab bars in the shower and bathroom, during the initial construction so you won't have to make changes down the road. Install easy-open drawers and make sure the suite has ample lighting.

Remember to install safety features. Safety features like fire, smoke, and carbon monoxide detectors are a necessity. Make sure the alarms on each of these detectors are loud enough so elderly men and women who have hearing loss can hear them without issue. Make sure all walkways leading to the in-law suite have motion-detecting lamps at night to reduce risk of falling. Also, if the suite will be a separate building from your house, such as a converted pool house or detached garage, install an intercom system that connects with the main house so your relatives can easily reach you in case of emergency.

In-law suites are becoming more popular as a greater number of older adults are moving in with their adult children. Such suites can bring families closer together and prove beneficial for all parties involved.

Shedding pounds after 50

Losing some weight is a goal for many people, regardless of age. While youngsters and young adults might be able to get away with a few extra pounds without suffering any significant consequences, older adults carrying some extra weight might be putting their overall health at considerable risk.

Shedding weight after the age of 50 is not always easy. As a person ages, muscle mass tends to dwindle, while body fat has a tendency to increase. Since fat burns fewer calories than muscle, weight gain as a person ages is bound to happen. But that doesn't mean such weight gain is inevitable. In fact, men and women willing to make certain changes with regard to diet and exercise can shed pounds after 50 while preventing future weight gain:

Diet

Men and women need fewer calories as they age. For example, men and women in their 40s may need as many as 200 calories more per day than they will when they reach their 50s. Counting calories might seem difficult, so men and women in their 50s and older who don't think they can count calo-

A patient came to my office hoping that a new pair of glasses would help improve his blurred vision. He was experiencing vision loss for a few months without any pain and thought that it would eventually cure itself. Unfortunately, the patient had glaucoma which could not be improved with glasses.

The diagnosis of glaucoma is made when an eye-MD observes damage to the optic nerve called "cupping".

This can happen with normal eye pressure although often the eye pressure is elevated above what we consider the normal range, from 10-22. Unfortunately, this optic nerve damage has no symptoms until the vision is markedly affected and sadly by then the damage is irreversible.

2.3 million people have glaucoma in the United States. Fortunately only about 5% will end up blind at the end of their life due to early diagnosis and treatment.

Your eye-MD will perform many tests to make the diagnosis and follow your disease. The most important step a patient can take is to visit their eye MD yearly and have a dilated retinal exam which includes putting drops into your eyes in order to look at the optic nerve and the retina carefully.

While there are no known ways of preventing glaucoma, visiting your eye-MD and getting diagnosed and treated early are sure ways of preserving your vision.

ries can try to eat more low-calorie foods like fruits, vegetables, and whole grains.

Consuming fewer calories often requires changing dietary habits, not only with regard to what you're eating, but also how you're eating and even how you shop for food. Those used to dining out for lunch every day can start bringing their own lunches so they can gain greater control of their daily caloric intake. For those who find they're frequently too exhausted to cook each night, they can prepare meals in advance to have healthy, homemade meals waiting instead of always ordering takeout or delivery. When shopping for food, people should avoid doing so on an empty stomach so they're less inclined to buy unhealthy snacks.

Exercise

Exercise is another essential component to shedding pounds after 50, though men and women over 50 should always consult a physician before they begin a new exercise regimen. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention points out that regular exercise can help older men and women prevent the onset of a host of ailments, including heart disease and diabetes. In addition, it notes that regular physical activity as one ages helps muscles grow stronger, which increases the chances that an individual will be able to perform necessary daily activities without the assistance of others. Maintaining that independence into older adulthood is a goal for many men and women, and it's a goal that's far more realistic for men and women who exercise than it is for those who don't.

When coupled with a healthy, low-calorie diet, routine exercise can help men and women over 50 shed extra weight and keep the weight off once it's gone. According to the center, older adults need at least two hours and 30 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity, such as brisk walking, every week, and muscle-strengthening activities on two more days a week. These muscle-strengthening activities should work all the major muscle groups, including the legs, hips, back, abdomen, chest, shoulders, and arms. Muscle-strengthening activities include lifting weights, working out with resistance bands, exercise such as push-ups and sit-ups that use body weight for resistance, and yoga. Even gardening that involves digging and shoveling can be considered a muscle-strengthening activity.

Weight gain is often an expected side effect of aging. But men and women don't have to gain weight as they get older. Some simple dietary changes and a commitment to routine exercise is all it takes to shed weight after 50 and keep that weight off once it's gone.

