Cocoa without pier

City: Move it from Hook to Sunset Park

A cocoa-filled freighter — unable to unload its cargo because of a dispute between the Port Authority and the operators of Brooklyn’s last working pier — has been ordered to drop anchor and unload its treasures at another site while the parties work out a deal.

The decision made a two-week-ultimate deadline pass without the 250,000 bags of cocoa beans from the Ivory Coast — traveling on each third of the city’s last operating pier — being unloaded at the Brooklyn Bridge Park in time to meet the deadline.

The Department of Transportation is working to move the cargo to South Street Seaport.

Sad day for single freaks

Dick Zigun is off the market

H OUSTON, Texas (AFP) — New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg named Dick Zigun, the long-time cabaret impresario, as a member of his cultural council.

Zigun, who was married to singer and actress Kate Fischer, is known for his eccentricity and flamboyance.

The move comes as Zigun is in the process of selling his landmark nightclub, the Divine Comedy, to a new owner.

Zigun, who is also the owner of the Coney Island Seashore, said he was pleased with the decision.

After a year, city admits guilt in Hook child’s death

By Gersh Kunzman
The Brooklyn Paper

The Bloomberg administration’s victory in the court’s one-year anniversary of the death of 10-year-old girl in a city stormwater basin in an ill-advised effort to make people work harder led to the arrest of two police officers.

The police were charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Akshata R. Suresh, a 10-year-old girl, who was killed by a police officer.

The city admitted to fault for the accident.

Brazos County Sheriff’s Office

A Brazos County sheriff’s official confirmed the arrest of the two officers.

The sheriff’s office said the two officers were arrested in connection with the death of R. Suresh.

The officers were charged with involuntary manslaughter.

GOT CHOPS

Chef Daniel Wu's Indonesian dishes are exciting fare

By Tina Barry

While visiting a local Southeast Asian restaurant for dinner, I was surprised to see a sign on the window that read, “GOT CHOPS?” The name intrigued me, and I decided to check it out.

Upon entering, I was welcomed by the warm and inviting atmosphere. The menu offered a variety of dishes, including Indonesian, Vietnamese, and Thai cuisine. I decided to try the legendary “ uluslararası” dish, which consisted of spicy beef and the “Firehouse” (shrimp tempura) as appetizers. The dish was beautifully presented, and the flavors were delightful.

As our main courses arrived, I was impressed by the creativity and execution of each dish. The “Firehouse” (shrimp tempura) was not your typical appetizer but rather a Baltic-inspired creation, with the shrimp coated in a mix of Japanese breadcrumbs and served with a side of wasabi and ginger. The “Spicy Beef” was cooked to perfection, with the meat tender and juicy. Each bite was a symphony of flavors that perfectly complemented the other.

For dessert, we shared the “Sesame Crème Brûlée,” which was the perfect end to an extraordinary meal. The combination of sweet, creamy, and slightly bitter flavors was a delightful conclusion to our dining experience.

Overall, “GOT CHOPS?” is a must-visit destination for anyone looking to explore the flavors of Southeast Asian cuisine in a unique and creative setting.

Hipster taqueria

If the name doesn’t give this Williamsburg haunt away, then let me explain. The “10” in Tacodilla is — you guessed it — tacos. Prepared by two Angelinos, Kitchen co-owners Dija and Daniel Wu, two downtown chefs have brought their favorite L.A. street food to the Brooklyn area. The name Tacodilla is a combination of the words “taco” and “tortilla,” which perfectly describes the vertical menu of “deliciously drool-inducing tacos.”

The menu is divided into “tacos,” “tostadas,” and “burritos.” Each item is individually priced, with a range of $4.50 to $12. For example, the “Taco de Carne Asada” ($7.00) is filled with tender, slow-cooked beef and served with a side of cilantro and salsa verde. The “Taco de Pollo” ($7.00) features grilled chicken and is topped with fresh tomatoes, lettuce, and avocado. The “Burrito de Pollo Chipotle” ($11.00) is a spicy and satisfying option with grilled chicken, chipotle rice, and black beans.

Tacodilla distinguishes itself from other Mexican restaurants in the area with its focus on fresh, high-quality ingredients and a unique presentation. The tacos are served in a “Tacodilla box,” which is a trendy, Instagram-worthy container that adds a fun touch to the dining experience.

Tacodilla is a must-visit for anyone looking for a delicious and authentic Mexican experience in a hip Williamsburg setting.

Laughing in terror’s face

Foundry’s ‘Major Bang’ is fine send-up of post-9/11 culture

By Drew Pisaia

It’s as if the Twin Towers are still casting a shadow over everything going on below—ever-present reminders of the events of September 11, 2001, and how they changed the world.

The serious nature of the subject may have been the reason why Foundry Theatre’s production of “Major Bang,” which premiered on January 28, was so well received. The play, directed by Harriet S. Messel, explores the post-9/11 culture, with references to the Iraq War, the current administration, and the media’s role in shaping public opinion.

The cast, consisting of a group of diverse characters, includes a mix of faculty members, students, and other performers. The play tells the story of a group of people who are struggling to come to terms with the events of 9/11, and how they have shaped their lives.

The play’s central character, played by actress Debra Winger, is a former journalist who has been struggling to come to terms with her role in the events of 9/11. She is joined by a group of other characters, including a former soldier, a former nun, and a former terrorist, who all have their own stories to tell.

The play’s themes include the media’s role in shaping public opinion, the impact of the Iraq War, and the struggle to come to terms with the events of 9/11. The play is a powerful reminder of how the events of 9/11 have shaped our world, and how we continue to grapple with their impact.

The play was well received by both critics and audiences, with many praising its bold and thought-provoking themes. The play is a must-see for anyone interested in post-9/11 culture and its impact on our lives.
I mean, really, why can’t you just build a park?!

Lexy Funk

Brooklyn indictment — that purveyor of pug dogs but who can turn out a smartly dressed 6-month-old puppy — is making its rounds in Brooklyn. Lexy Funk, the 2-year-old Brooklyn dog, is wearing a new dress for the holidays.

Lexy Funk is the brainchild of Israel and Sarah Funk, who are planning a holiday party for their own 6-month-old puppy, Lexy Funk. The couple said they are planning to throw a holiday party for Lexy Funk, the 6-month-old puppy, at their home in Brooklyn. The Brooklyn Papers

The death of Joan Maynard, who was the first black woman physician, from Weeksville, has been largely forgotten by American history, long buried in a family of extraordinary individuals with no name.

Electoral College system

The electoral college system is a relic of the past, but it is still in use today. The system is supposed to ensure that each state’s voice is heard in the presidential election, but it has been criticized for being undemocratic and outdated.