Taking over: Janelle James wants to make sure the “Janelle James Comedy Festival,” happening on Dec. 4–6, keeps the same energy as Eugene Mirman’s eponymous festival. Matthew Salacuse

Janelle James Comedy Festival takes over

By Kevin Duggan

Call it by her name! The inaugural Janelle James Comedy Festival will unleash a smorgasbord of stand-up comedians and extravagant performances at the Bell House on Dec. 4–6.

The fest follows in the footsteps of the Eugene Mirman Comedy Festival, which began as a joke and grew to draw some of the biggest names in comedy to the Gowanus area during its decade-long existence, before closing with one last hurrah in 2017.

Now the baton has been passed to comedian Janelle James, who hopes to update the fest but keep the same zany spirit as the original.

“I’m trying to keep the same energy with not just stand-up but bringing in all kinds of other stuff as well,” said James.

Each night will feature one show, titled “Comedians Who Live Nearby,” “Comedians Who Said ‘Well, Who All Goin Be There?’” and “Comedians Who Said ‘Sure, I’ll Come By,’” respectively.

James teamed up with producer Caroline Creaghead, who worked on several iterations of the Eugene Mirman fest. The two have brought in some eccentric acts, including a ventriloquist, a burlesque performer, drummers, and a deejay, according to James.

“It’ll be like a mini carnival atmosphere,” she said.

James is eager to put her own stamp on the festival, making its lineup reflect New York’s diversity.

“I just wanted something in New York that is my own and has my name on it and that I can build on,” she said. “It will be blacker. You’ll have all races, all genders, musical comedy, club comics — I have all different styles of comedy in there.”

The comedian also aims for the show to bring her fans together with Mirman’s.

“I hope it’ll be a crossover of people that have been on Eugene’s shows before and don’t know me,” she said. But Mirman’s fans can rest assured that she will draw on his experience, James said.

“I feel like being able to take the torch from Eugene already lets people know what I’m going for,” she said.

Mirman, who emigrated to Massachusetts last year, will return to his old home borough for a set at the festival. He will be joined on the lineup by a host of established and new comedians, including Liza Treyger, David Cross, Mia Jackson, Judah Friedlander, and Nore Davis.

The former Park Sloper, who provides the voice of the pre-teen showbiz enthusiast Gene for the Fox animated show “Bob’s Burgers,” is currently editing a documentary about the 10-year run of his eponymous festival. He said that — like stand-up comedy itself — the success of the festival lies in its spontaneous attitude.

“It’s like trial and error, like stand-up,” Mirman said, adding that he is happy to see the festival live on under James’s name.

“She’s so funny, and it’s a joy to see the joke of a self-titled comedy festival live on and be reborn,” Mirman said.

Janelle James Comedy Festival at the Bell House [149 Seventh St., between Second and Third avenues in Gowanus, www.janellejamescomedyfestival.com]. Dec. 4 at 8 pm; Dec. 5–6 at 7:30 pm. $25 ($20 in advance).

THE MOB RULES

'Al Capone' is a good show about bad people

By Bill Roundy

This show is a straight shooter.

A sign by the entrance to the Coney Island USA stage reads: "Patrons are advised that this performance will include: cigar smoking, blank gunfire, profanity, anachronism, ethnic stereotypes, sexual situations, dramatic license, and ballistic pasta." And brother, they ain't kidding! You can dodge the flying noodles or throw them back, but there's no escaping the action onstage.

So whether or not you will enjoy Dick Zigun's new play "The Education of Al Capone, as if told by Jimmy Durante" is proportional to your willingness to join in as the actors exhort you to sing "The Whiffenpoof Song." Those who prefer the fourth wall intact should stay at home — it crumbles the moment the theater doors open, with a waitress and bartender offering "lousy pasta and warm beer" for $5 (accurate) and bantering with the audience.

He nose what's happening: Quick-witted quipster Jimmy Durante, brought marvelously back to life by Rob Romeo in a false schnoz, narrates Dick Zigun's latest production. Norman Blake

The show takes place during the summer of 1918, following 18-year-old hoodlum Al Capone (actor Will Thomaе) as his nickname changes from "Babyface" to "Scarface." He finds a job at a dive bar in Coney Island called the Harvard Inn, ruled by ruthless gangster Frankie Yale (Nikos Brisco), who schools the youngster in slinging beer and knocking heads.

Rob Romeo is delightful as the show's host, Jimmy Durante, laying the schtick on thick with a hotch-cha-cha cadence, playing enough piano to qualify the show as a mobster musical, and moving the plot forward whenever it gets slow. It's all delivered with a wink and a laugh — the vaudeville jokes are cheesy, but it's easy to get swept along and root for these charming characters.

Notable sequences include a slow-motion boxing match that shows off Thomaе's gift for exaggerated faces, and a series of quick-changes that bring actors Rob Aloï and Rita Posillico back again and again as less and less-welcome visitors to the club.

But for all those moments

Try the punch: A young Al Capone (left, played by Will Thomaе) gets a lesson from gangster Frankie Yale (Nikos Brisco) while vaudevilian Jimmy Durante narrates the fight, in a new play running in Coney Island through Nov. 25. Norman Blake of fun, there are just as many that might leave you squirming. Playwright Zigun does not let you forget that these mobsters were also monsters; innocent people get gunned down on and off stage; and the casual sexism runs deep, with underage Clara Bow (Natalie Michaels) getting groped and handed over to Capone as a reward. I cannot blame anyone who backs out, but the show does not revel in its historic accuracy, and Bow gets her own moment to fight back.

Overall, it makes for a fun evening — a look back into Coney Island history that might be accurate, but is definitely entertaining, with a cast of actors who are giving it their all.

"The Education of Al Capone, as if told by Jimmy Durante" at Coney Island USA (1208 Surf Ave. at W. 12th Street in Coney Island, www.coneyisland.com). Nov. 16–18, 23–25; Fri at 8 pm, Sat at 4 pm and 8 pm, Sun at 4 pm. $20.

Grand cold time!

By Julianne McShane

Dare to take the dip! Organizers of Coney Island's annual New Year's Day Polar Bear Plunge officially opened registration for the teeth-chattering event on Monday.

Locals willing to brave the frigid waters can now sign up through the day of the plunge, according to event co-sponsors the Alliance for Coney Island and the Coney Island Polar Bear Club, who encourage daredevils to register in advance via the club's website.

The fund-raiser benefits several local organizations including the Alliance, the New York Aquarium, Coney Island USA, and the Coney Island History Project, among others. Its organizers suggest divers donate a minimum of $25 when they sign up.

Swimmers will meet at the beach near Boardwalk and Stillwell avenues on the morning of Jan. 1, before sprinting towards the bone-chilling watery abyss in groups of 500, starting at 1 pm sharp.

The hosts recommend all plungers bring a set of warm clothes, a towel, a camera to document the moment, and old sneakers to protect their feet in the cold.

For a cold comfort Dumbo ice-cream shop will serve booze

By Julianne Cuba

Everyone screams for ice cream! And for beer!

The owners of Brooklyn ice cream shop Oddfellows launched a new store in Dumbo last month that will soon serve wine and beer along with its vegan rum-raisin and malted-peanut ice cream. For now, the cold weather has not turned away any fans of the non-alcoholic frozen dessert, said one co-owner, and the spot has been busy scooping out the oddball flavors the shop is known for.

"We're taking a cue from where we are located," said Mohan Kumar. "Opening an ice cream shop in the fall is always challenging, but there's tons of tourists, the neighborhood response is great."

The Water Street store's menu features a Dumbo-inspired sundae named "The Carousel" after the neighborhood's iconic landmark Jane's Carousel: three scoops of ice cream loaded with colorful toppings including sprinkles, cornflakes, chocolate fudge, caramel sauce, and maraschino cherries, all served on a gold spinning tray as a nod to the merry-go-round just steps away.

"It's a stone's throw away from our new shop — the perfect concept," he said.

The shop will soon offer a brand-new boozy menu, with beer, wine, and innovative concoctions that mix both — or other low-proof beverages — with ice cream, said Kumar.

"We're coming up with a lot of new and exciting things," he said. "We're sourcing wine from all over, natural wines. We're just really excited to have beer and wine at as high of a standard as we do our ice cream — and pretty cool milkshakes too, White Russian milkshakes."

The Dumbo location is still waiting for its license from the state liquor authority, but Kumar anticipates pouring boozy shakes within the next two weeks.

Oddfellows also plans to open a large factory in Bushwick early next year, where it will open a new soda fountain that will pour a full selection of booze, said Kumar.

Oddfellows Dumbo (60 Water St. between Dock and Main streets in Dumbo, www.oddfellowsnyc.com). Open daily, noon–10 pm.

WALLS OF FAME

Take a tour of Bushwick art murals

By Julianne McShane

He is taking it to the street! An art historian has started a weekend tour of Bushwick's best street art, delivering a museum-style docent's lecture on the nabe's graffiti and murals. During his Street Art Pilgrimage tours, Tony Huffman uses his graduate education to help visitors consider the painted figures as serious works of art, he said.

"As an art historian, I try to get people to think about images more critically — to stand in front of the images longer and try to parse them out, sit with the work and ask questions," said Huffman, who lives in Bushwick. "It's about trying to take that high caliber museum experience and translate that to the street."

The $30, 90-minute tours make seven stops in the neighborhood, visiting notable works of street art from both local and international artists. One of Huffman's favorites — an untitled mural of medieval figures climbing the neck of an enormous giraffe — was painted by Phlegm, a renowned British muralist at the behest of the Bushwick Collective art group. The tour guide said he delights in watching visitors try to make sense of the figures.

"It's not immediately obvious what this is referencing, what this has to do, what this is symbolizing," Huffman said. "That's what's great about street art — so much of it is rooted in figuration."

Other works were commissioned by businesses, including the outside of the Brooklyn Cider House, where Huffman's tour stops to marvel at an untitled mural featuring a robot with part of its skull removed, by Italian artist Pixel Pancho.

Huffman's must-visit site for street art aficionados is "Red Hot Summer Day," a mural depicting an astronaut trying to navigate across the surface of an alien planet, by Spanish artists Raoul and Davide Perré. The mural resonates with the neighborhood's history as a longtime home for immigrants, he said.

"There's a connection to the history of immigration in Bushwick, and the idea that new territory is kind of comparable to learning how to survive and navigate in a new environment," Huffman said.

The street-art murals are often seen as harbinger of gentrification, but Huffman wants to make the art more accessible for local residents, and he plans to launch half-price tours for locals before the end of the year, he said.

"I think it did provide a lot more enjoyment and revitalization to everyday residents of Bushwick, but then as a consequence many people are being pushed out," he said. "It's a double-edged sword."

The fine art of Bklyn weekends

By Bill Roundy

Brooklyn is getting artsy this week!

Friday night, you can run away with the circus, without leaving the borough! Enjoy dreamy scenes of carny folk, big top performances, and traveling bands projected on screens while the string quartet Ethel plays tunes inspired by the Ringling Circus archives. "Circus: Wandering City," will play Friday and Saturday nights at 7:30 pm at BAM Harvey Theater [651 Fulton St. at Ashland Place in Fort Greene, (718) 636-4100, www.bam.org. $25-$40].

You can take all weekend to explore the Park Slope Windsor

Terrace Artists' Open Studio, happening at various locations across both neighborhoods on Saturday and Sunday, from noon to 6 pm. Visit www.artspswt.com for a printable map, or pick one up at Jonathan Blum's storefront studio (285 Fifth Ave. between First and Second streets in Park Slope), where you can gawk at his playful portraits of animals and angelic figures. Or drop by Joy Makon's studio to wonder at her watercolors of buildings around Brooklyn (41 Fuller Pl. between Windsor Place and Prospect Avenue in Windsor Terrace). And if you get thirsty along your artsy journey, stop at American Cheez (444 Seventh Ave. at 15th Street in Park Slope). The bar is a sponsor of the event, and will offer happy hour specials while the Open Studio is running.

Also opening on Saturday is the latest exhibit at the Brooklyn Museum [200 Eastern Pkwy. at Washington Avenue in Prospect Heights, (718) 638-5000, www.brooklynmuseum.org, $16 suggested admission]. Slip over any time from 11 am to 6 pm for Kwang Young Chun's "Aggregations," a six-part collection of striking sculptures built out of mulberry-pulp paper from Korea, woven together to form spiky, bright blue images that look like coral reefs. The Museum is also open on Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday this coming week, so if you have family in town, it's a good spot to drop them off and let them wander!

The best reads — handpicked by some of the best Bklyn bookstores

Greenlight Bookstore's pick: "Well-Read Black Girl," edited by Glory Edim

In this collection of essential reading, Glory Edim consolidates the celebration, contemplation, and joy she fostered in her book club-turned-online community. Authors including Tayari Jones, Jesmyn Ward, and Jacqueline Woodson discuss their childhoods, their memories, their work, and the books and writers that shaped them. This anthology is an exploration of the power of literature — whether it reflects or changes the reader, how its effects morph with time, and why the perspectives it highlights matter. Through this lens, you will learn what has frustrated and inspired these extraordinarily well-read women, and be encouraged to drift into your own literary daydream.

The phrase "life is about the little things" comes to mind whenever I read a Mary Oliver poem. This collection of honest and gentle poems takes your hand and ushers you to find serenity in the stillness of nature. Her poetry serves to remind you of the sweet whimsy in simplicity, the serendipity of daily life and, ultimately, helps to heal a weary mind.

Community Bookstore's pick: "Tentacle," by Rita Indiana

The award-winning Caribbean novelist's latest confabulation offers up a vision of the post-apocalyptic near future in the vein of Margaret Atwood and Ursula K. Le Guin. Our heroine, Acilde, must travel back in time to save civilization from itself, with the help of a sentient sea anemone. A heady work of science-fiction that draws on traditional Yoruban and Voudon myth. A gem.

➤ JOB INFORMATION

Letitia James Warns Consumers About Classified Ads Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble.

Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."
